BECKER WITNESSES BARE BRIBERY PLOT

Luban Exposes Attempt to Make Him and Margolies Retract Their Testimony.

INTRIGUE TO HURT WHITMAN

Conspirators Use Name of Senator Frawley, Whom Dummy Represents.—Dictograph Record Made.

Two witnesses who testified against Charles Becker at his trial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal have made affidavit that handsome rewards were offered them to induce them to retract their testimony at the trial and swear that District Attorney Whitman "framed up" Becker. Statements from these two witnesses repudiating their testimony were actually in hand when Mr. Whitman learned of the plot to discredit him and blocked the whole scheme. The attempt is charged to men who represented themselves as agents of Lieut. Becker.

This information reached THE TIMES through one of the witnesses who retracted his testimony under promise of a money consideration.

The attempts to thwart the prosecution, according to the information which THE TIMES obtained began immediately after Becker was convicted of murder. The methods, it appeared, were the boldest of the underhanded practices known in criminal life. Money was held out as the bait, and the alleged agents of Becker talked of large amounts. One of the affidavits divulging the whole plot stated that a man who said he was a Becker agent asserted members of the Police Department were being assessed for the Becker defense.

According to the affidavits, $10,000 was promised to the witness, Morris Luban, for recantation, and $2,500 was offered similarly to another witness, Max Margolies. Another $10,000 was to go to Morris Luban and Margolies if they succeeded in getting the witness Louis Kruse, the waiter, to testify in favor of Becker. Luban and Margolies wavered and were tempted to take the money. In fact they dickered for more, and the prices agreed upon were in the nature of a compromise. Kruse could not be induced to listen to the offers of money.

The money actually passed, according to the information, was in the way of "money on account for expenses" and "salary" and amounted to less than $500. It sufficed to give Luban and Margolies a rollicking trip to Buffalo and to make them live most comfortably during the three weeks that the negotiations were carried on.

Elaborate arrangements to maintain secrecy were made. A special system of signals was devised for use in conversations over the telephone. The names of the participants were never spoken. Every man was known by a letter in the alphabet.

Dictograph Record Taken.

There was an intimation on the part of some of the plotters that a dictograph record would be produced at the right time and that this record would show no wrong had been committed. A TIMES reporter tried to get this alleged record but was unsuccessful, nor could he get assurances of its existence. A representative of Becker admitted knowing something about the retractions but denied all interest in the affair and insisted no wrong had been sanctioned by any one connected with Becker.

Private detectives figured in every chapter of the alleged conspiracy. They followed the witnesses, they followed the District Attorney's men, and one set of detectives followed other detectives. At one time, there were no fewer than three sets of detectives all shadowing the same band of men. Double dealing and treachery ran through the whole affair. One of the principals found after he had been tempted by a man whom he believed his friend, that he was really playing into the hands of an enemy.

The name of State Senator Frawley, Tammany leader, was used as a lure. The real Senator had nothing whatever to do with the case, but a dummy, whom the principals addressed as "Senator Frawley," gave Luban and Margolies assurances that they would get their money if they signed the affidavits, and further assured the witnesses that they were not committing crimes in accepting money for their affidavits. Luban thought for a while that he was talking to a real Senator. The influence of Tammany Hall, he thought, was behind Becker and would assure the success of the project.

Underlying the whole scheme was an attempt to "get something on Whitman." To portray the District Attorney as an ambitious man who did not stop at anything in his effort to send Becker to the electric chair and expose the police system—that was the motive said to be behind the machinations. An attempt was under way, it was said, to get Gov. Glynn to institute an investigation of the alleged manner in which witnesses were cajoled or browbeaten into testifying against Becker. Private detectives shadowed the District Attorney's men and his witnesses.

According to the story told by Luban, neither he nor Margolies swore to any statement. They merely signed them, he insisted, and if the statements were put in the form of affidavits, Luban insisted, they were falsely sworn to. Luban said that he and Margolies lost their nerve when the negotiations were nearly completed, and consequently did not get the lump sums which had been promised. They went to the District Attorney to tell all that they had done, but found they were too late. All their movements had been reported to Mr. Whitman fully a day before they decided to give themselves up.

Shay Warned Whitman.

Joseph A. Shay, attorney for Becker, told a TIMES reporter yesterday that he had heard of the negotiations, and that he had warned Mr. Whitman of what was going on just as soon as he heard of it. On behalf of his client, he said Becker had absolutely nothing to do with the negotiations. Mr. Shay spoke highly of Mr. Whitman, and said he wanted to nip in the bud the plan to discredit the District Attorney. He denounced Luban and Margolies, and gave no credence to their stories.

Mr. Shay sent word of the negotiations to the District Attorney's office through a former Assistant District Attorney, but District Attorney Whitman had learned of the scheme before Mr. Shay warned him.

Luban was found in a restaurant in Bleecker Street. He was incensed over statements Mr. Shay had given out about him. Mr. Shay had recalled that the Court of Appeals discredited Luban and had stated that he would not use Luban as his witness if he had a chance. The attorney, in newspaper interviews, also asserted he had been approached by representatives of Luban, who desired to know what they could get for testifying for Becker. Mr. Shay's published statements, Luban said, had

KILLS GIRL AND MAN.

Chauffeur Then Holds Police at Bay, but Finally Surrenders.

PEABODY, Mass., April 3. — Pearl Frost, housekeeper for Walter P. Hills, and George Le Fave, a chauffeur, who had been paying attention to her, quarreled to-day, with the result that both the young woman and her employer were shot and killed. Le Fave, after holding a squad of policemen at bay with a revolver, was placed under arrest charged with murder.

The shooting occurred at the Hills home. Le Fave had called to see Miss Frost, who received him in the dining-room, while Mr. Hills conversed with Chester Brown, a neighbor, in the sitting-room adjoining.

Soon loud tones were heard from the dining-room, then sounds of a scuffle, and Hills hurried to investigate the trouble. As he opened the door three shots were fired and Miss Frost fell to the floor dead. According to the police, Hills rushed toward Le Fave, and a moment later was shot three times, the weapon being held to his right temple when the first shot was fired. His right arm was broken and a finger of his left hand was shot away. Hills lived about an hour.

Brown, when he heard the shots, ran to the police station nearby, and a small squad of officers reached the house quickly. They were met at the door of the dining-room by Le Fave, who, they said, pointed the revolver at them, threatening to shoot if they advanced. After a parley he was prevailed upon to put the weapon aside and was taken into custody.

Jealousy is believed to have led to the shooting of the woman. She was 20 years of age. Hills was 56 and a widower.

BRYAN OUT OF CAMPAIGN.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., April 3.—The failure of William J. Bryan to appear at the Democratic rally for James J. O'Byrne, the Congressional candidate, kept down the crowd at the high school to-night to 1,000. Congressman Carter Glass of Virginia and J. Harry Covington of Maryland were the speakers.

Congressman Glass confined his remarks to the tariff and the new currency law. He said that trade was much better in Paterson, and the silk mills were working overtime because of the new tariff. He predicted that there would never be another panic, saying that the new currency would put all fears at rest.

Congressman Covington said:

"All over the United States the people have their eyes on this New Jersey district. If O'Byrne is defeated they will take it as an indication of a break in the line of Democracy. Stand together and show the people that Democracy means the same thing to-day as it did when Wilson was sent to Washington."

Mr. O'Byrne made a short speech. Ex-Judge Frank Van Cleve presided over the meeting.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 3.—Dudley Field Malone, who was to have shared the honors with Secretary of State Bryan in two speeches for James J. O'Byrne, Democratic candidate for Congress, opened the meeting in the Passaic High School this evening. Owing to the illness of the Secretary of State, Congressmen Glass and Covington were sent here.

The meeting was presided over by N. Carrington Cabell, Judge of the Passaic District Court. Mr. Malone talked about the reduction of the tariff and the currency law.

A typewritten question was handed to Mr. Malone in which he was asked if he favored the policies of President Wilson and how, as an Irishman, he regarded the attitude of the Administration on the present Panama tolls question.

The speaker said that until he could be convinced that President Wilson's motives, his patriotism, the breadth of his vision, and his respect for his country's honor were defective, he would stand by him and support him on the tolls question and all other policies of the Administration.

GET TRUNKFUL OF DIAMONDS

London Dealers Pay $5,000,000 for 900,000 Karats.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, April 3.—A great diamond deal has just been completed by L. Breitmeyer & Co. of London, who have bought German Southwest Africa uncut diamonds to the amount of 900,000 karats for approximately $5,000,000.

Other large firms in England and on the Continent have been competing for the diamonds, which are of moderate size and in bulk would almost fill an ordinary traveling trunk. They will be forwarded to England in parcels labeled according to the size of the stones.

The estimated value of the rough diamonds found in German Southwest Africa in 1913 is $60,000,000. The stones, which are sold through the Government, are found on the shore, where they are knocked into shape by heavy winds, which cause the sand to rub against them. After a gale they can be found on the surface of the beach.

MAYOR INDICTED.

Terre Haute Jury Returns a Bill Against Roberts for Voting Frauds.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 3.—Mayor Don M. Roberts, on trial here on charges of election frauds, and five of his political associates, were indicted by the Grand Jury late to-day on charges of conspiracy to hire persons to vote more than once at the last election and to register falsely. Two indictments were returned against each.

The new charges against Mayor Roberts were the result of testimony by witnesses for the State who told of being hired by him to bring repeaters to the voting and registration booths. Two testified that they had been induced to register more than once, while another witness said that at Mayor Roberts's direction a number of repeaters had voted in a local option election in this county.

Those indicted besides Mayor Roberts were: Richard A. Werencke, Prosecuting Attorney of Vigo County; Philander Long and Hilton P. Redman, attorneys; Sidney T. Onict, Assistant Superintendent of Police, and John F. Nugent, former President of the Common Council. Each were held under bond of $1,000 for trial.

The State continued to introduce evidence from the registration books, showing large numbers of falsely entered names.

BRITAIN TO MAKE A PANAMA EXHIBIT

Official Arts and Crafts Objects from Ghent to be Transferred to San Francisco.

IT MAY COST $500,000

Government Expected to Modify Its Previous Decision as Resul. of Committee's Work.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, April 3.—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent is able to assert as practically certain that Great Britain will be officially represented at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The plan that will be followed will be to send to San Francisco the arts and crafts exhibits which were shown last year in Ghent and which will be seen in Paris when King George and Queen Mary go to the French capital. It is estimated that the cost of this official representation of the British Government will not exceed $500,000, instead of the $1,250,000 which was the estimate upon which the Board of Trade based its calculations when the decision not to participate was arrived at.

It is more than probable that many British firms will arrange to co-operate with the Government when it becomes known that official representation at San Francisco has been decided upon. So, altogether, English arts and manufactures are likely to make a good showing at the Golden Gate.

The Governments decision may be announced when a deputation of the British committee formed to obtain a reversal of the policy of non-participation obtains the interview with the Premier which it requested recently. The political events of the last fortnight prevented the Premier from fixing a date for the reception of the committee, and in a certain sense this was lucky. Had Mr. Asquith received the deputation last Monday, for instance, it is just possible that he would have had to express his polite regrets and inform the deputation that, in view of the cost of representation, the matter required further consideration.

If he had been in a humorous mood he might have made a joking reference to the difficulties of his Chancellor of the Exchequer, who faced a problem dealing with a record budget of expenditures, amounting to more than $1,000,000,000, of which the sum of upward of $250,000,000 was required for the navy alone. Mr. Lloyd George, he might have intimated, might reasonably object to his difficulties being increased by the reversal of a decision which had been reached by the Board of Trade on grounds which were not political, but entirely commercial and financial.

Effect of Budget Statement.

"Commercial Britain had sufficiently shown its disapproval of the Board of Trade's decision; but the financial argument remained strong. During the week, however, it has ceased to be so potent a consideration. The financial year which ended on March 31, has shown a surplus of nearly $3,750,000, despite supplementary expenditures of $16,850,000, which the Chancellor of the Exchequer was not in a position to provide for when he made his last budget.

"Mr. Lloyd George's estimates of revenue for 1913-14 were $974,125,000. These were criticised a year ago as oversanguine, but the results show a revenue for the year of $991,214,485. With the additional millions falling into his hands, Mr. Lloyd George, it is confidently believed by those in a position to know the Chancellor's mind, will waive any possible objection he might have had to the vote of a sufficient appropriation to insure an adequate British representation at San Francisco."

It is consequently considered practically certain that when Mr. Asquith receives the British Panama Committee's deputation his answer will be highly favorable, even if he does not announce a definite decision to participate officially in the Exposition.

Will Have to Notify Germany.

There may be some delay in making a definite announcement, owing to the necessity of communicating the British Government's decision to the German Government. It will be remembered that the two Governments entered into an agreement to abstain from exhibiting. This understanding has been misrepresented in some American quarters as having been dictated by political considerations. It is entirely non-political, and binding only to this extent, that either Government, in case it wishes to change its mind, is required to notify the other of its intention in sufficient time to obviate any appearance of one Government having left the other in the lurch.

The high authority from whom THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent obtained his information expressed the utmost confidence that no serious difficulty in the way of British participation in the fair need be apprehended from the agreement with Germany, which latter country, he suggested, would doubtless decide to follow England's example.

Mr. Asquith will probably be unable to receive the British deputation till after Easter, though it is just possible that he may find time to do so during the week after April 8 if the East Fife election is uncontested; but even if definite arrangements for British participation are not completed in time to permit Mr. Asquith to make a definite declaration, the official announcement will not be long delayed on this account.

SENATE VOTE SHOWS WILSON'S INFLUENCE

Confirmation of Daniels, 36 to 27, Sign That It Will Yield to President on Tolls.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Another indication of the President's influence over the Senate not without a bearing on the pending tolls repeal bill came today, when the nomination of Winthrop Moore Daniels of New Jersey as Inter-State Commerce Commissioner was confirmed by a vote of 36 to 27. Last night Democrats were in despair, and to-day Mr. Overman of North Carolina suggested to the President that he withdraw the nomination in order to avoid a flat rejection. This the President refused to do, and some Democrats who had been inclined to oppose Mr. Daniels voted for him rather than offend the President in what he was understood to consider as almost a personal matter.

The fight on Mr. Daniels was purely academic. As a resident of Princeton, N. J., he had been known for many years to the President, and his appointment was at the President's own instance.

Nine members of the Senate, headed by Senator La Follette, openly revolted against proceedings behind closed doors to-night after the executive session in which the Senate confirmed the nomination of Mr. Daniels.

Senator La Follette declared on the floor that he proposed to defy the rules of the Senate in future and discuss publicly legislation not affecting foreign relations, and later it was announced that Senators Bristow, Cummins, Clapp, Kenyon, Norris, Jones, and Gronna (Republicans,) and Poindexter, Progressive, would maintain the same attitude.

The revolt created something of a sensation, and there was much speculation as to the effect it would have upon future executive sessions. The general opinion was that there would be no attempt to take action against members who disregarded the rule of secrecy.

Among the opponents of tolls repeal there was evidence of a disposition this afternoon to connect in some way the shift of votes in regard to Mr. Daniels and the coming struggle over tolls. But the analogy was not drawn clearly. The plain fact, however, was that Mr. Wilson won over a reluctant Senate in this case, and will also be able to do so in regard to tolls.

Senator Shields of Tennessee, a member of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, is counted among the Democrats who will oppose repeal. On the other hand, his colleague, Luke Lea, who has differed with him on patronage, issued a statement declaring flatly for repeal. Mr. Lea said:

"I am heartily supporting the President in his effort to have the canal toll exemption repealed. I am opposed to all subsidies. The canal toll exemption is but the old ship subsidy, which the Democrats have always opposed and the Republican have always favored.

"There has been a Government railroad operated in the Isthmus of Panama now for several years, and no one has advocated that the Government should carry freight on it for American shippers without charging them. Congress has passed and the President has approved a bill authorizing the construction of a railroad in Alaska, and yet even no friend of subsidy has had the temerity to advocate free transportation over that railroad to American shippers.

"It is true the Democratic platform contains a provision in favor of exempting American coastwise vessels from tolls, but it is also true that it contains a plank against subsidies of any character. These two planks are inconsistent, and the Democratic convention could not have meant to declare both for tolls exemption and against subsidies. In construing the platform as to which plank is binding, we must take into consideration what has been the time-honored tradition and policy of the Democratic Party, and we find that it has always opposed subsidies and special privilege."

A concerted effort is being made by Republican Senators to unite against the President's repeal policy on the ground of political expediency. Democratic Senators who are championing the President's cause assert that they welcome this movement, confident that it can have no other effect than to solidify the Democrats and aid in assuring success for the Administration. These Democrats, while admitting that five of their number cannot be induced to abandon their opposition to the bill, insist that there is every indication that all other majority Senators eventually will support the bill. They also are assured of support for the measure by some of the Republican Senators, despite the effort of some of the majority to unite against the President. Such Republicans as Senators Root, Lodge, Burton, and McCumber are counted upon as unalterably opposed to toll exemption for American ships, and with these votes the Administration leaders retain their confidence that nothing can prevent ultimate victory for the repeal bill. One Republican Senator who will vote against the repeal bill said to-day that he was confident the Administration had the votes to carry out the repeal and that nothing would change the situation.

A bill authorizing the President to contract with American-registered steamships and steamship lines using the Panama Canal was introduced to-day by Representative Edmonds of Pennsylvania. Under it tolls on American ships would be remitted for a period of ten years, the amount of such tolls to be payable out of the Treasury every six months, and the American ships would be required to carry mails of all kinds without charge to the Government.

The contracts would be with first-class vessels trading between the eastern and western coasts of the United States and Mexico, Central and South America, and subject to all existing or future laws. Proof would be required that these vessels were not railroad-controlled.

TAYLOR HOME BURNS, THE LOSS $500,000

Family of Banker Waters Had Just Moved Into House of J. R. Keene's Daughter.

Fire which started in the basement of Mrs. Jessica Keene Taylor's Summer home at Cedarhurst, L. I., at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, destroyed the house and the valuable library and art treasures which it contained. The loss was put at $500,000. G. Janson Waters, a banker and broker of 30 Broad Street, had moved into the dwelling with his family from his town house, at 515 Madison Avenue, yesterday morning. He lost several thousand dollars' worth of his effects in the fire.

The fire started with an explosion in the boiler of the heating apparatus. A heavy gale fanned the flames, and when firemen arrived from Cedarhurst and Lawrence smoke and flames were pouring from all the windows of the three-story brick and stucco building. The members of the Waters family fled with their servants, leaving behind them, among other things, $15,000 worth of jewelry, belonging to Miss Ruth Waters, which she had spread on her dressing table before the explosion.

The first firemen to arrive found their light apparatus inadequate for dealing with a fire of such magnitude, and they sent for help to Inwood and Woodmere. At 6 o'clock, another explosion shook the house and the flames leaped through the roof. Flames and sparks from the burning building withered the branches of tall trees yards away from the house. At 7 o'clock the heavy hardwood floors of the building crashed to the celler, where they burned fiercely.

Hundreds of persons came from miles around in motor cars to watch the fire, but the intense heat drove them back in a wide circle from the immediate vicinity of the burning dwelling.

Mr. Waters said that Mrs. Taylor and her father, the late James R. Keene, had spent years and thousands of dollars in collecting the library, which was destroyed. Valuable antique rugs and paintings were lost also, he asserted.

Some pieces of statuary and several paintings, which servants saved after the fire started, were piled on the lawn and afterward taken to places of safety. Mr. Waters said that these represented but a small percentage of the valuable objects in the house. After watching the flames sink down in the ruins, the Waters family took the 10 o'clock train to New York.

MASON HOME DESTROYED.

Fire Started by Defective Insulation in Dwelling in Passaic.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 3.—The home of Mrs. Victor L. Mason, at 175 Pennington Avenue in the heart of the finest residential district of Passaic, was destroyed by fire at 10 o'clock tonight. When the fire started, probably because of defective insulation of electric light wires, Mrs. Mason and her three children were attending a dance at Smith's Academy, and the servants had left the house.

Charles S. H. Johnson, President of the Passaic Board of Trade, and I. W. England, the Vice President, who were attending a meeting at the home of Christian Bahnsen, opposite the Mason home, were the first to see the flames. They believed that Mrs. Mason had gone out, leaving her children in the house. Although the flames had then gained much headway, Mr. Johnson and Mr. England broke down a door and made their way to the bedrooms on the upper floor. Crawling on their hands and knees they searched the rooms and did not withdraw until they were satisfied that no one was in any of them. By that time several of the neighbors had entered the building and they assisted Mr. Johnson and Mr. England, who were overcome by smoke into the open air.

The damage to the house was estimated at $17,000, and although much of the furniture was carried out, it is believed that $7,000 worth was destroyed. The building was owned by George K. Rose, of New York, formerly a member of the Passaic Council.

Mrs. Mason is the widow of Victor L. Mason, once private secretary to Secretaries of War Alger and Root and a friend of ex-President Taft. He was killed on May 13, 1912, while making an aeroplane flight at Brooklands, England, as a passenger, with Edward Fisher, an aviator.

SAVES FAMILY FROM FLAMES

Firemen Shake Hands with Courageous 16-Year-Old Girl.

Miss Rose Cohen, 16 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cohen of 545 Glenmore Avenue, East New York, saved the lives of her two small brothers and two sisters at 4 o'clock yesterday morning in a fire that consumed the lower part of the family's two-story cottage.

Mr. Cohen, a furrier, is in the West. Rats started the fire in the basement by chewing on matches. The flames spread rapidly and cut off the escape of the mother and her six children and Joseph Cohen, her nephew, who were sleeping on the second floor.

"There's only one way out that I see—by one of the back windows," said Miss Rose to her cousin, Joseph. "I'm going to jump down on the porch in the back. Then drop the children to me." She had carried her little sisters—Gertrude, four years old, and Norma, six, to a rear window. Then she dropped fifteen feet to the roof of the porch. Her cousin lowered the children to her and she caught them all safely.

The firemen, after they had put out the blaze, shook hands with the girl. "You ought to be one of the outfit," they told her.

Miss Rose said, "No, thank you; I am studying to be a wireless operator and don't want to be a lady fireman."

INDICT CAPT. COLLINS ON WOMAN'S CHARGE

SCHOOLMA'AM HIS ACCUSER

Miss Elizabeth Lauterbach Charges Him with Larceny of $165 After She Gave Him Draft.

Charles Glenn Collins, once a British Army Captain, who was divorced by Natalie Schenck, later Mrs. S. Osgood Pell, is facing trial here on the charge of stealing $165 from a woman. The facts became known yesterday when the District Attorney's office here sent to Baltimore a warrant for Collins's arrest there on an indictment charging grand larceny.

Collins tried three times to elope with Miss Amelia Wheeler, daughter of Samuel Wheeler, the sewing machine capitalist. Miss Elizabeth Lauterbach, who laid the complaint before Mr. Whitman's office, is a friend of the Wheeler family.

In Baltimore, Collins is now facing trial on a charge of having passed a bad draft for $25. He is out on bail. If the charge against him is dismissed, or he is acquitted, he will be extradited to New York and tried here on the other charge.

Miss Lauterbach is a school teacher in Cranford, N. J. She met Collins, it is said, at the home of Miss Wheeler in Baltimore. In the Winter of 1912-13 Collins came to New York and went to live at the Ritz-Carlton. That season he met Miss Lauterbach many times, she said. He took her to theatres and dined with her, and, she asserts, she thought he wished to marry her.

When school closed last June Miss Lauterbach came to New York to prepare for a trip to Europe to spend her vacation with her parents in Breslau. Out of her savings from her salary she made a deposit for her steamer tickets, going and returning, and put the remainder, $220, in a draft.

According to the story which Miss Lauterbach told Assistant District Attorney John M. Minton, Jr., Collins assured her he would cash the draft for her and instructed her to make it payable to "William H. Smith," who, he said, was his secretary. Smith testified before the Grand Jury that he was not Collins's secretary, but that he indorsed the draft at Collins's request.

Miss Lauterbach failed to hear from Collins, she charged, until she communicated with him, when he said that he would have the money in a few days. "I was a little short," she quoted him as saying, "and had to use the money myself."

When sailing day arrived, the school teacher had not received the money. Capt. Collins met her and told her he didn't have the money. He advised her, she charged, to recover her deposit, and gave her money enough to make up the price of a ticket one way. He promised her, she said, that he would send the money over to her by the Mauretania so that it would arrive before she did.

Miss Lauterbach waited in vain for the money. Her vacation ended and she was forced to borrow money from her parents for a return ticket. When she arrived here, she went to see Mr. Minton and caused an indictment to be handed up.

In spite of the assertions of Collins's lawyers and friends that the charge was "framed up," the District Attorney refused to drop the case. It will be prosecuted vigorously, it was said, regardless of the outcome of the Baltimore case.

The third attempt of Collins to elope with Miss Wheeler was on March 18, when it was arranged that they meet at New Freedom, Penn., where he awaited her with a motor car. Detectives employed by Mr. Wheeler caught her at Harrisburg, Penn., and Collins waited in vain. Collins is 33 years old and Miss Wheeler is 30.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 3.—All efforts to ascertain the whereabouts of Miss Amelia Wheeler, daughter of Samuel Wheeler, the sewing machine man, proved fruitless to-day. Search for her centred in the office of Mr. Wheeler at 180 North Dearborn Street, and the home of Miss Eliza Rumsey, a relative, at Cass and Huron Streets. Chicago relatives were said to be guarding Miss Wheeler to prevent a fourth effort on her part to escape and marry Charles Glenn Collins.

Collins was arrested here several weeks ago charged with fraudulent check transactions in Baltimore and was turned over to the Baltimore authorities.

ADRIFT SIX DAYS IN BOAT.

Four Survivors of Schooner Reach Philadelphia on Battleship.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.—Four survivors of the three-masted schooner Hattie Simpson, which sank in mid-ocean, arrived here to-day on board the battleship Michigan.

When the schooner went down off Cape Lookout on March 21 Capt. Strong and three other members of his crew lost their lives. The four survivors saved themselves by swimming to the small boat which had broken adrift. For six days and nights they battled with high waves and many times their tiny craft was nearly capsized.

The only food they had was raw fish, and rainwater was used to quench their thirst. On March 27 the steamship Caracas, New York to La Guayra, hove in sight and made the rescue. All the men were exhausted. They were later transferred to the battleship Michigan, which brought them to this port. The survivors are Frank Hasalem, mate; John Marrianna, Charles Nelson, and John Fulmer.

REALTY MAN HELD AS THIEF

Woman Charges J. F. Dorthy Defrauded Her of $11,000.

John F. Dorthy, a real estate dealer, with offices at 115 Broadway, was locked up in the Greenwich Street Police Station yesterday charged with grand larceny. He was arrested on a warrant issued by Magistrate Appleton March 18. Mrs. Margaret McIsaac of 4,307 Richardson Avenue, the Bronx, charged him with the theft of bonds and mortgages valued at $11,000.

Mrs. McIsaacs was not at her home last night. She and her husband, John McIsaac, live on the second floor of a two-story frame house.

SUBMARINE IN PERIL.

British C-2 Hits Gunboat's Propeller in Rising After a Dive.

LONDON, April 3.—While rising after having been submerged during a sham attack off Harwich to-day, submarine C-2 struck the propeller of a gunboat.

The periscope and part of the conning tower of the submarine were torn away by the impact, and only the coolness of her officers and crew prevented her from sinking.

NEW TRIAL FOR CINCOTTA.

Sent to Sing Sing on Conviction of Blackmailing Caruso.

A new trial was granted yesterday afternoon to Antonio Cincotta by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn. Cincotta was convicted of attempting to blackmail Enrico Caruso, the opera singer, threatening him with death unless he turned over $15,000. Insufficiency of evidence was given as the ground for a new trial.

Cincotta was sentenced to prison for not less than seven years nor more than fourteen years.

MILITANTS EXPLODE BOMBS.

Slightly Damage Glasgow Church—An "Arsonette" Arrested.

GLASGOW, April 3.—Three bombs were exploded by militant suffragettes to-day in an attempt to blow up Belmont Church in this city. The explosions, however, did only slight damage to the building.

The caretaker of a large vacant mansion near Rutherglen, three miles southeast of Glasgow, to-day captured a militant suffragette found hiding in a cupboard in the cellar of the mansion. The woman was locked up by the caretaker until the police came and arrested her.

They arrived too late, however, to prevent the escape of several other suffragettes in the building, who, in their hurried flight, left their cloaks behind them.

Search of the mansion disclosed bottles containing oil, cotton, wool, matches and other inflammable material which had been placed evidently with the purpose of starting fires.

DR. PEASE ACTIVE AGAIN.

Arrests Smoker in Evening Clothes at Subway Ticket Window.

Dr. Charles G. Pease of 101 West Seventy-second Street last night caused the arrest of Milton P. Jackson, a Deputy Surveyor of Customs, of 105 West Seventieth Street, on a charge of smoking in the Subway station at Seventy-second Street.

Mr. Jackson had just concluded a conference with Alderman Niles R. Becker in the Sherman Square Hotel and was in evening clothes. He had just purchased his Subway ticket when Dr. Pease, who had been standing near the ticket window, placed his hand on Mr. Jackson's shoulder and said:

"You are under arrest."

Many people about the ticket window became excited. Mr. Jackson, embarrassed, asked why he was under arrest.

"For smoking in the subway," Dr. Pease said.

"Very well," said Mr. Jackson quietly.

Dr. Pease called Patrolman Hartwig and prisoner, policeman and doctor went to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station. Alderman Becker gave $500 bail for Mr. Jackson's appearance in court to-day.

TWO DROP DEAD AT FIGHT.

Aged Man and Woman Collapse at Sight of Street Row.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 3.—Patrick Eagleton, 70 years old, and Mrs. Dennis Arseneault, 60 years old, dropped dead from fright in the street this afternoon when they were watching a three-cornered fight between Martin Niederberger, a chauffeur, and Stanley Orutt and Charles Bannon, employes of a Niagara cereal company.

Orutt and Bannon had been distributing samples in Leicester earlier in the day and called at the home of Walter Watson. Mrs. Watson said one of the men insulted her, and Niederberger, her chauffeur, boarded a trolley car and followed the men to Spencer. He found them in the trolley waiting station. After a shoving and Mr. Eagleton collapsed on the sidewalk, dying before a doctor could be called. Mrs. Arseneault sank to the floor of the waiting station during the row, and she was dead before help could reach her.

CLUE TO McCARRICK BOY.

Atlantic City Woman Writes That Missing Child Is Alive.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.—"Warren McCarrick is alive. I am certain of it. I can't tell you why, but I will tell the child's father."

This statement in a note received today by City Treasurer McCoach from Mrs. Jacob Richards of Atlantic City sent James McCarrick, the boy's father, hurrying to the shore. He met Mrs. Richards and started back here late tonight, leaving the police and detectives in ignorance of what he had learned.

Mrs. Richards said she heard two men talking about the boy while riding on a train from New York to Atlantic City several days ago. She refused to repeat the conversation in her letter or over the telephone.

Another demand for a ransom was received by the McCarricks to-day, the writers this time demanding $7,000 for the return of the boy. The detectives believe the letter to be a "fake."

JOHN BURROUGHS IS 77.

Naturalist Celebrates His Birthday in New Rochelle.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., April 3.—John Burroughs, the naturalist and author, celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday to-day as the guest of Dr. Clara Barras at her home in Seventh Avenue, North Pelham, and by visiting some old friends in New York City. He has just returned from Florida and Georgia, where he spent the Winter writing essays on natural history and philosophy. While he was in Florida he was the guest of Thomas A. Edison at Fort Meyers, where Henry Ford, the auto manufacturer, was a guest also.

"Oh, I suppose I have to have birthdays occasionally," said Mr. Burroughs to-night. "This is my seventy-seventh, and I have never felt better in my life. Dr. Barras is very kind, and has invited me to her Swiss chalet again. This immediate spot is wild looking, and just suits me. To-morrow I shall leave for my home at West Park, on the Hudson. I will stay there until July, and then I shall go to my old home in the Catskills for the Summer. I was born there, you know. I expect to publish a new book this year. It will consist of essays on natural history, some speculative and others philosophical."

VILLA LEADS NEW ATTACK ON FOE

AIMS TO CAPTURE VELASCO

HUGE GAIN FOR REBEL CAUSE

But Mexico City Still Denies Defeat —Tampico Also Likely to Surrender.

JUAREZ, Mexico, Saturday, April 4.—Gen. Villa left Torreon yesterday afternoon to take charge of his troops at San Pedro, where they are reported to have brought on an engagement with the remnant of the Federal force under Velasco who escaped from Torreon Thursday.

This information was given officially last night, and it was added that the rebels were attempting an enveloping movement. It was said that the fighting continued last night.

Special to The New York Times.

TORREON, Mexico, April 3.—Peace reigns in the midst of the wreckage of war in this captured stronghold of Huerta's northern army.

After six days of almost continuous uproar of battle has come an uncanny silence on the streets and hills where 20,000 engaged in combat to the death. To the south and east Villa's best cavalrymen are relentlessly hunting the remnant of Velasco's army, which escaped last night from the city it could no longer hold.

Ortega, the "lone wolf of the revolution," and Hernandez, are leading the pursuit, and have been on the heels of the fleeing Federals all day. They have orders to take Velasco prisoner at any cost of men or mounts.

Almost the only noise that breaks the city's silence to-day has been the sound of a volley that tells of the fate of captured irregulars of Velasco's force of defenders.

Villa gave orders that none of the followers of Orozco, who later went over to Huerta, should be spared, and the edict is being carried out to the letter. The rebel leader regards them as traitors, and says that they must meet the fate of all traitors.

The other captive soldiers, some of them driven to battle by the flats of officers' swords or impressed from prisons, are to be spared, for men are needed to repair the railroad line, to bury the dead and bring in the wounded.

How many of the Federals were killed or wounded in the siege, how many were executed, and how many made their escape in the final rush out of the city no one will ever know. Velasco began his valiant defense of the city with 12,000 men; he left with less than 2,000, and many of these are dropping on the desert from the fatigue of the fight or the wounds they received.

Villa also suffered heavily, and his losses will likewise be countless, as he keeps no muster roll.

The unknown dead of both sides are scattered all over the flats by the river, on the hills where the artillery was posted, and in the canyon where Velasco made his last stubborn resistance to the rebel onslaught. There are many scattered about in the houses and through the side streets. All will be disposed of quickly for fear of an epidemic.

Idolize the Victorious Leader.

Villa, the conqueror, took luncheon at the Hotel Salvador to-day after two weeks of soldiers' fare, mostly beans and tortillas. His hair was uncombed and his face unshaven, but he smiled through his black, uneven teeth like a boy who had obtained the toy he wanted.

In the eyes of his devoted followers this man, who crossed the Rio Grande an outlaw only thirteen months ago with three mules, a sack of maize flour, and a half-dozen men, is cheered as the military genius of modern Mexico. They expect him to take Saltillo, in Monterey, and then move on triumphantly to the Mexican capital.

All the resources of modern warfare were used to stop Villa's southward march. Trained fighters who had been drilled by the best military men in Mexico opposed the rebel host, most of whom knew nothing of military formations or tactics, military order, or anything but native skill in shooting. Yet the fighting machine of Huerta went to pieces before the resistless attack of the army led by the ex-brigand.

The fighting here since Sunday has been almost uninterrupted. Repulse after repulse was suffered by Villa and his men, but they always returned to the fray.

It was 10:20 o'clock last night that the remnants of the garrison, left behind by Velasco in the Canyon del Guarache, to the south of Torreon, surrendered to Villa. There was a trumpet call of victory from the Hill of the Cross. This was the signal for a rattle of rifle fire, a salvo of cannons from Sierre de la Pila, across the Nazas. Then the whole rebel army took up the celebration, many of the men after a brief jubilation, falling exhausted where they were.

Seven Rings of Dead.

On the Hill of the Cross, after the fighting was over, lay the impressive evidence of the unyielding bravery of the victors. Seven rings of slain indicated the successive high water marks of the furious conflict waged during the early part of the battle for possession of this hill and its cannon which had carried death to the assailants in the plain below.

The drunken, victory-crazed rebels, who went up the streets in their search for loot found the dead piled high behind barricades in the crooked highways. Many of the bodies had been reduced to charred masses by the Federal fighters, who were forced to face the living as they dragged the dead from behind their intrenchments.

At the intersections of cross streets great gashes had been cut in the s breech of his beloved gun, and a red line bisected his face from a little hole no bigger than a pencil, where a Mauser bullet had lodged.

In every corral, outhouse, and storage building the dead had been piled deep to get them away from the firing line, for fear of causing contagion to the men who still fought on.

Everywhere in the city were indications of the hand-to-hand fighting that prevailed at times after Benavides's brigade entered the town. Bodies were hacked with machete wounds.

Assaults Made by Night.

By The Associated Press.

TORREON, Mexico, April 3.—Strewn with the dead and wounded of six days of fighting, this city was occupied by the rebels last night on the heels of the fleeing Federals. In all the fighting no foreigner was killed or injured.

Assaults on the city began in force last Friday. At first Villa attempted to attack the Federal positions in daylight, but these proved costly, so the days were spent in cannonading and the nights in assaults.

Positions were taken and lost time and again. Several night attacks sent the Federals scurrying from strong positions, but at daybreak, the captors would be compelled to abandon them under the strong artillery fire, much of which is said to have been directed by French and German gunners.

Losses have not been compiled, but Gen. Villa estimates his own losses at 500 killed and 1,500 wounded and the Federal loss at 1,000 killed and 2,500 wounded, with an unknown number of prisoners.

Villa thinks the Federals whom his cavalry are pursuing to the south form but a small remnant of the Federal force, whose loss, he says, is almost complete. All the subordinate generals have not yet reported, however, and until they do just how many were captured cannot be accurately stated.

A Four Mile Battle Line.

The battle line was four miles long, and the field was determined by three great hills, formed like a carpenter's square, at either end of which lay the towns of Gomez, Palacio, and Torreon.

There were about 10,000 men in each army. The Federals had fortified the hills with rifle pits, trenches and barbwire entanglements. The nature of the ground made it difficult to recover the wounded and many of them died of thirst and hunger or lack of attention, where they fell. Automobiles were used in rescue work, but they could not ascend the hillsides.

Some of the fiercest fighting occurred in the hills south of Gomez Palacio, and west of Torreon. It raged with great fury in the Canyon de Guarache, where the Federals made their last desperate stand and from which they finally fled, followed by Villa's horse. Twice the rebels took two of the hills, only to lose then, but all the time the attack was becoming more formidable as the soldiers, attacking from all sides except the west, fighting from house to house, drew the circle closer about the enemy.

A hundred small encounters occurred intermittently in the streets or over the possession of some favored roof, but the roar of cannon was almost continuous.

Armored Trains on Both Sides.

Both sides used armored trains. These, with big guns mounted, would suddenly appear around an elbow of one of the hills, discharge a broadside, and then retire. Early in the attack on Gomez Palacio the trains ventured out at the same time and a lively exchange of shots ensued, like a naval engagement on land.

The Federals made use of huge rockets which were shot to a great height, exploded in the air, and letting down a hail of buckshot.

On the fourth day of the fight, the intense suffering from heat and thirst was relieved by a rain, thought to have been brought on by the heavy firing.

During the battle, scouts brought word that Federal reinforcements from Monterey were aproaching on the east. Gen. Herrera was sent against them and later reported that he had sent them scurrying into the hills.

Great supplies of food, ammunition and artillery and large stores of cotton fell into the rebel hands by the capture of the city.

HARASS FLEEING FEDERALS.

Pursuing Rebels Have Caught Up with Foe, Villa Reports.

JUAREZ, Mexico, April 3.—The rebel pursuing force this morning engaged the rear guard of the fugitive Federals at San Pedro, twenty-six miles east of Torreon, killing 100 and capturing 123, according to a report received from Gen. Villa this afternoon.

Nothing was received to-day from Villa about the capture of Torreon to supplement his brief bulletin of last night.

Greatest interest here centres in definite information as to the number of Federal prisoners taken by the rebels. In his bulletin last night Villa said the Federal losses were 12,000 dead, wounded, and prisoners, and it was assumed the he meant that most of these were prisoners. This would indicate a rout of the Federals so great as to be almost unbelievable.

Among the prizes of war taken in Torreon were four large guns, 1,000 shrapnel and thousands of rifles.

The path of the escaping Federals is marked with their abandoned arms and cartridge belts.

EL PASO, April 3.—Federal sympathizers in this city to-night said that they had information of the effect that the Federals who escaped from Torreon last night numbered 8,500. As they estimated Velasco's force at 9,000, this would indicate that the Huerta forces lost 5,500 in dead, wounded and prisoners.

The Federals believe that Velasco and the remnant of his army will attempt to join with the Monterey garrison, said to number 4,000. Gen. Pablo Gonzales, the rebel leader operating in that section, is believed to have a force of 3,000 men.

BORDER CALM AFTER DELIRIUM

Hysterical Outburst at Juarez Lasted Far Into the Morning.

JUAREZ, Mexico, April 3.—After the hysterical outbursts last night that greeted the news of the fall of Torreon, this city was preternaturally calm today. It was the calm sleep after a fever, for anxiety over the issue of the campaign has been little less than a fever for the last week.

Never in all its history since the Madero revolution of 1910 has Juarez gone so nearly mad with enthusiasm as it did when a foot messenger from military headquarters ran through the streets last night shrieking that Torreon had fallen. Men embraced each other wherever they met. Bells in the old Mission of Guadalupe were set ringing. Khaki clad soldiers woke from their sleep in the barracks to cheer, and then began to fire their rifles into the air. Portly dressed officials, high in the Carranza administration, threw their arms around unwashed soldiers in the streets and yelled their delight. The municipal band, routed from their beds, paraded through the streets playing the national hymn, and serenaded Carranza until the Supreme Chief was weary of the music.

The silent gentleman with the dyed mustache who spins the marble at the roulette wheel in the Juarez Monte Carlo, conducted by Villa's officers for the benefit of the rebel treasury, seemed the only person who was not excited. When the crowd of players suddenly deserted him on the sound of the bugle call of victory, he gave the marble another whirl from sheer force of habit, but none returned. He bought himself a sandwich in the rear of the hall, and when he went to pay for it found that both the cashier and the cook had deserted with the rest.

Victory Makes Gamblers Richer.

In an hour, however, play was faster and more furious than ever, for holders of Constitutionalist money early realized that their currency had suddenly increased in value, and they were somewhat richer than before.

While ordinary saloons and resorts were closed, the Gato Negro (Black Cat) restaurant with its cabaret remained open, and this was made the centre of demonstrations, but without disorder. The place was crowded to the doors with civil and military men of all ranks.

Only One "BROMO QUININE."
Whenever you feel a cold coming on, think of the full name, "LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE." E. W. GROVE'S signature is on box. 25c.—adv.

In all stages of dress, men crowded in to embrace friends and toast the conquering General whose name was on every lip.

El Paso citizens, aroused from their slumbers, thought another attack was being made on Juarez. The shouts of the soldiers mingled with the discharge of rifles. Some bullets fell on the American side of the river, and one struck the roof of F. E. Neff's home, crashed through the roof and fell into a room of the house.

Americans, hatless, coatless, and in all manner of attire, rushed to the bridges in automobiles, on foot and in street cars to see what was happening. Reserve guards were called out to hold the crowds back at the bridges. Hosts of Federal sympathizers were there and they turned back crestfallen when they learned the cause of the racket, which did not finally cease until way along in the morning.

CARRANZA SEES TRIUMPH.

Supreme Chief Flooded with Congratulations—Message to Villa.

JUAREZ, Mex., April 3.—Gen. Carranza received congratulations to-day from all parts of the United States and Europe on the capture of Torreon. He sent this message to Villa:

"I have received the message in which you communicate to me the capture of Torreon, from where the remnant of the defeated Federal garrison left under cover of darkness.

"I heartily congratulate you and your officers and soldiers for your persistent courage in the eleven days of battle, which brought, as the result, the capture of this great Federal stronghold. I lament deeply the loss of so many of our valiant comrades.

"With brilliant triumph brings nearer the definite accomplishment of our cause with which we shall erase the stain that any army of traitors and assassins has cast upon the honor of our country."

When Gen. Carranza was asked the significance of the capture of Torreon, he replied:

"It is of the greatest importance because it sets us free to concentrate the major portion of our forces around the more central cities of the republic still held by Huerta, with the knowledge he no longer has a northern army worthy the name.

"Of course, I cannot disclose our future military plans, as Huerta, although he had not proved himself a good soldier, would surely take advantage of the information.

"As for recognition of our Government by the United States, I have nothing to say, because that is not depend on me. I expect to remain in Juarez several days longer, after which I will establish my headquarters in Chihuahua. We have not definitely decided, but I expect to meet Gen. Villa in that city.

"With the capture of Torreon we have communication by rail all the way to Durango and the outskirts of Zacatecas, which is in the very heart of the republic. We also have wire communication as far south as the territory of Tepic, and I receive daily reports from our advance guards in the vicinity of San Luis Potosi. On the east I am in daily communication with the forces within a few miles of Tampico and near Saltillo and Monterey."

Asked when a report on the Benton case might be expected, Carranza said that the commission appointed to investigate had not finished its labors.

"The inquiry was postponed because it was necessary that Dr. Lara, one of the commission's surgeons, should be at Chihuahua to assist in caring for the wounded," he said. "Some work has been going forward, however, for we are going into every detail of Benton's life."

WANT CARRANZA RECOGNIZED.

Movement Started in El Paso—Rebel Finance H[illegible].

EL PASO, Texas, April 3.—The effect of the rebel victory at Torreon was felt here in a stiffening of the market for Constitutionalist money, and the beginning of a movement to organize foreigners owning property in Mexico to appeal to Washington to recognize the Carranza Government.

The latter idea originated with ex-Gov. George Curry of New Mexico, but having put the matter in the hands of leading Democrats to work out, as they promised to do, he expressed a desire to serve in the ranks.

Mr. Curray said he was convinced that, as recognition of Huerta was out of the question, the time had come for foreigners to lend such aid to the Carranza revolution as would help it to a speedy conclusion. Telegrams sounding Senators and Representatives on the proposed propaganda were sent to Washington to-night.

"The fall of Torreon puts the dollar mark on Villa and Monclova money," said J. S. Curtis of this city. "The value of paper money lies in the promise to pay, and the fall of Torreon has marked the culmination of a long series of events which promise to establish and make good Villa's and Carranza's written guarantee, which is signed at the bottom of all paper money they have issued.

"To date the Mexican Constitutionalist Government for their joint account have issued $60,000,000 of paper fiat currency, and for eight months the merchants along the United States border and Northern Mexico have gambled on the promises of Villa and Carranza to pay."

NOT LOST, HUERTA SWEARS.

Denies Torreon's Fall—Angered by Story Involving Carothers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 3.—The Mexican Government has intercepted a telegram from George C. Carothers, American Consular Agent, who is with Villa's army, to Secretary Bryan, stating that the rebels had suffered some temporary reverses near Torreon, but would ultimately capture the town.

It is asserted here that he further suggested that Secretary Bryan use his influence with the press to have stories printed to the effect that Villa had captured the place, and also that Gen. Carranza give out similar reports.

President Huerta is said to be greatly incensed over this story, since Mr. Carothers holds his exequatur from this Government. He thinks it unfair that Carothers should assist the rebels, as the report says, and urge the State Department to act as a publicity office for the rebels.

President Huerta to-day emphatically denied that Torreon had fallen, swearing by all that was holy that the report was untrue and had been circulated by Carrancistas on the border without any basis. He made these statements to friends, not to newspaper correspondents, refusing to make any statement for publication.

MEXICO CITY, April 3.—The Federal Capital was ignorant to-day of the fall of Torreon before the rebel attack. None of the newspapers contained any intimation of the Federal defeat. On the contrary, all gave assurances that Gen. de Moure had won a great victory over the rebels near Torreon while the Constitutionalists were trying to prevent him and his army from joining Velasco.

Gen. Velasco is alleged by the newspapers to have repulsed Villa's army, which is said to have "retired definitely and is attempting to reorganize in Jiminez."

The Minister of the Interior, Ignacio Alcocer, stoutly maintained that the Government was giving itself no concern about the immediate safety of Torreon but admitted that there had been no direct communication with that city.

Señor Alcocer offered as proof of his statement that Torreon had not been captured a telegram from Luis Comaduran, emigration chief at El Paso, dated April 1, authorizing a denial of all stories that Torreon had fallen.

News of the loss of Torreon spread rapidly among foreigners during the day, arousing much speculation as to what would be the result of the Government's defeat.

The opinion was expressed on all sides that the loss of Torreon was a blow from which Huerta would never recover, since it meant the annihilation of the best army he had been able to muster. If the rebels captured the Federal artillery, as seems likely, it was conceded that they have gained an enormous advantage, since the best of everything at the command of President Huerta had been used in this campaign.

Gen. Blanquet to-day denied flatly that there was any truth in the report of the fall of Torreon. When shown messages telling of Villa's success, he smiled and said:

"Yes, this is not the first I have seen of this character. I have been receiving them for a week, mostly from friends in the United States who began generally by saying 'This may interest you.' Their information was untrue, as is this.

"Not only does Gen. Velasco continue to hold Torreon, but the rebels have stopped their attack. I do not presume to say that they will not return to the attack, for probably they will do so.

"At present the rebels are holding positions in the north of Torreon, and between Gen. de Moure, who is at San Pedro, and Torreon. Gen de Moure's force is in good shape. It has been reinforced by Gen. Joaquin Maas, and I expect it to be further strengthened today by Gen. Carlos Garcia Hidalgo."

According to Blanquet's advices up to last night the Federal force under Gen. De Moure had defeated the rebels who were trying to check their advance toward Torreon, the rebels had been driven back to Sacramento, west of San Pedro, and the Federals were pursuing and killing many of them. Gen. Blanquet added that the troops under Gen. Maass, which left Saltillo on Tuesday, arrived yesterday at San Pedro, 1,800 strong.

While there is a large element of the population who are believed to sympathize secretly with the revolution and who, it is thought, would hail with delight news of rebel successes, they are being kept in doubt regarding events in the north. There is a strict censorship and also a lack of wire communication.

To-day being a church holiday, the natives devoted themselves to a celebration in honor of Santa Anita. Many participated in excursions to the country, in picnics, and in home gatherings. The Government offices were closed, as well as many business houses.

Says Maass Reached Torreon.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The Mexican Embassy here to-day was still claiming victory for the Federal forces at Torreon. The Chargé, Señor Algara, to-day gave out this statement:

"An official dispatch signed by the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Señor Lopez Portillo y Rojas, has just been received, giving an account of the crushing defeat of the rebel forces under Villa at Torreon. Gen. Maass, who left Saltillo several days ago with large reinforcements, has arrived at Torreon. Gen. de Moure's column has reached San Pedro de las Colonias, where a decisive defeat was administered to the rebel forces sent out to oppose his advance."

WIDE AREA WON FOR REBELS.

And Many Federal Garrisons Endangered by Torreon Victory.

JUAREZ, Mexico, April 3.—With the taking of Torreon the rebels now control an immense wedge-shaped portion of Mexico, with the point resting on Torreon, 500 miles south of here and the top extending along the American border from Nogales, Ariz., to a point just west of Eagle Pass, Texas. At Piedras Negras, known as Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass, there is a Federal garrison, but it does not now constitute a menace to the rebels.

The States now subject to the rebel arms are Chihuahua, Sonora, (except the port of Guaymas,) most of Coahuila, Durango, and Sinaloa.

Yesterday's victory is thought to assure the capture of Saltillo and Monclova in Coahuila, and Monterey, the key to the State of Nuevo Leon. Mazatlan, the Federal port in Sinaloa, will also be put in a precarious state by Torreon's fall.

Thus by his successful campaign of the last month Gen. Francisco Villa has practically assured rebel control of most of Northern Mexico and gained for himself the reputation of being the foremost soldier of the country.

Gen. Pablo Gonzales has for months harassed the Federal forces at Monclova and Monterey, and now that the Torreon army is loosed officers here assume that the Federals will evacuate these points and attempt to retreat to Tampico, the seaport of Tamaulipas. This State is sprinkled with rebel troops all along the possible line of retreat, so that the Federal garrisons are already threatened with capture.

TAMPICO READY TO YIELD.

Fletcher Cables Report That Federals Will Surrender City.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Constitutionalist outposts were within five miles of Tampico and were preparing to attack the city, was the report made by Rear Admiral Fletcher in a cable message to-day. He added that he had private advices that the Federals were preparing to surrender or abandon the city without resistance.

Admiral Fletcher reported that the commanding rebel officer at Laguna Puerto planned to attack the town as soon as his 1,000 effective under Gen. Castro, who was working toward the coast on the San Luis Railroad. At Laguna Puerto were 1,000 well-mounted Constitutionalists, according to the Admiral, and the Constitutionalists' lines were said to extend east to the coast from Canalote on the Tamesi River. The Admiral estimated the Federal garrison at Tampico at 1,000.

Admiral Fletcher stated that there were already at Tampico "sufficient forces to cope with the situation or with anything apt to arise."

Admiral Fletcher's report was received with keen interest. For months the Constitutionalists have been besieging Tampico, hoping to gain possession of a deep-water port on the Gulf of Mexico. The latest attempt was conducted by Gen. Aguilar, but in that case and in other attacks that followed the rebels were kept back by the fire of the Federal gunboats.

The capture of Tampico was thought essential at first to obtaining easy entry for munitions of war required for the Constitutionalist army. The proclamation of President Wilson, permitting the exportation of arms and ammunition into Mexico, diminished the importance of the port in that respect, but recently the financial needs of the rebels, with the knowledge that the Customs House receipts at Tampico were heavy, led to a renewal of the siege.

LIND TO RETURN IN MONTH.

Expects to Go Back to Vera Cruz After Few Weeks' Visit Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, April 3.—John Lind says that he will leave for Washington on the Mayflower within three days. He asserts that his trip has no political significance and that he will return in a month's time if his presence is not required sooner.

Mrs. Fletcher and her daughter will probably accompany Mr. Lind on the Mayflower.

The Chester is now coaling for a trip to Tampico.

WOULD STOP HOSTILITIES.

Gen. Brezena Plans for a Conference at Washington.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—To arrange for a conference at Washington to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Mexico is the mission of Gen. G. C. Brezena of Vera Cruz, who arrived yesterday on his way to Washington.

"The plan has not yet taken definite shape," said Gen. Brezena, "but it will be one that will receive the support of the world powers and the approval of the contending forces in Mexico, who, we are satisfied, will gladly accept any pretext that will insure early peace. Non-combatants are behind this move.

"The war is playing terrible havoc, and the better class of Mexican citizens believe that nothing will be gained by a victory by either side.

"We are trying to work out a scheme for restoring peace at a conference beyond the republic's boundaries, where the conferees will be free from political influences. Washington was chosen for this purpose, for there we will be in close touch with the representatives of the foreign powers and this country's national representatives."

Gen. Brezena served in the Mexican Army under President Portirio Diaz.

ASSAILS PRESIDENT ON MEXICAN POLICY

DEFENDS MONROE DOCTRINE

Still Vital, Not a Dead Shibboleth, Savants Hear—Plea for Pan-American Entente.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., April 3.—Violent attacks on President Wilson's Mexican policy by Henry Lane Wilson, former Ambassador to Mexico, and Representative Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming aroused prolonged applause at the meeting of the Academy of Political and Social Science held here to-night.

Mr. Mondell charged that President Wilson had shown a personal prejudice and individual ill-will toward Huerta such as had never been equaled in the world's history. He prophesied that if the American Government persisted in weakening the Mexican Government in this way the point would be reached when we must use the strong arm to restore order.

Ex-Ambassador Wilson contended that recognition of Huerta was the only feasible solution of the problem. If this was done, peace would be restored within ninety days, he said. He continued:

"Intervention might be tried, but the people are rightly opposed to this. We might also advocate and assist in the creation of a new republic in the troublesome district of North Mexico, but this will not relieve the situation permanently. Huerta is as much President among the Mexican people as Woodrow Wilson is possessor of the American title."

Expressing his belief that the President was actuated only by the best of motives, Mr. Wilson added:

"He thinks he is right, but I know he is wrong. The Government expects to overthrow Huerta by means of Villa, a bandit whom it has created, tried, and sent to prison for one year on charges of pillaging the homes of American residents.

"Gen. Carranza is a man who turns his back while things are being done. These are the men with whom idealism must walk hand in hand to get constitutionalism in Mexico. Such a success will result only in failure; the Government under Villa would stand just as long as we stay back of it, and when we decide to let Mexico assume her own Government we would have the task to do over again.

"In refusing to recognize the provisional Government of Gen. Huerta and by withholding moral assistance enabling it to restore peace and order in Mexico this Government contributed to the discredit of a Government which was endeavoring to restore peace and order to Mexico, and which had the support of 98 per cent. of Mexican public opinion and of American and all other foreign colonies as well as of European Governments."

"Other errors of the Washington Administration," he said, "were the dispatch of the Lind mission; the attempt to discredit European nations accredited in Mexico, and to misrepresent their attitude with reference to recognition; attempting to destroy the financial credit and standing in Mexico; lifting the embargo on the importation of arms and ammunition into Mexico, and in the assumption that constitutional elections could be held in Mexico."

President Wilson's announcement of the new doctrine that Governments owing their origin to violence would not be recognized by this Government, he said, was also an error for the following reasons:

(a) It was announced before the President had access to the records of the Department of State and the history of our foreign relations, which should have served as its guidance.

(b) It was purely an expression of the President's personal views, being contrary to the traditions and precedents of this Government since its existence.

(c) It was uttered without foresight and without that comprehensive view of its effect in our foreign relations which should have obtained. This is made evident by the inconsistent attitude of the Administration to refuse to recognize the administration of Huerta, and subsequently recognizing the new Government of Peru, where the President had been deposed by violence and was in jail, and the Minister of that land been assassinated, and by the recognition of the Government of Haiti. These inconsistencies subject the Administration to the charge of insincerity.

Regarding the murder of Madero, of which President Huerta has been accused, the ex-Ambassador said:

"The most that may be said of Huerta in connection with this crime, so repugnant to civilization, was that he did not take sufficient precautions to guard against it. Madero was killed in precisely the way it was related, namely, by his guards after an attack had been made upon the automobile, and it may be mentioned here that Madero was being transferred from the guard house in the palace to the penitentiary at the request of the American Embassy, which acted in the matter in response to Mrs. Madero's prayers that more comfortable quarters should be assigned to the ex-President.

"It is believed by a great many honest people that Huerta slew Madero for the purpose of succeeding him in the Presidency. This is a chronological error. Madero had resigned and Huerta had succeeded to the provisional Presidency before Madero was killed. Thus, while Madero was violently overthrown, his death did not occur until after his successor had been chosen."

The real object of the present revolution in Mexico "is not merely to avenge the death of the late President Madero, but is based on social and economic considerations," said Roberto V. Pesqueira, confidential agent in the United States of Gen. Venustiana Carranza in a paper read by his secretary through being called to Mexico by an urgent request from Gen. Carranza.

"The government of the 'mailed fist' or the 'iron hand' can never impose a permanent peace in Mexico," he continued. "Such a peace can be secured only through the adjustment of political, economic and social conditions. To that adjustment the reactionary element in Mexico is opposed, but the Constitutionalist Party is intent on making it effective by armed force."

Mr. Pesqueira declared that there was no need of intervention in Mexico, and regarded suggestions favoring such a move as "emanating mostly from those interested in the restoration of dividends rather than in the restoration of peace." In conclusion, he said that no suggestions for a compromise would be considered by the Constitutionalists.

Henry Clews of New York proposed that Huerta and Carranza be brought together to see if they could not agree on a provisional President, to be appointed and elected, and to effect suitable recognition in some official capacity for each of them.

"Both must realize, though neither will admit it, that if the present struggle keeps up both must lose, as intervention will mean ruin to them," he said.

MONROE DOCTRINE ALIVE.

Not an Obsolete Shibboleth, Political Scientists Are Told.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.—The Monroe Doctrine was described as still a vital principle, not an "obsolete shibboleth," at the annual meeting here to-day of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, which is considering present international relations and obligations of the United States. While the speakers, with few exceptions, were in agreement upon the general principle of the doctrine, there were some variations as to its application.

Rear Admiral Colby M. Chester urged a concert of action among the American republics in a policy of "America for the Americans," which, he said, was indorsed by Admiral George Dewey.

"On account of changed conditions in South America," he continued, "there is a growing disposition on the part of some well-informed Americans to limit the territorial extent to which the Monroe Doctrine should apply to the states that lie to the northward of the Amazon River." In his opinion, it would be better to maintain the original jurisdiction of the Monroe Doctrine, but to recognize the fact that many of the twenty other American republics were no longer the weaklings they were when the policy was formulated, unable to defend themselves, but were now strong enough to share the common defense of the continent, and act in consonance with them in maintaining the political rights of all.

John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Union, advocated a "Pan-American policy," in which each one of the twenty American countries should have the same independence as the United States, so as to eliminate any sense of fear on the part of Central and South American States as to United States aggression. Former Gov. MacCorkle of West Virginia argued that the Monroe Doctrine was necessary to the peace and safety of the United States.

Much spirit was injected into the discussion of the afternoon session by A. Maurice Low, a British journalist stationed in the United States, who was introduced as a speaker who would give the European attitude toward the Monroe Doctrine. Mr. Low said it would be easier to explain the attitude of Europe if Europe knew what the Monroe Doctrine really was. He believed that a nation that assumed protection over other States should also assume responsibility for seeing that these smaller countries carried out their obligations with other nations. In this connection, he said, the Central American republics sneered at Europe, laughed at the United States, and wallowed in anarchy as the result of the Monroe Doctrine. Speaking of Great Britain in relation to the Monroe Doctrine, he said the British "craved no more territory."

Replying to Mr. Low, ex-Gov. MacCorkle said European "earth hunger is not dead." He mentioned the British occupation of Egypt, Italy's recent war in Tripoli, and the serious situation brought about between France and Germany over Morocco. If it was not for the Monroe Doctrine, he added, the weaker of the Central American States might not now be in control of their countries.

Philip M. Brown, Assistant Professor of International Law at Princeton University, formerly in the diplomatic service, urged an international law embodying the principles of the Monroe Doctrine, which would be a fundamental law of independence, of right, and of equality, embracing all the Latin-American States.

The term "Latin America" was a misnomer as applied to the South American Republics, according to Rear Admiral F. E. Chadwick, U. S. N., retired, who spoke on "Iberic America."

"The Spanish and Portuguese races, to which the governing classes in all the republics to the south of us belong," he said, "began as Berbers and remain essentially Berber Moor to-day, scarcely changed at bottom from their relations across the Straits in Morocco and the Atlas.

"It is this lack of comprehension of what race character means that causes our trouble. Until we recognize our ignorance in this regard, until we accept the great fundamental specific temperament and habit of thought and action, we shall be unsuccessful in our relations toward these brother republics."

He declared that the Monroe Doctrine no longer applied to South American States, and that to apply this doctrine in the sense of standing by as a protector was naturally an irritant to a people in whom pride was a predominant characteristic.

Leopold Graham, New York, presenting the Latin view of the Monroe Doctrine, said that the doubts and suspicions of the Latin republics as to the ultimate aims of the United States are accentuated by the extension of the Monroe Doctrine to ends never contemplated by its author.

"It is such incidents as those which have occurred in Mexico, Nicaragua, and in Colombia," he said, "that have led to a growing belief in the supposed desire on the part of the United States to establish a suzerainty over some of the republics of Central and South America.

"The same view of the Monroe Doctrine is that its provisions should be enforced only against those who seek to violate them, and not against those in whose interests they were framed.

"If the Monroe Doctrine of 1823 had not expanded with the lapse of time or taken on new phases with the development of new situations, said John H. Latane, Professor of History at Johns Hopkins University, it would long since have ceased to be of any value, for the exact situation that called forth the original declaration in 1823 could never again arise.

"The Monroe Doctrine is merely a name that Americans have given for ninety years to our Latin-American policy," he said, "which in the necessity of things has undergone changes and will continue to undergo them."

SEES OUR HONOR AT STAKE.

Respect for Treaties More Important Than Tolls, Says Spectator.

LONDON, April 3.—The Spectator, commenting upon the status of the Panama Canal Tolls Repeal bill in the United States Congress, says in an editorial to-day:

"The honor of the United States is now at stake before the whole world. We do not think we shall be charged with affectation if we say that the question whether British ships are or are not to pay more than their share for the upkeep of the canal is as nothing compared with the question whether the United States can or can not be counted upon to accept the obvious meanings of treaties and scrupulously to observe them.

"If the mighty Anglo-American race in the United States, which has received the imprint of Anglo-Saxon character, allows it to be said that the United States does not respect treaties, a crippling blow will have been struck at the best of all Anglo-Saxon traditions. The value of international relations would be changed and the world would be different."

POLICE AT PRINCESS PLAYS.

Report on Blinn's Players Brings Theatre Managers Before Mayor.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Representatives of the Princess Theatre Company have been summoned to appear before Mayor Harrison to-morrow to show cause why the license of the playhouse should not be revoked because of the appearance of Holbrook Blinn's Princess Players in a series of one-act plays of the scarlet variety.

Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, Second Deputy Superintendent of Police, submitted a report on the plays to Chief Gleason which was transmitted to the Mayor.

Five sketches are being produced by the company, which includes Miss Jean Murdock and Holbrook Blinn in the leads. The plays are "Hari Kari," "En Cheabaille," "Any Night," "The Black Mask," and "The Bride." "Any Night" is a melodrama picturing a certain phase of New York life in a sordidly expressive manner.

The company recently came to Chicago after a run at New York.

HELD AS BANK BANDIT.

ALTOONA, Penn., April 3.—Frank Wilson, arrested Wednesday at Wheeling, W. Va., was brought to this city late last night and identified as the automobile bandit who, on March 23, entered the Union Bank here, shot the cashier and a patron, stole $2,883, and then, terrorizing crowds on the street with a fusillade of bullets, made his escape. The identification was made by Chester Burket and Mrs. D. O. Shaver, clerks in the bank.

Clothing and other articles similar to those worn by the bandit in his attack on the bank were found in a boarding house near where the stolen taxicab had been abandoned. The room had been occupied by a young couple who had left immediately after the robbery. Letters left in the room gave the detectives a clue by which they located the woman's home at Salem, Ohio. There they obtained information that led them to Wheeling, where Wilson was taken into custody.

The new vessel is to displace 33,000 tons and is to be an improvement on the Adriatic type.

COPYRIGHT LAW TEST IN HIGHEST COURT

New York Times Petitions for a Review of Proceedings in Amundsen Case.

FIRST CASE UNDER NEW LAW

Question as to When Owner of Copyright Can Resort to Courts to Avert Threatened Piracy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—A petition for a writ of certiorari in the case of THE NEW YORK TIMES, petitioner, against The Sun Printing and Publishing Company, respondent, was filed today with the Supreme Court of the United States. The petition, which relates to the alleged infringement of THE NEW YORK TIMES's copyright of Raold Amundsen's narrative of his discovery of the south pole, was signed by Leventritt, Cook & Nathan, solicitors for the petitioner, and Alfred A. Cook, Harold Nathan, and MAX J. Kohler of counsel.

The case is understood to be the first under the new copyright law, and will be called to the court's attention in the near future.

The petition is for a writ to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit for the purpose of reviewing the proceedings of the Circuit Court in affirming a decree of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, finally dismissing on demurrer the bill of complaint brought by THE NEW YORK TIMES Company for an injunction to restrain The Sun Printing and Publishing Association.

"This case," says the brief in conclusion, "partly because of the celebrity of the distinguished discoverer whose work is involved, has attracted worldwide attention, and international interest attaches to any suit under the International Copyright act. The United States by the act of 1891 and this succeeding act sought to give wide and adequate protection to the rights of authors, whether alien or native.

"The decision now sought to be reviewed gives the copyright law a narrow and inadequate construction, and it is submitted that the importance of the question and of the interests involved justify the review by this court of the decision below, in order to have a final determination of the question as to whether the copyright law adequately protects literary property under the conditions involved, or not."

The principal point at issue is the time at which a plea for injunction against infringement might lie. The Sun Printing and Publishing Company, a corporation of the State of New York, filed a bill for an injunction upon a sealed cover, alleging that such action could not lie before the registration of the copyright in Washington.

"This is the first case under the present copyright law to come before this court," says the brief. "The principal question involved as to when the owner of a copyright can resort to a court of equity to protect his property from threatened piracy is of vital importance not only to the publishers of newspapers, but also to publishers generally throughout the country."

prompted him to break his silence. He would talk, even if it further hurt his reputation.

Morris Luban is 31 years old. He was subpoenaed as a witness for the defense, but turned out to be an important witness against Becker. He testified on Oct. 11 in the Becker trial that he was in the Lafayette Baths shortly before the murder of Rosenthal, and that he heard Becker tell Jack Rose that Rosenthal ought to be "croaked." He also testified that he was on the scene of the murder and in the courtroom he identified "Dago Frank" Cirofici, "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, and "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg as the men who were at the shooting with revolvers.

Luban had been a prisoner in the Newark jail on a charge of forgery, and had been released shortly before the Becker trial. The defense maintained that his release was in consideration of his testimony. Luban, on the other hand, maintained that the defense had framed him up in the Lafayette Baths and that he had been "framed up" on the forgery charge so as to prevent him from appearing for the prosecution. Luban was subpoenaed by the defense because letters purporting to come from Jacob Luban, his brother, who was then locked up, had influenced the Lubans would be good witnesses for Becker. Morris Luban denied that he had collaborated with his brother on any letters.

Luban in a Rage.

In the Court of Appeals decision reversing the Becker conviction Luban was referred to as a "degenerate." There was no testimony to this effect, and Luban was enraged when he read the decision which discredited all of his testimony. He denounced the appellation as an injustice to him.

Max Margolies, 23 years old, was a newspaper tipster and stool pigeon for Becker. He testified that Becker made him swear to false affidavits regarding evidence against gambling places. Thus he admitted that he was a perjurer. He was in Rosenthal's gambling house when Becker made a raid on it, he testified, and saw Becker conversing in a friendly manner with the wife of Rosenthal while the raid was under way. Former Assistant District Attorney Moss, in the Becker trial, said of Margolies, that he was "more respectable than the general run." The testimony of Margolies was not considered material in regard to the murder, but it aided in showing Becker's alleged bad character.

It was on or about April 1, 1913, Luban said, when he was approached in the Criminal Court Building by a runner for a lawyer in Nassau Street. Luban at that time was working for the District Attorney's office as an investigator at $3 a day.

"I was in front of the office of Frank Moss, then Assistant District Attorney," said Luban, "when the runner approached me. He said that he was a friend of Becker's counsel, but he did not mention Joseph A. Shay. He specifically said that the man was not Shay."

Luban said the runner took him to the apartment of the Nassau Street lawyer. Max Margolies was there and so were other persons.

"One of the persons in the room," said Luban, "started to talk business after we had been royally treated with cigars. He said that he would give us $10,000 between us if we changed our testimony and swore that Whitman had framed Becker up. We weren't ready to talk price at that time, although I mentioned $10,000 as the figure. I wanted $10,000 for my own share.

"The man said he wanted an affidavit to the effect that I was coached to corroborate Jack Rose. He said he had a lot of respect for Moss, but wanted to get something on Whitman. He also mentioned Assistant District Attorneys Minton and Rubin. Rubin is now Second Deputy Police Commissioner. He wanted me to swear in an affidavit that I had never seen Becker and Rose together in the Lafayette Baths."

"What did you say?" asked the reporter.

"I said that the money was very tempting, but that I was afraid of the authorities. I did not see any money. I was afraid of marked bills. I was afraid of a frame-up."

Senator's Name Used.

Nothing was accomplished at this meeting, according to Luban, but arrangements were made to meet again in the lawyer's office in Nassau Street. A meeting took place two or three days later.

"Margolies, too, was asked to swear that Whitman had framed Becker up," said Luban. "This time I wanted assurances that there would be no come back. The money certainly was tempting. They mentioned a Senator, a State Senator, yes, a Tammany Senator. They said he would give the assurances and I said that suited me all right."

Luban would not say that they had named Senator Frawley but this was learned later. Luban was introduced to a "Senator" in the lawyer's office on or about April 8, 1913, he said.

"This 'Senator,'" continued Luban, "who didn't turn out to be a Senator at all, was a man of about 48 years, a rather good looking man, dark, about 5 feet 9 inches tall. He looked very intelligent and made a good impression.

"I said I was glad to meet the Senator. Everybody addressed him as Senator. This man assured me there was no fear, and that we would be committing no crime if we made affidavits and accepted money for them. He said he would give me the money in cash as soon as I signed up."

According to Luban, one of the persons in the lawyer's office did most of the talking. This man was quoted as saying:

"I don't care much about Becker, but we want to get something on Whitman."

There was a series of further conferences in the lawyer's office. Luban said $20 a week was paid him and that he was told he was on the payroll of a gas company. He never did any work for this money, he said, and Margolies, who was supposed to be working for a paint company, also got $25 a week.

"In addition, I got $240 in two instalments and divided it with Margolies," Luban declared. This was supposed to be on account, and went for expenses. We went to Buffalo on the money. While these negotiations were going on I got a notion that we were being

$101,290,000 FUND FOR RESERVE BANK

BASED ON DEPOSIT SHOWING

How the Transfer of Funds Will Be Made from Different Classes of Banks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The financial power of the proposed Federal reserve bank to be established in New York City is indicated by an analysis made here to-night, indicating the probable result of the shifting of reserves and probable operation of the new banking law with respect to the banks in New York State.

This analysis indicates that the total payments on account of capital stock subscriptions, transfer of reserves, and surrender of present United States deposits to the Federal reserve bank will be in the neighborhood of $101,290,000. The analysis embraces only the national banks in what will be known as Federal Reserve District No. 2. This district will include all the national banks in New York City, those in the two reserve cities of Albany and Brooklyn and the rest of the national banks outside of these cities scattered through the Empire State.

The analysis is based on the deposit showings of the bank call of Jan. 13, 1914, and the capital, cash, and reserve showings under the last bank call of March 4, 1914, when considered in the light of the requirements of the bank reserve and capital stock requirements of the new Federal Reserve act during the first year of its operation.

It has only been possible to make such an analysis of the probable operation of the act with respect to the banks embraced in the district tributary to the new Federal Reserve Bank of New York City since the exact limitations of that district were disclosed by the Reserve Bank Organization Committee last night. This analysis deals with no banking institutions outside of New York State.

Total of $101,290,000.

The indictment probable payment of $101,290,000 by the national banks of New York State and City is based likewise on the assumption that the Federal Reserve Board soon to be nominated will not require those banks to pay more than 3 per cent., or one-half of their required subscriptions to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York City.

After the first call is made, one-half of the capital stock subscriptions must be paid within six months. This half would amount to $10,319,000 for the banks of the New York district. If the other half is called for later, it would add $10,319,000 more to the payments to be made by the various national banks of New York, and to that extent increase the total payments to $11,609,000.

If the Government, as is possible under the new banking law, should take surplus funds out of the United States Treasury at Washington and place them in the Federal reserve bank of New York City, the banking power of that institution would be further increased to that extent over and above $11,609,000.

The analysis prepared to-night indicates that the national banks of New York State and city would contribute by way of capital $10,319,000, representing half of their required stock subscriptions; by way of transfer of reserves $87,279,000, and that they will probably yield up $2,692,000 in United States deposits to the Federal reserve bank of New York City.

It indicates that the national banks in New York City will pay on account of their stock subscription to the Federal Reserve Bank the sum of $7,455,000; that the nine national banks in Albany and Brooklyn will pay toward stock subscription only $286,000, and that the 433 national banks outside of New York City, Brooklyn, and Albany will pay toward their stock subscriptions the sum of $2,578,000. In other words, about three-fourths of the stock subscriptions will come from the national banks in New York City alone.

The indications are that the reserves required to be maintained during the first year of the new law by the various banks of the New York district will aggregate $78,921,000 on the part of the banks in New York City, $1,789,000 on the part of the nine national banks in Albany and Brooklyn, and that the 433 national banks elsewhere in New York State will maintain a required reserve of $6,569,000 with the Federal Reserve Bank.

A striking feature of the analysis is the indication that none of the banks in New York State will be required to resort to any rediscounting in order to meet the requirements.

Payments by Country Banks.

The total payments to be made by the country banks of New York appear to be $10,245,000. This stipulation can be met on their part without any actual payment of cash, that they will be able to meet the requirements by draft on the reserve banks to the extent of $6,147,000 and by draft on the central reserve city banks to the extent of $4,098,000.

On March 4 last the balances of the country banks of New York with reserve agents amounted to $51,858,000, and the indication is that after making their requirement payments of $10,245,000 the country banks of New York will have a balance of $41,613,000 with their reserve agents.

The total payments to be made by the banks of Albany and Brooklyn will be $8,666,000, of which only $2,519,000 represents what they have to contribute on their own account to the Federal Reserve bank of New York City, while the remainder represents what they will have to contribute on account of country banks.

The new reserve requirements for the Albany and Brooklyn banks will result in a cash release of $5,164,000, and this, with a draft for $3,502,000 on the central reserve banks, will enable them to balance accounts under the new law. After meeting these requirements they will still have a balance of over $10,000,000 with the central reserve agents.

The banks of New York City will make a cash payment of $98,649,000, of which $88,526,000 will represent their payment on their own account to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, while $3,502,000 will represent their payments on account of drafts drawn on them by the banks of Albany and Brooklyn, and $4,098,000 will represent their payment to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York City on account of the country banks throughout New York State outside of the reserve cities.

Even after this has been done there will be a loosening up of $104,981,000 in present reserve requirements of the national banks of New York City. The cash holdings of the New York City national banks on March 4, 1914, representing their lawful money reserve in bank on that date was $325,649,000.

After meeting the new eleven-eighteenths requirement, aggregating $124,019,000, there would be about $201,630,000 released from these cash holdings, of which $96,649,000 would be devoted to the total payments to be made by the reserve city banks, and this would still leave a free balance of $104,981,000 in the cash holdings of the New York City banks.

The analysis of the probable situation with respect to the banks embraced in the New York District and the Federal Reserve bank of New York City is summarized in the following table:

SAY DISTRICTS ARE WRONG.

Spirit of Reserve Act as to Channels of Trade Ignored.

The feeling among bankers in this city yesterday in regard to the delimitation of Federal reserve districts and the location of Federal reserve banks was one of surprise at some of the apportionments rather than disappointment over the allotment of territory to the institution to be established here.

Most of the bankers had expressed themselves, when the Reserve Bank Organization Committee gave its hearing here, as strongly in favor of a large territory and consequent large capital for the reserve bank of New York, in order that it might occupy a commanding position in the eyes of European bankers, and that this city might continue to serve the communities to which its banking affiliations now directly extend.

The questions and observations of the members of the committee, however, made it plain that this argument would have little weight, and it was no secret that the authors of the bill had held as one of their main objects the diminution of the financial importance of this city as compared especially with Western and Southern centres. Consequently there was little surprise yesterday that the territory allotted to this city was no greater than the State of New York.

So far as this district was concerned the surprise was that it had been made up in such a way as to leave out the northern part of New Jersey and the western part of Connecticut, and to include the eastern part of this State. Jersey City, Hoboken, Newark, and surrounding cities do business with the New York City banks and not with those of Philadelphia, the centre of the district to which they are allotted. Bridgeport, New Haven, and Hartford do business here rather than with Boston, to which they are allotted.

On the other hand, it was expected that Buffalo, Rochester, and the country tributary to them would be attached to the Cleveland district. If this division had been made the New York district would not have been materially larger and the size of the reserve bank here would have been little different.

Spirit of Law Violated.

Bankers here could not understand how the committee had reached the decision it did on these points in view of the mandate of the act that "the districts shall be apportioned with due regard to the convenience and customary course of business and shall not necessarily be coterminous with any State or States."

Jersey City and Hoboken banks have been regarded as almost as much a part of the local banking community as those of Brooklyn. Three banks in Jersey City, two in Hoboken, and a trust company in Bayonne actually clear their checks through the New York Clearing House. Hence it was felt that there could hardly be a clearer case of the "customary course of business" than was afforded by this arrangement.

As to the division of the country in general, it had not been expected that the maximum of twelve districts would be established, although it was realized that the political pressure in favor of dozens of cities would be so strong that it would be difficult for the Organization Committee to name fewer than the maximum number. Still, the expectation was that not more than ten, or possibly eleven, districts would be made.

This was especially so in view of the fact that each bank must have at least $4,000,000 capital and the entire amount of capital available, namely, 6 per cent. of the aggregate capital and surplus of the member banks, would be little more than $100,000,000. The larger the number of districts, of course, the smaller would be the territory and capitalization allotted to New York and to Chicago.

In the selection of cities for the location of reserve banks the chief surprises were the inclusion of Richmond and the exclusion of New Orleans. Baltimore, despite its nearness to Philadelphia and New York, was regarded as a much more logical centre of the district south of the Philadelphia district than Richmond. The Baltimore banks have little relation with Richmon, but Baltimore is included in its district. It was suggested that Richmond might have been chosen out of compliment to John Skelton Williams, a member of the committee, who hails from the former capital of the Confederacy.

New Orleans Disappointed.

New Orleans having stood out historically as the great port and the commercial and financial centre of the South, its selection as one of the reserve cities had been generally conceded as natural, not only by bankers here, but by those from all over the country who gathered at the last convention of the American Bankers' Association. It was included in almost every one of the divisions suggested to the Organization Committee at the hearings here.

The selection of Dallas was no surprise, as the committee had indicated that one of the chief Texas cities would be favorably considered.

The views expressed as to others of the districts were that the Pacific Northwest should have had a district apart from that of San Francisco; that Chicago should have had a greater extent of territory, probably at the expense of Minneapolis, and that Cincinnati would have been more central than Cleveland for the Ohio-Kentucky district.

Under the present system there are forty-seven reserve cities and three central reserve cities—New York, Chicago, and St. Louis. The three central reserve and seven of the reserve cities now have reserve banks, but the other forty reserve cities were passed over for Richmond and Dallas, both of which are now classified as country bank cities.

Overtopped by Other Banks.

Bankers here were inclined to scoff at the size of the New York bank, as measured by its capital of $20,687,616. It is exceeded by the capital, surplus, and undivided profits of three national banks and three trust companies in this city, one of which is nearly three times and another nearly twice as large. Conditions will be somewhat the same in Chicago, where the Federal reserve bank will start on the 6 per cent. basis, with $13,151,920 capital, which is exceeded by the capital, surplus, and undivided profits of three local institutions. In Boston there are two national banks and a trust company, each with 50 to 60 per cent. more capital, surplus, and undivided profits than the reserve bank will have, although its territory includes all of New England.

The comment was also made that the second half of the 6 per cent. subscriptions might not be called by the Federal Reserve Board, when appointed, for an indefinite time, so that the reserve banks would have only half the capital named. On this basis, it was pointed out, the entire set of twelve would have only $53,573,735 capital, while the National City Bank alone has capital, surplus, and undivided profits of nearly $58,000,000.

Many bankers were chary of expressing themselves for publication yesterday, for the reason, frankly given, that they believed their opinions were at a heavy discount at Washington.

Alexander J. Hemphill, President of the Guaranty Trust Company, said:

"Considerable disappointment is felt over the number of districts, which is entirely too large. The thing is done now and little can be gained by criticism. Besides, everyone wants to be helpful. New York is lucky in getting its own State."

A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Currency Commission of the American Bankers' Association, when asked how he liked the distribution, said:

"Fine. They have given us the whole State. The division is satisfactory and the New York bank will have sufficient capital."

Otto T. Bannard, President of the New York Trust Company, said the division was purely a geographic and political one, without regard to financial or commercial requirements.

James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce, said:

"A smaller number of districts would have been preferable, I believe, however, that the Organization Committee, with the full data before it, has done the best possible under the circumstances."

HOME STATES FAVORED.

Senator Weeks and Others Criticise Location of Reserve Banks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Among Republican Senators to-day there was an undercurrent of criticism directed at the grouping of the banks under the regional reserve system by the Organization Committee. These Senators seemed to think it odd that in the home States of each member of the committee at least one regional bank was established, while two were given to Missouri, Secretary Houston's State.

The comment that will most nearly affect the Administration came from Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, who voted for the currency bill after making a speech in which he said it promised well for the country. That speech has made Mr. Weeks a welcome figure at the White House, and his charge that the districting has been conducted on a purely political basis will hurt the more on that account. He said:

"It is not difficult for any one to criticise the sub-division of the country into districts or the location of the reserve banks. In fact, it is almost impossible to make an arrangement that some one will not criticise. But I may fairly question the propriety of locating two banks in the home State of one of the members and one in each of the home Staes of the other members, especially when in two, if not three of these cases they are not the natural locations for reserve banks.

"The apparent and confessed attempt to limit the business which naturally goes to New York may properly be criticised, not only because it is unfair, but it is so unscientific that in the end it will not be effective. What would be thought of an English commission trying to reduce the importance of London as a financial world centre, or a French commission taking the same course in the case of Paris, or of a German commission trying to belittle Berlin in such arbitrary fashion?

"The most severe criticism, however, ane one in which I am unqualified, is of the commission tangoing about the country for the purpose of asking people if they wanted a reserve bank. Of course, the local pride of every community would develop the same reply, and this has embarrassed the commission so that it has authorized twelve banks, very materially weakening the system by so doing and developing a system for which there was really no demand.

Another Republican Senator referred to the fact that every tentative list of regional bank cities, compiled when it was thought there might be only five regional banks, included New Orleans, but that the committee, while increasing the number of banks to twelve, had ignored altogether the greatest port in the South. The inclusion of Western Connecticut in the Boston district was also assailed on the ground that that section had all its banking relations with New York.

NEW ORLEANS TO PROTEST.

Business Men Call a Mass Meeting to Demand a Federal Bank.

NEW ORLEANS, April 3.—A call for a mass meeting to-morrow night to protest because New Orleans was not included in the list of regional bank cities was issued here to-day at a meeting of business man and bankers. Those at the meeting to-day agreed that the protest should contain the charge that politics entered into the selection of regional bank cities, and also in defining the districts.

Robert Ewing, Democratic National Committeeman from Louisiana, sent a telegram to President Wilson, in which he said the omission of New Orleans as a regional bank city was indefensible. He ended by saying: "I hope you will use your great influence and have corrected this obvious error."

SLAIN DETECTIVE HONORED BY CITY

Commissioner McKay Orders Police Flags at Half-Mast for Joseph Guarnieri.

HIS NAME ON HERO TABLET

Steps Taken to Aid Family Left Practically Penniless—Funeral Services Monday.

The funeral of Detective Joseph Guarnieri, who was shot to death on Thursday night while attempting to arrest William Horgan in a flat at 1,880 Second Avenue, will be held on Monday morning at 10 o'clock at St. Anthony's Church in Sullivan Street, near Houston. Arrangements were made yesterday at Police Headquarters to pay tribute to the man who gave up his life in the performance of his duty. A large delegation of policemen will attend the services, headed by the full police band, and it is expected that Commissioner McKay and some of his deputies will also be on hand. In addition Guarnieri's name will be placed on the tablet at Headquarters over which is inscribed: "Policeman Who Have Died in the Performance of Duty."

When Mr. McKay heard the full details of Guarnieri's bravery he ordered the flags at Police Headquarters and all of the stations throughout the city, at half mast as a token of the Department's respect. At every station house, also, the desperate gunfight in the tenement, which cost the Department the services of one of its ablest and truest men, was the main topic of discussion. Men who had known the detective personally and others who had heard of his bravery on a former occasion when under fire, joined in their tributes.

The body of the detective was removed to the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Gondolpho, at 61 Sullivan Street, and scores of friends stopped during the day to tender a word of consolation to his widow. Mrs. Guarnieri remained there all day with her three children, Margaret, 6 years old; Ruth, 4 years, and Norma, a baby of eighteen months. She had recovered somewhat from the first shock she suffered on Thursday night when she heard of her husband's death. She had long feared that he would be killed, she said, and often when he was delayed by his duties had watched for him, fearful that word would be brought that he had been injured.

"For he was so brave that he knew no fear," she said, "and I had to be afraid for him."

Guarnieri and his wife had lived at 1,522 Glover St. in Westchester, but Mrs. Guarnieri would not go there yesterday or permit the body to be removed there. She had been courted and won by Guarnieri in the little flat over the grocery store at 61 Sullivan Street where her mother lived, she said, and she wanted to be there now. The church at which funeral services will be held is the one where Guarnieri and his wife were married.

Guarnieri Died Penniless.

It became known yesterday that Guarnieri was practically penniless, due to the fact that he had been forced to spend considerable money for operations in recent months. These operations were necessary because of four wounds the detective had received on July 4, 1911, when he went into the basement of a saloon on Twelfth Avenue to arrest Raphael Gross, wanted for a murderous assault. For seven months he was forced to remain at Flower Hospital and because of the nature of his wounds the surgeons were unable to extract the bullets. From time to time the old wounds caused much suffering and the detective had to seek medical attendance. He was operated on the last time at Flower Hospital only a month ago. Mrs. Guarnieri also been ill and the family removed to Westchester from downtown New York in the hope of improving her health.

In order to aid the widow Commissioner McKay took immediate steps to obtain pension money for her. She will probably receive a pension of $700, or half the pay her husband drew from the department. It was said also that she may receive the sum of $1,000 from the Riot Relief Fund and that those in charge of the Equitable fund for firemen and policemen would receive an official report of the detective's death. Father Francis J. Sullivan, the Police Chaplain, is preparing to send out notices asking for relief for the widow.

There were many stories told about Guarnieri's bravery, and by some he was compared to Detective Joseph Petrosino, who was slain in Italy while attempting to run down members of the Black Hand. Attention was called to the fact that Guarnieri had not drawn his revolver when he was killed. He was known to be fearless, and he held in contempt the class of men he was called upon to pursue.

Horgan, who killed Guarnieri, shot and seriously wounded Charles Moser, a saloonkeeper, of 1,891 First Avenue, on Thursday afternoon. Moser was a witness before the Grand Jury against Horgan's son Thomas, against whom a charge of grand larceny had been lodged. The elder Horgan was shot dead by Lieut. George F. Haerle.

Lieut. Haerle Paroled.

Lieut. Haerle was arraigned before Coroner Feinberg yesterday in the Coroner's Court on a technical charge of homicide for shooting Horgan. He was paroled in the custody of Capt. William Jones of the Fifth District. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, who were originally charged with being accessories before the fact, were dismissed by the Coroner. Later they were arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan in the Harlem Court on the charge of interfering with an officer in the performance of his duty, and bail was fixed at $500 each. Lieut. Haerle testified that Mrs. Fitzgerald had told him no one was in her flat. She replied that she had no idea Horgan was armed, and did not know that Haerle was a policeman.

Thomas Horgan, better known to his friends as "Puggy," was arraigned before Judge Rosalsky in the Court of General Sessions to answer to an indictment founded on the grand larceny charge. He sobbed throughout the proceedings and seemed on the verge of a breakdown. His counsel asked that he be released in the custody of a policeman so that he might attend the funeral of his father, which will probably be held to-morrow. The Judge signed an order to that effect. He refused, however, to reduce the bail of $2,500 which had been fixed when the youth was arraigned before a Magistrate.

Horgan was accused of snatching a pocketbook containing $75 from Mrs. William Greer on March 5, near the saloon of Moser in First Avenue. He was arrested and indicted upon the testimony given by Moser and Detective Guarnieri.

MRS. MORSE BUYS HOUSE.

Purchases Old Holden Estate at Bay Shore for Summer Home.

Charles W. Morse will occupy a fine Summer home this season at Bay Shore, L. I. The old Holden estate, having a large frontage on Montgomery Avenue, one of the fashionable thoroughfares, was purchased a short time ago by Mrs. Morse and title to the property has just passed in her name. The old house has been undergoing extensive alterations during the last few days. A porte cochere has been added, steam heat installed, and other improvements made, making the house one of the most elegant residences in that island resort.

At the time the sale was closed an effort was made to keep the purchase quiet, but the recent transfer of the property revealed the owner.

Fire Ties Up Broadway Cars.

Fire which tied up traffic on the Broadway surface lines for nearly an hour last night started in the basement of a four-story brick building at 316 Broadway, occupied by the H. & D. Folsom Arms Company. The firemen were impeded by several explosions of blank cartridges. The loss amounted to $1,000.

TALK ON PENSION SCHEMES.

Insurance Actuary Discusses Working Girls' "Fool Clothes."

Any scheme of universal old-age pensions to which the beneficiaries were not contributors at any time was denounced as an economic mistake by Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, actuary of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, at a meeting last night in the Church of the Messiah to discuss some phases of pensions for working men and women and the aged.

"Unlike our thrifty ancestors, prosperity and extravagance have made us a nation of spendthrifts," said Dr. Hoffman. "We see this condition of life on every side. Even the working girl, earning $5 to $7 per week, spends one-quarter or more of her income on fool clothes, fool hats, and fool food.

"Some working girls who put their meagre savings in a private bank here in the hope—slender hope though it be—of saving enough to keep them from want find themselves nearer to the poorhouse to-day because of the inefficient banking laws of the State. The people of this country have only to practice proper economy and thrift to provide for any necessity that may arise.

"Statistics show that the majority of the people have no need of a pension for old age, they do not desire a universal pension, and I believe the time will never come when they will need such help either from the State or the Federal Government."

Deputy Commissioner Weeks of the Fire Department suggested that the uniformed force of that department were entitled to a special pension because of the nature of their work. He spoke in place of Fire Commissioner Adamson, who was unable to attend.

"Under the law in the Fire Department a man joining it at the age of 21 or 22 may retire when 41 or 42 years old," said Mr. Weeks. "There is no question but that they should be treated liberally. It is an open question, however, whether they should be retired without disability. Members have retired at 41 years, have come back to work in some other branch of the department, and in addition to their pensions, have drawn full salaries for their work. I do not think this is right or fair."

Lieut. Peter Leyden of Engine Company 220 said the fireman averaged more than 5,000 hours of continuous service each year, or double that of any other city employe or mechanic, and the members were entitled to the pension they now receive.

Dr. Isaac Rubinow spoke of "Social Insurance," Henry E. Jenkins, District Superintendent of the Public Schools, advocated a liberal pension for teachers, and Richard Neustadt favored widows' pensions. Dr. S. Adolphus Knopf was Chairman of the meeting.

WELFARE WORK IN HOTEL.

Movement Follows Dismissals of Men and Women Employes.

An incident in which figured the personality of a handsome elevator starter with a fondness for giving wine parties in his uptown flat, and which resulted in the severance of relations between the Hotel McAlpin and several of its employes of both sexes last week, has led some of the women heads of departments to start a movement in welfare work among the girls who are employed in office and similar positions in the big hotel.

There are between 150 and 175 girls and young women who hold positions in the hotel as telephone operators, stenographers, and clerks, or who do work requiring skill and intelligence of a high order. A meeting of women in executive positions was called by Mrs. A. L. Evans, Superintendent of the floor clerk service, and this was attended by Mrs. Hughes, the manager of the women's floor; Miss Barnes, the housekeeper; Miss Dixon, the head of the front office; Miss Camphausen, the controller; Miss Ruffner, head of the information bureau; Miss Meyer, secretary to the manager; Miss Drouet, head of the publicity department; Miss Baum, Superintendent of the telephone service, and Miss Phillips, the press representative. After a discussion it was decided that work should be undertaken co-operatively along the lines of education and entertainment among the young women employes.

Two committees were appointed to arrange for talks on subjects of interest in the work of the young women, and for entertainments. An address by the chief engineer of the hotel on the building and how to take care of it, and by other experts on the telephone and the telautograph have already been arranged for, while Dr. Anna H. Shaw will give a lecture on woman's suffrage before she leaves for Europe.

The girls will be encouraged to participate in entertainments which will be arranged. Some of them are skilled violinists or pianists and others are good singers. One aim of the promoters of the movement is to mold character and encourage high womanly standards, together with the strengthening of the self-reliance and independence necessary among young women who have to earn their own living.

Woman Employe and $450 Missing.

D. P. Ritchie, proprietor and manager of the Hotel Albemarle-Hoffman, Broadway at Twenty-fourth Street, complained yesterday to the police that $450 was missing from the safe of the hotel. He also reported that a woman employe who had the combination of the safe was also missing.

SCOURING THE SEAS FOR SOUTHERN CROSS

Reports of Sealer's Safety False and It Is Feared She Foundered with 170 Aboard.

U. S. CUTTER JOINS SEARCH

Most of the Missing Ship's Men from Brigus, Cradle of Polar Crews—Ship Newfoundland's Dead 77.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 3.—The report which reached here last night from North Sydney, N. S., that the missing sealing steamship Southern Cross had put into Channel, 300 miles west of this port, having proved to be unfounded, hope virtually has been abandoned and it is believed that the vessel went down with her crew of 170.

It is definitely known through dispatches from Capt. Randall of the Bellaventure, which reached the steamship Newfoundland, that 77 members of the latter's crew perished on the ice floes in Belle Isle Strait, during the blizzard which started on Tuesday and that 112 were rescued, though several of these are likely to die as a result of their two days' exposure.

All the energies of the Government now are being directed to a search for the Southern Cross. The American revenue cutter Seneca, on ice patrol off the Grand Banks, has been asked to join in it, and at midnight the powerful coastal steamship Kyle, which is fitted with wireless apparatus, will set out from here to cruise all the waters where the Southern Cross is likely to have been blown by the last week's variable hurricanes.

The latest of these occurred to-day in the section near Cape Breton coast, where the Bruce and the Lintrose, the two finest ships of the Reid Newfoundland Company's powerful fleet, are held helpless by the ice pack which is drifting against Cape Breton shore before a gale which blew eighty miles an hour for a time during last night and to-day.

If the Southern Cross was blown in that direction Tuesday by the gale then raging and made partial progress back yesterday she would be once more driven westward by the latest hurricane. Such condition, however, implies acceptance of her ability to withstand storms of this magnitude, and concerning this there is much doubt, because she was heavily laden with a dangerous cargo of 17,000 oily seal pelts, likely to shift with the rolling of the vessel, and mid-winter storms in those waters require not alone able seamanship, but the staunchest vessels to withstand them.

The dispatch of the Kyle, however, heartens somewhat those interested in the Southern Cross. Among the latter's crew were some from St. Johns, but mostly all were from Brigus and nearby places in Conception Bay, and if she is lost Brigus will be decimated.

Her master, John Clarke, came from there and had many of his townsmen with him. John Clarke for years was chief mate with William Bartlett, also of Brigus, and member of the famous Bartlett family so prominently identified with Arctic exploration. He is an uncle of Robert Bartlett, Peary's skipper on the Roosevelt, on the famous north pole cruise, and now master of Stefansson's Karluk adrift in Alaskan seas. One-third of the able-bodied seamen of Brigus are aboard the Southern Cross. Another portion are aboard William Bartlett's ship, the Terra Nova, which took Capt. Scott on his ill-fated antarctic trip.

The third division of Brigus men are aboard the Viking with William Bartlett's son. If the Southern Cross has foundered there will be crêpe on virtually every door in that little hamlet.

The Southern Cross, like the Terra Nova, has a polar history. She took engineer of the late Sir George Newnes's expedition with Borchgrevink into antarctic waters some years ago. She was also the vessel in which Sir Ernest Shackleton made his trip to the antarctic.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S DEAD 77.

The Bellaventure Smashing Through Ice with Dead and Rescued.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 3.—The number of the Newfoundland's dead was placed definitely at 77 late to-day, with the further possibility that several of the 112 who were rescued would succumb to the effects of the forty-eight hours' exposure. Arrangements were made to-night for the reception of the rescue ship Bellaventure, which is expected to arrive to-morrow, bringing most of the dead and many of the survivors.

As the recently equipped wireless station for the sealing steamers was partially wrecked in yesterday's gale, communication with the Bellaventure was established to-day through the Furness Line steamer Eagle Point. Two messages were received from her Captain. The first read:

Have aboard thirty-four survivors, five being serious cases. Have also aboard fifty-eight dead. The Florizel and Stephano reported having aboard seven dead and two survivors. We three ships working toward her (Newfoundland) but ice very heavy and tight. My ship was ramming nine hours yesterday to reach floes four miles away, where the exhausted men were. Can give nothing more definite as to when I may be expected until I get her roster. Doing best possible.

The second message, which was received here at 3:30 o'clock, was as follows:

Have just reached steamer Newfoundland and checked figures by her roster. Find she had 189 total crew. Of these 112 are safe, but 36 are on the sick list. Total dead, 77, of which 69 bodies recovered. Remaining 8 lost amid floes.

Am now leaving to proceed to St. John's. Fear slow progress, as ice is heavy and tight. Stephano, which also is lying alongside Newfoundland, will report names of dead.

The only message received so far from the Stephano reads:

Barometer Tuesday gave no sign of storm. Hence our cause of tragedy.

It has been many years since the city has been so stirred over an ocean disaster. Hundreds of people roamed the streets all night, beseiging the newspaper offices, the telegraph stations, the Government chambers, and the Grenfell Institute, where the survivors will be housed. Many in the crowd were relatives or intimate friends of those who sailed a month ago on the Newfoundland.

One of the managers of Bowring & Co. of 17 Battery Place, agents for steamships engaged in the seal fishing industry off the coast of Newfoundland, said yesterday that according to advices from St. Johns this has been one of the most productive seasons in the history of the Newfoundland seal fishery. The Terra Nova, which Capt. Scott used on his expedition to the South Pole, has 28,000 seal skins on board, and altogether it is estimated that 200,000 seals have been killed this season.

Charles Edward Ford Dead.

Charles Edward Ford, auditor of the coupon department of the Bankers' Trust Company, died from heart disease Thursday at his home, 76 First Place, Brooklyn, in his sixty-seventh year. He was employed for several years in the New York Stock Exchange, after which he entered the banking business, forming a connection with the Bankers' Trust Company. Mr. Ford was a trustee of the South Congregational Church of Brooklyn, and active in charitable and educational work.

PAPER IMPORTS GROW.

Total of 237,000,000 Pounds in First Five Months of New Tariff.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Imports of paper for use in the printing of newspapers and books aggregated 237,000,000 pounds in the first five months under the present tariff law, which transferred to the free list printing papers valued at less than 2½ cents a pound and reduced from an average ad valorem equivalent of about 15 per cent. under the old law to 12 per cent. the duty assessed on printing papers of a higher valuation. This total is double that for the corresponding period a year ago. At the present rate of importation the total imports of printing paper in the fiscal year ending June 30 will approximate 535,000,000 pounds, compared with 120,000,000 in 1912.

The aggregate value of imports of articles connected with the paper industry, including, in addition to paper and paper products, pulp wood, wood pulp, and other paper stock, was $55,000,000 in the calendar year 1913. On the other hand, while the annual domestic production of paper and manufactures thereof had risen above $300,000,000 as far back as 1909, the exports in that line during recent years have never exceeded $25,000,000.

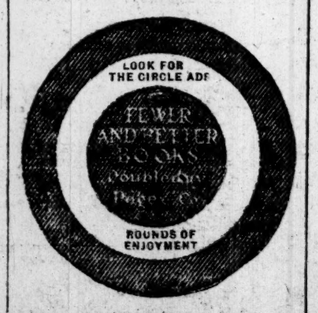
GREEKS ATTACK ALBANIANS.

Fierce Fighting Reported at Koritsa, Which Has Been Burned.

VIENNA, April 3.—A report was received here to-day from Avlona, Albania, that Greek irregular forces were fiercely attacking Koritsa and other towns on the Argyro-Castro and Koritsa line.

Koritsa was reported to be in flames, and many persons were said to have been killed.



RULING ON AMERICANISM.

Guarantee Company Wins on British Interpretation of "Issuance."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, April 3.—The definition of an American legal term caused confusion among the Appellate Judges of the High Court of Justice to-day. Three Judges held three different opinions regarding the meaning of the American expression "date of issuance," which was quoted on an American insurance policy which came before the court.

The President of the court explained that "issuance" was a word originated in the United States, and confessed that it was quite new to him. All the Judges described the word as "of American coinage," but failed to agree as to its interpretation. A search through an American dictionary did not render much assistance.

The incident arose in the course of the hearing of an appeal of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland. The Allis-Chalmers Company of New York, Pittsburgh, Paris, and London applied to the company for a guarantee bond of $5,000 in respect to M. Lochenies, manager of their Paris office, stipulating that the bond should date "from issuance." Owing to the absence of the London manager, who was in America, the bond was not actually taken up or the premium paid until a day or two after the Paris manager disappeared. Lochenies never returned, and later it was discovered that there were defalcations estimated at $55,000. The Allis-Chalmers Company claimed damages under the bond, which the Fidelity and Deposit Company repudiated on the ground of concealment of material facts.

Mr. Justice Phillimore held that the date of issuance was that on which the bond was accepted, and ordered the Fidelity and Deposit Company to pay the Allis-Chalmers Company $5,000. To-day this judgment was objected to by the Fidelity and Deposit Company, and the Appeal Judges eventually reversed it, the President defining the date of issuance as that on which the policy was delivered to the plaintiff, at which time the loss actually occurred.

BIG GERMAN GAINS THROUGHOUR TARIFF

Increased Exports to the United States Disprove Pessimistic Predictions.

IN THIRD PLACE AS BUYER

Probably Only Great Britain and Austria-Hungary Ahead of This Country.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 3.—Reports of declared German exports to the United States for the first quarter of 1914 are eloquently disproving the German contentions that the Fatherland's trade interests would be only slightly, if at all, affected by the new Underwood tariff. The increase in several important districts over the first quarter of 1913 is as high as 40 per cent. The volume of exports of the Berlin district ($4,576,047) is $633,447 higher than that of a year ago. A relatively large increase has taken place in the Hamburg district.

Robert J. Thompson, American Consul at Aix la Chapelle, a district whose figures for the first quarter of this year, $1,541,257, represent an increase of $451,228 over those of a year ago, makes the following observation:

"If, as indicated, the increase for the Aix la Chapelle district is maintained throughout Germany for a year, or even approximately maintained, the United States will be placed third on Germany's list of foreign customers, following Great Britain and Austria-Hungary in the order named. American purchases from Germany in 1914 are likely to run close to $250,000,000.

"These figures should effectively eliminate the argument that the tariff walls of the United States are embarrassing foreign trade—an argument used extensively against German participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Albert Ballin saw these things coming with clearer vision than the opponents of his project credited him with. Considering the distance of the United States, on the one hand, and the absence of a British tariff and the special tariff arrangements between Germany and Austria-Hungary on the other, the United States may be considered Germany's best business prospect and present customer."

WARNS CHINESE MISSIONS.

Government Orders Foreigners to Take Refuge in Sian-fu.

PEKING, April 3.—All the missionaries in the vicinity of Sian-Fu, Province of Shensi, have been ordered to take refuge in Sian-fu, as the brigands have invaded the near-by plains and now are within twenty mile of the city.

A Government force from the Province of Shansi is proceeding to the affected district to relieve the situation.

Japan's Dowager Empress Worse.

TOKIO, April 3.—The condition of health of the Dowager Empress Haruke of Japan has become slightly worse. She has been for some time suffering from angina pectoris.

LIMOGES WANTS TO EXHIBIT.

Pottery Manufacturers Withdraw Opposition to Panama Fair.

LIMOGES, April 3.—The Limoges Chamber of Commerce, which has been actively opposing official French participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition owing to the undervaluation suits brought by the American Treasury Department, has now changed its mind. It sent to-day to the Ministry of Commerce and to the Foreign Office an expression of the hope that the French Parliament would vote an appropriation for French representation at San Francisco. It requested that the question should not be delayed or obscured by the Limoges controversy.

The Chamber of Commerce points out that five French exporting houses have already obtained recognition from the United States Government of the justice of their contentions, and that others are convinced they will be treated with consideration.

PARIS, April 3.—The opinion was expressed in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies to-day that the appropriation bill for French representation at the San Francisco Exposition was likely to pass both the Chamber and the Senate before the Easter adjournment.

BENNETT LEAVES HIS BED.

Still Very Weak, but Sleeps Well—His Temperature Lower.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

CAIRO, April 3.—James Gordon Bennett had a good night's rest, and insisted to-day on leaving his bed and walking about the room.

He is still very weak, but his temperature has fallen.

WON'T SERVE WITH KIYOURA.

Many Japanese Statesmen Refuse to Enter His Cabinet.

TOKIO, April 3.—Difficulty in forming a new Japanese Cabinet has been encountered by Viscount Keigo Kiyoura, who undertook the task at the request of the Emperor. Many of the statesmen who had been selected for portfolios declined to take the risk of ruining their political future by accepting office, as there has been much popular disapproval of the selection of Viscount Kiyoura as Premier.

The political groups in the House of Representatives, including the Constitutional Party, which is the strongest body in the Chamber, as well as the entire press, are opposing the new Premier on the ground that his selection signifies a revival of the old bureaucracy instead of being an evidence of progress. They assert that the existence of the political parties has been ignored.

A DISTINCTION

GIMBELS --- Sale of Books --- GIMBELS

20,000---at Half or Less

20,000 books at one-half or less. Every good kind of book on almost every conceivable subject, published by all the good publishers in the United States, is represented in this remarkable event, and every copy is fresh and clean and new. Here is the story:

The oldest, largest, and most distinguished bookseller in a great Western city—evidently something of an idealist—took the Public Library list of wanted books as his standard, and stocked up heavily. This was too much for him and he couldn't carry the load. So he sold all his surplus books to us.

We could have put every one of these books into our regular stock and got full price with a great big profit; but that is not our way. When we get a good big money's worth you get it too. The half price or more that we save on these books goes right into your pockets.

We've told you the story—and now for the books. The subjects covered are:

Fiction	Agriculture	Social Science	Socialism	Business
Travel	Marine	Banking & Currency	Poetry	Domestic Science
Biography	Geology	Electrical Science	Music	Books for Collectors
History	Physiology	Evolution	Nature	Foreign Languages
Art	Zoology	Psychology	War	Reference Books
Literature	Botany	Political Economy	Drama	Medical Books

In this page we can only list a few thousand titles, including the most important serious works. But please take our word for it: The 3,500 works of fiction are novels that you want, such authors as Jack London, Maurice Hewlett, Winston Churchill, Marie Corelli, Bret Harte, Robert W. Chambers, etc., at 45c. a volume. 3,000 standard juveniles—Betty Wales Series, Louisa M. Alcott, Kate Douglas Wiggin, etc., at exactly half standard prices. Heroes of the Nation, at 75c; English Men of Letters, at 50c; American Statesmen Series, 60c; Appleton's Educational Library, 50c; Appleton's Scientific Library, 50c.

20,000 altogether; but don't let this lead you astray. Of some books there may be only one, two or three. The greatest number of any one title is fifteen. People who come here to-day—and early—are going to have the best choice.

Orders by mail—we will fill them if we can, but cannot guarantee them. At our last sale we had to disappoint hundreds of our customers. We don't like to do this. Isn't that fair warning?

ASQUITH'S TRIP MADE A TRIUMPH

Liberals Organize Demonstrations as He Journeys to Scotland.

LOYALISTS NAME ROBERTS

Army Hero Heads a League to Support Ulster's Fight Against Home Rule.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 3.—In order to offset in advance the Unionist demonstration in Hyde Park, arranged for Saturday, the chief Liberal whip decided that Premier Asquith's journey to Scotland should be made the occasion of demonstrations such as marked Gladstone's Midlothian campaign. The Premier himself dislikes these triumphal progresses, as he considers they smack too much of the arts of the demagogue; but he was prevailed upon to agree in this particular instance, in view of the political effect.

Consequently, a grand send-off by the Liberals took place at Euston Station this morning, and at all stations where the Premier's train stopped on the way to Fifeshire there were warm demonstrations, engineered by Liberal organizations.

Interference by suffragettes was apprehended; but there was only one incident of the sort. At Newcastle-on-Tyne a woman jumped on the footboard of the train and tried to put a typewritten document in the Premier's carriage. She was collared by two policemen, and as the train moved off the group of three was thrown struggling to the platform, the woman underneath.

COUPAR ANGUS, Scotland, April 3.—Premier Asquith, accompanied by Mrs. Asquith and their daughter, arrived here at 8 o'clock this evening after a triumphal progress from London. Mr. Asquith received deputations of Liberals at Granthan, York, Newcastle, Berwick, and Edinburgh in the course of the day, and at each place delivered a brief speech of thanks. These speeches, however, were without special reference to politics. The Premier to-night is a guest of Sir James Low at Kilmaron Castle.

Mr. Asquith will make his first speech in his campaign for re-election to the House of Commons at Ladybank, eight miles southwest of Coupar Angus, tomorrow afternoon. The Unionists threaten that if this speech is provocative in the sense of raising the army question as an electioneering device they will rescind their decision not to oppose the Premier's re-election.

LONDON, April 3.—Lord Roberts tonight was elected President of the League of British Covenanters at a meeting held in Caxton Hall. Resolutions were adopted at the meeting pledging the British Covenanters to do all in their power to prevent the establishment of Home Rule in Ireland without the sanction of the nation and the support of the people of Ulster in "their gallant struggle to maintain their constitutional rights."

Speeches were made at the meeting by Walter Hume Long, former Chief Secretary for Ireland; Lord Milner, and Sir Edward Carson. Sir Edward said the Government either would have to exclude Ulster from its bill or make up its minds that it would have bloodshed and coercion.

EXPECT ULSTER COMPROMISE.

Many Irish Unionists Said to be Opposed to Extreme Measures.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, April 3.—The Globe prints the following dispatch from its special correspondent in Ulster:

"The fight in Ireland is now mainly a question of tactics, the cumulative effects of the undercurrent making for a settlement by conciliation. During the past few days sane Unionist opinion has greatly changed, and is privately hardening against the Ulster extremists, though publicly Unionists still declare that they would risk all on a general election.

"Officially Ulster still demands exclusion, believing that this demand will wreck the bill. The moment exclusion is advanced as a serious proposition Unionists south of the Boyne will strenuously oppose that method of settlement. They have before them the example of Trinity College, which Sir Edward Carson represents in Parliament, and which revolted last year against an exclusion proposal. Trinity College is now practically unanimous against any Ulster exclusion policy.

"There is a divergence between Carson and the English Unionists because the Covenanters hold him to be nonpartisan, and expect that he shall assume this attitude. Ulster, the Nationalists, and the Laborites are all chafing under the concessions by the Government upon the reintroduction of the bill, but the feeling among prominent men of all parties here is that Home Rule is the inevitable solution, following upon the lines of Sir Edward Carson's suggestion, allowing Ulster a referendum conditional upon the hammering out of a federal plan of government for the entire United Kingdom within six years.

"The adoption of a federal system as a general solution of the deadlock becomes attractive to those interested in woman suffrage, because women would probably obtain votes for the local legislatures, reserving to the federal Parliament of the United Kingdom a male electorate. I am confident that along the line of general evolution a settlement is coming.

"The Nationalist Volunteers, now in process of organization by Sir Roger Casement, already number 50,000. Those enlisted are drilling nightly, and the enrollment is extending over the southern provinces, although it is not yet countenanced officially. Were Redmond to lift his hand Southern Ireland would leap to arms. Sober Unionists here admit that the only way out is by the passage of the bill."

$50,000 FOR A GOBLET?

British Museum Said to Have Offered It for Hungarian's Find.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, April 3.—An ancient glass goblet, ornamented with splendid reliefs, was recently found near Sopron, Hungary. Archaeologists think it dates from the third century of the Christian era. An inscription goes to show that it was made by Licinius Diecus. It was found by Herr Zettel, a manufacturer, living in Sopron.

It is said that the British Museum offered him $50,000 for his find. The Sopron Museum, desirous of acquiring the goblet, applied to the Director of the National Museum at Budapest with the request that he move the Hungarian Government to forbid its sale outside the country. That would be possible, according to Hungarian law, which allows the National Museum at Budapest to claim every antique object found in Hungary; but meanwhile Herr Zettel has got the goblet out of the country.

TO USE ANTI-ROLLERS.

Cunarder Aquitania Will Be Fitted with Frahms Tanks.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 3.—L. Peskett of the Cunard Company, speaking before the Institute of Naval Architects on the reduction of the rolling propensities of ships by the use of anti-rolling tanks, said that the Cunard Company had experimented with Frahms tanks on the Laconia and that it had been shown without question that their use resulted in a reduction of the amplitude of rolling, amounting on an average to 60 per cent.

In the case of ships of the proportions of the Aquitania, he said, rolling was a feature to be avoided by every possible means. The Aquitania, therefore, was being fitted with anti-rolling tanks, and bilge keels had been dispensed with.

6-YEAR SENTENCE FOR GERMAN SPY

Could Get Record Punishment for Stealing British Navy Secrets.

OTHER SPIES SOUGHT FOR

Great Organization Said to Exist in the British Isles—Secret Service Active.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, April 3.—The trial of Frederick Adolphus Gould and his wife, charged with spying on the British Navy, supposedly in the interest of Germany, was begun and ended today at the Old Bailey.

Gould was sentenced to six years' penal servitude, to be followed by deportation. Mrs. Gould was discharged, the indictment against her being withdrawn.

The fact that Gould's arrest followed upon an investigation by the secret service police indicates that he obtained possession of important naval documents, and the serious view taken of the case was shown by the sentence, the maximum penalty being seven years.

Gould, whose real name is said to be Rehroeder, pleaded guilty to obtaining certain plans and documents calculated to be useful to a foreign State, but pleaded not guilty to the second charge, of inciting his wife to commit a like offense.

The search of Gould's house disclosed one remarkable document, which the Attorney General thought it against the public interest to read. It contained a series of skillfully framed questions upon which Gould had been invited to pursue inquiries.

By the sentence imposed upon Gould, the heaviest ever inflicted in this country for the crime of espionage, the authorities feel that they have secured the punishment of a most dangerous foreign agent. Gould is said to have been one of a great organization of foreign spies here. Secret service agents have for a long time been seeking its headquarters, and have been particularly anxious to apprehend the man, signing himself by various names, chiefly R. H. Peterson, who writes from Rotterdam, Amsterdam, Hamburg, Ostend, and Berlin. All efforts to identify this man of mystery have failed, and the secret service agents are forced to the conclusion that the names stand for a system rather than an individual.

It is stated that scores of agents of this league of spies infest the British Isles, known to one another only by numbers. Dockyard towns are hotbeds of espionage. Some spies are ostensibly tradesmen, while others occupy humble posts in the dockyards or pose as money lenders or photographers. Women at every naval and military station are among the most successful spies.

When the true history of the missing code book of the battleship Queen is disclosed, the part played in it by a woman will, it is suggested, be one of its most astonishing features.

CHILE FETES PRINCE HENRY.

He Receives Troops at Santiago—Dreadnoughts at Valparaiso.

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 3.—Prince Henry of Prussia, accompanied by Ramon Barros Luco, President of Chile, to-day reviewed a large part of the Chilean Army in the presence of 50,000 spectators. Prince Henry was the recipient of a popular ovation.

VALPARAISO, April 3.—The German dreadnoughts Kaiser and Koenig Albert and the cruiser Strassburg arrived here to-day, accompanied by a steamer loaded with German coal. Great crowds gathered to see them and extensive preparations have been made to entertain the officers and crews.

The newspapers here have for more than a month published advertisements stating that German warships, steamers, and shipyards are the best in the world.

Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia will come to Valparaiso to-morrow from Santiago, where they arrived yesterday from Buenos Aires.

Corporation Counsel Polk announced yesterday the appointment of Harold N. Whitehouse as Assistant Corporation Counsel to succeed Edward A. McShane. A tender love element purges the story of its morbidity.

ASKS NEW YORKERS TO BE VACCINATED

Health Commissioner Says Smallpox Menaces Those Who Are Not Inoculated.

PREVALENT UP THE STATE

Twelve Years Since City Undertook a General Campaign of Vaccination —Virus Effective for Seven Years.

Every person in New York who has not been vaccinated for smallpox, or who was vaccinated more than seven years ago, should be inoculated at once. This is the advice of Dr. S. S. Goldwater, the Health Commissioner of New York, who said last night that owing to the prevalence of the disease in the northern part of this State, and in parts of Pennsylvania, Ohio, and South Carolina, he considered that New Yorkers should be prompt to protect themselves.

Dr. Goldwater is having printed for immediate distribution throughout the city about 800,000 circulars which will warn those in need of vaccination not to delay in taking that precaution.

"There is no danger," said Dr. Goldwater, "so far as the school children are concerned. Practically the entire school population has been vaccinated. The danger is among adults and children under the school age."

For several weeks Dr. Goldwater has been making a quiet but thorough investigation of the smallpox situation in this and other States. He said last night that he hoped that the campaign to get persons to submit to vaccination voluntarily would be so successful that it would not be necessary to ask the Board of Estimate for an appropriation to compel those living in the city to take this precaution. There has not been a general vaccination of those living in New York for twelve years, and as seven years is the average limit of the effectiveness of vaccine the present situation is serious.

In the City Record yesterday Dr. Goldwater told of the survey made of groups of the population in order to determine to what extent those living in New York were protected against smallpox by vaccination. In his article he said:

"Inspectors and nurses visited every home in typical city blocks, (a) tenement house blocks, colored, and (c) blocks of high-class apartment houses, and obtained information as to previous vaccination.

"By letters and Inspectors the desired information was obtained from various large department stores, insurance companies, and the three largest charitable organizations in the city. A vaccination census was also taken of the employes of the New York Public Library, the New York Stock Exchange, and the Bureau of Infectious Diseases of the Department of Health of New York City.

"Information was thus obtained regarding 12,437 persons, a fair cross-section of the population of the city. Of these 12,096, or 96 per cent., had been vaccinated, the average elapsed time since the last successful vaccination being about eleven years. Fifty, or 0.4 per cent., had had smallpox and 378, or 3 per cent., had never been vaccinated.

"These crude figures are, at first sight, encouraging and seem to show that New York City is fairly well protected against an epidemic of smallpox; certainly as well as, and probably better than, any other large city in the United States. This view is borne out by the following facts:

"New York City, notwithstanding its own population of nearly 5,000,000 and its large floating population from all parts of the country, amounting at times to 200,000, has been relatively free from the disease for a number of years.

"Infants and children under school age should be vaccinated in order to protect others as well as themselves. Of late years, owing to the comparative frequency of vaccination among children, smallpox has become a disease of adults. We run the risk in New York City of an outbreak among the children, a reversion to the conditions of bygone years, when they were the first and heaviest sufferers."

The cost to the city of compulsory vaccination, it was said, would be about $150,000. In 1902 the cost of vaccinating the inhabitants was about $115,000.

WANT 'MOTHER' JONES FREE.

Mine Workers Through Attorney Seek Another Writ of Habeas Corpus.

DENVER, Col., April 3.—A petition for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of "Mother" Mary Jones, the 82-year-old strike leader, held as a military prisoner in the county jail at Walsenburg, Col., was tendered to the Supreme Court late to-day by Horace N. Hawkins, attorney for the United Mine Workers of America. The court is asked to take original jurisdiction.

While Mrs. Jones was imprisoned in a hospital at Trinidad, application for a writ of habeas corpus was made to the Supreme Court, but was denied on the ground that the lower court should first pass on the case. Subsequently an action was brought in the District Court in Las Animas County, where the petition was denied. An appeal to the Supreme Court was about to be filed, when "Mother" Jones was released. She was rearrested at Walsenburg in the coal strike district while on her way back to Trinidad.

GAVE AGENT A BADGE, HE MADE ARRESTS

Humane Society Officer Says He Wasn't Sworn In for Two Years.

TOLD TO "GET" MALLETT

Ex-Superintendent Testifies That President Belais Ordered Arrests of His Drivers.

Another hearing on the petition of William A. Mallett, a life member, for the forfeiture of the charter of the Humane Society was held yesterday before Deputy Attorney General William A. McQuaid at 299 Broadway.

Morris Lang, formerly an agent of the Humane Society, but now employed by the Horse Aid Society, testified that in 1912 Agent Kelly arrested one of the Mallett drivers on the ground that he was driving a physically unfit animal. Mr. Mallett was attending the Bull Moose Convention in Chicago at the time. Kelly had a talk with Alfred A. Mallett, his son According to Lang, Kelly advised young Mallett to have the driver plead guilty.

"The Judge we are going to take him before is a $5 Judge," Lang said Kelly told the driver and young Mallett, "and he will let you go with that fine."

But young Mallett refused to permit the driver to plead guilty and told him to fight the case, whereupon, according to Lang, the agent who made the arrest released the driver without taking him to court. That was the last of that case so far as he knew, said Lang.

Lang said he was first employed as an agent by the Humane Society in 1910, and, although a badge was given to him, he was not sworn in as an officer until two years later.

"Did you make any arrests before you were sworn in?" asked Mr. McQuaid.

"Yes, many," answered the witness.

"Why didn't they swear you in when they gave you a badge?"

"I don't know," Lang replied.

Alfred A. Mallett, the son of the complainant, corroborated Lang's story of the arrest of the driver in 1912.

Herbert Gray, formerly Superintendent of the Humane Society in the Bronx, was recalled to the stand and asked if Mr. Belais, the President of the society, had said anything to him about arresting drivers employed by Mallett.

"Yes, he told me he wanted me to get Mr. Mallett," Gray replied.

"Did you follow Belais's instructions?"

"Yes, I gave the orders as instructed," replied Gray, "and told the men that Mr. Belais wanted them to get Mr. Mallett and not to pass him by."

In the case of another complaint regarding the condition of an animal, while he was employed by the Humane Society, Mr. Gray said he had examined the animal in order "to appease a woman member," who made the complaint. There was nothing the matter with the animal, he said, except that it was a bit stiff.

Counsel for President Belais tried to get Gray to say that Mr. Belais had told him not to discriminate in favor of Mr. Mallett in the carrying on of the society's work, but the witness said he did not remember the matter that way.

The hearing was adjourned to next Friday, when Mr. Mallett will take the stand.

TO INVESTIGATE WATERMAN.

Creditors Seeks to Unravel Bankrupt's Transfer of Accounts.

A thorough investigation into the affairs of Martin T. C. Waterman, a wholesale dealer in leather goods, of 20 Spruce Street, is likely to be asked by Lesser Brothers, attorneys for his creditors. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against him on Thursday in the Federal District Court by the Monarch Leather Company, the United Leather Company, and Samuel L. Agood.

Mr. Waterman returned to his home in Brooklyn on Thursday night, and Henry Lavers, the receiver appointed by the court, said yesterday that as far as he had investigated his debts would be $75,000 and his assets not more than $5,000. Through a series of transactions with a bank and other parties, almost all the assets have disappeared, and it will be necessary to go into a complicated series of transactions in which it seems that the accounts were transferred quickly from hand to hand.

Can't Force Members to Buy Tickets

The officers of a mutual benefit society may assess its members only for dues provided in its by-laws, and they may not expel a member for refusing to purchase picnic tickets, or decline to accept regular dues unless such tickets are bought, the Appellate Division ruled yesterday. The court dismissed the appeal of the Philip Bernstein Sick and Benefit Society from a Supreme Court order requiring it to reinstate Isidor Weiss to membership. Weiss was expelled in July, 1912, for refusing to buy a picnic ticket.

$870 FOR A SHAKESPEARE.

Spirited Bidding for Third Folio Edition of 1663 at Sale.

A copy of the third folio edition of "Mr. William Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies," London, printed for Philip Chetwinde, 1663, was the most valuable item in the sale of four properties at the American Art Galleries yesterday. It was described as belonging to "a gentleman residing in London." It is in binding by Pratt. Shakespeare's portrait, engraved by Droesnout, is on the title, with Ben Jonson's lines on the page opposite, in facsimile. It is one of the few copies of the first issue of this edition in which the portrait is impressed at a slanting angle, with the verses of poetry opposite. It contains the usual errors in pagination, but not the doubtful plays. It measures 8¼ inches by 12¼ inches.

Bidding for it was spirited. The chief competitors were F. W. Morris and Gabriel Wels. The former obtained it for $870.

Theodore Opperman paid $72.50 for a painting in oils, by T. Buttersworth of the "Battle between Chesapeake and the Shannon," in the war of 1812. Mr. Stone gave $172.50 for "Birds of the World," with 1,008 beautifully colored plates, designed and engraved by Martinet. (Paris, 1787.) It is believed to be the most complete set known of these exquisite plates. Dr. Eliot obtained for $178 an uncut set of the "Bon Ton Magazine," London, 1818-20, with numerous colored plates in the manner of Rowlandson, Gillray, &c.

A large paper copy of the first edition of John C. Lavater's "Essays on Physiognomy," London, 1789-98, went for $50. "The Writings of Henry W. Longfellow," Cambridge, Riverside Press, 1886, one of 500 copies of the large paper edition, brought $62.50. An extra illustrated copy of Longfellow's Life, edited by Samuel Longfellow, sold for $23. An extra illustrated copy of William C. Bryants "Library of Poetry and Song," New York, 1874, was knocked down for $40. An extra illustrated copy of William M. Sloane's "Life of Napoleon Bonaparte," New York, 1901, brought $35.

LAMBERT SALE, $211,073.

Nearly All the Library Has Now Been Dispersed.

The sale of Part IV. of the William H. Lambert library was concluded at the Anderson Galleries yesterday. The total for the session was $6,003.40. Part I., Lincolniana, brought $52,439.60; Part II., Thackerayana, $142,635.83, and Part III., civil war items, $9,992.20. This makes the grand total for the four parts $211,073.05. It is practically the wind-up of the library sale, although there remains to be disposed of a lot or prints, &c., which may bring between $1,000 and $2,000.

The highest price of the entire sale was $23,000 paid for the original manuscript of William M. Thackeray's "The Rose and the Ring." It is said that Major Lambert bought it from Thackeray's daughter, Lady Ritchie, for $12,375.

George D. Smith, at yesterday's session, paid $70 for an extra illustrated copy of "The Life of Abraham Lincoln by Ida M. Tarbell, New York, 1900. Inserted in the two volumes are more than 700 portraits, maps, fac similes, clippings, &c., gathered by Major Lambert.

F. W. Morris gave $28 for "Carpenter's Picture, Lincoln and Emancipation," speech in the House of Representatives by Alexander H. Stephens Feb. 12, 1878, autograph presentation copy from Mr. Stephens.

Brentanos's bought for $25 a first edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Mr. Morris obtained for $38 an autograph letter by Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy, dated Hartford, Jan. 31, 1861, referring to Lincoln's gratifying firmness and decision.

Mr. Smith paid $35 for another letter by Welles, Hartford, Nov. 21, 1873. It is addressed to United States Senator Ira Harris, and reads in part as follows:

"I have no objection to the laudation of Mr. Seward, but it should not be at the expense of the others and of truth. The efforts made even before the death of President Lincoln to create the impression that the Secretary of State was the directing and controlling spirit of the Administration were apparent."

ARCTIC HARE ON BROADWAY.

Shot on the Ice to Make a Feast for Breslin Manager.

Said Carl Reff, the big Danish maitre d'hotel of the Breslin, who has a romantic past—Reff, not the hotel, that is—to Doc Nobles, the assistant manager of the hotel something like a month ago:

"Ever eat an Arctic hare?"

"No," returned Mr. Nobles, "but I have tackled Welsh rabbits."

"You do not get me," protested the other. "I mean a real hare, a white hare that comes from Spitzbergen. Some time I will have one cooked for you."

True to his promise, Reff wrote to a friend in Spitzbergen, whose name, he says, is Björn Gunnerson, who is connected with the Iceland Faereerne Steamship Company, and who, he knew, would be setting out from Tromso about the time a letter via Christiansand would reach that furthest northern port of Norway. Reff asked him to run out in the direction of the north pole as soon as he stepped on the ice at Spitzbergen and shoot an Arctic hare and send it back by the same steamer.

Mr. Gunnerson, so Reff told it yesterday, acted up to requirements and not only bagged a big white hare, but brought down two orras, which are somewhat like Scotch pheasant, except they have darker meat. They arrived the other day on a Scandinavian-American liner in cold storage from Christiansand, and Reff kept the game until he learned that Mr. Nobles was going to entertain a few friends at dinner on Thursday night. Then, with his own hands, he prepared the game in the ancient fashion he had learned when he was in the Danish Army. First the hare was larded and soaked in milk over night, and then roasted. The juice, mixed with cream, made a delectable sauce. The assistant manager and his guests voted that Arctic hare made an epicurean feast, but, unlike the Welsh rabbit, it didn't fit in with beer.

MAPS OF BOULEVARD BEGUN.

Queens Topographical Bureau Laying Out Eight-Mile Highway.

The Topographical Bureau of Queens yesterday began the preparing of the tentative maps of the Grand Central Boulevard, a parkway and automobile highway which is to start at the Queens Boulevard, four miles from the Queensboro Bridge and extend eight miles in a direct line to the eastern limits of the city at Creedmoor.

With the connection formed by the Queens Boulevard, this will make a fine automobile highway, extending almost to the fine country estates in the Roslyn and Westbury sections.

The cost of this new parkway will be several millions of dollars, and it has been approved by the City Planning Committee. Borough President Connolly will have the maps prepared as soon as possible and submitted to the Board of Estimate. An effort is to be made to have the work begun on this construction at the time work is started on the Queens Boulevard.

BURNS SAYS FRANK WILL NOT HANG

Quoted in Chicago as Saying He Knows the Real Slayer of Mary Phagan.

TELLS OF WORK ON CASE

Did Not Start to Establish Innocence of Accused Man, but to Establish Identity of Murderer.

CHICAGO, April 4.—The Tribune will print to-morrow this statement on the Leo M. Frank case:

"Detective William J. Burns told a reporter for The Tribune to-night that he knows who killed Mary Phagan, the Atlanta factory girl. Mr. Burns says he will reveal the identity of the slayer to the Atlanta authorities Monday.

"Mary Phagan was murdered in a pencil factory at Atlanta almost a year ago. Several weeks later Leo M. Frank, a Jew, Superintendent of the pencil factory, was arrested and charged with the crime. He was tried and convicted. The Supreme Court upheld the decision and Frank was condemned to die April 17.

"'I did not take the job to prove the innocence of Frank,' declared Mr. Burns. 'I made it understood that my duty was to find the murderer, whoever he should be. Well, I began to investigate. I had been in Atlanta but a few hours when I realized that the "mystery" was not a mystery.

"'The tracks of the slayer are as plain as day. There is and never was any mystery about the case. It required but a little investigation to fasten the crime on a certain man in Atlanta. He is under surveillance and his conviction is certain.

"'I make no positive stand about the guilt or innocence of Leo M. Frank. I am not supposed to reveal the results of my investigation until I make my report to the authorities. In my opinion Leon M. Frank will not die on April 17.

"'Crimes like the murder of Mary Phagan are not natural crimes. The motives in this case are clear. It was upon this basis that I made my investigation.

"'The crime was not the result of greed, love, hate, or desperation. A man commits murder for some reason—either premeditation or natural. There was none of these elements in this crime. Therefore I concluded that an abnormal reason prompted the murder of this girl. This was clear, so I looked for a pervert.

"'I found him. I traced his actions on that day. I fastened the crime, in my opinion, on this man. Then I set about to prove my theories. Now I have established my theories into facts. It was an easy matter to discover the persons addicted to abnormalities. They can't get away from it. Something in their manner betrays it, whether they are millionaires, tramps, lawyers, or business men.

"'After rounding up persons placed in this class I discovered the man I was looking for by a process of elimination. Then later investigations proved my theories beyond doubt.

"'The man cannot escape. The people of Atlanta will realize their awful mistake when I lay the evidence before them. It will cause a shake-up in the Police Department.

"'Such a blunder as they have made of the case is excusable, because the people of Atlanta clamored for the conviction of Frank. Stories of his perversion were rife. It was my first duty to disprove these stories of Frank's alleged perversion. The authorities started right, but they couldn't keep their feet on the ground.

"'They used the Police Department but very little common sense. Common sense beats dictographs and finger prints. Elemental facts are the first essentials, and then investigations along common sense lines are the things that count. Apply this rule to such cases and the mystery is found to be no mystery after all. Just a clear case, with everything pointing to a real murderer.'"

Mr. Burns was extensively quoted in the Chicago papers yesterday afternoon as saying that he had found Mary Phagan's murderer, who was still at large, but under surveillance, thus implying that a third person, and not either Frank or the negro, Conley, was the murderer.

THE TIMES received early this morning this telegram from Mr. Burns, who is on the way from Chicago to Atlanta:

DANVILLE, Ill., April 4.—I never made any such statement.
WILLIAM J. BURNS.

ARREST TWO BANKRUPTS.

Rosenthals, Under Federal Charges, Accused of Grand Larceny Also.

Joseph Rosenthal of 49 St. Nicholas Terrace, who, with his son, Arthur, was formerly engaged in the manufacture of women's clothing as the R. & W. Skirt Manufacturing Company, which recently went into bankruptcy, was arrested yesterday by Detective Bernard Flood of the District Attorney's office on a warrant charging grand larceny. The two men were already out on $5,000 bail in the Federal courts.

The complainant in the case, Harry Lipsitz of Baltimore, Md., told Assistant District Attorney Deuel that some months ago the Rosenthals told him that they owned a manufacturing business worth $13,000, and that they asked him to put in $12,000 new capital for a half interest. They produced a statement showing the financial condition of the business, and on the strength of it Lipsitz put the money in. Five months later the firm went into bankruptcy.

Lipsitz charges that the item "Accounts receivable" in the statement was falsified by $8,000.

LETS GIRL SPEEDER GO.

Miss Van Buren Says She Didn't Mean to Break the Law in 5th Av.

Miss Augusta Van Buren, 19 years old, who rides a motor cycle, was in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday to explain why she had ridden her machine at a speed of twenty-two miles an hour in Fifth Avenue on Thursday afternoon.

"I was never so surprised in all my life," Miss Van Buren told Magistrate Murphy, "as I was when I was informed that my motor cycle was going more than twenty miles an hour. I had no idea it could go so fast. I had no intention of breaking the law."

"I don't think you had," said Magistrate Murphy, "and so I am going to let you go this time, but the next time don't go so fast."

"I won't," Miss Van Buren said as she thanked the Magistrate.

TELLS OF MILLION MILES OF TRAVEL

Geographers Hear of the Magnetic Charting of the Earth

BY CARNEGIE INSTITUTION

Director L. A. Bauer Says Even Sailors Were Bronzed on Non-Magnetic Ship Carnegie.

The covering of more than a million miles of travel by land and by sea in expeditions sent out by the Carnegie Institution of Washington to discover and chart the lines of magnetic force throughout the earth was described by Dr. L. A. Bauer, Director of the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institution, at a joint meeting of the American Geographical Society and the Association of American Geographers, in the Engineers' Hall, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, last night.

Nearly 60,000 miles of that vast series of wanderings was covered by the almost non-magnetic sailing ship Galilee, chartered by the department in the years 1905 to 1908, and 100,000 miles more recently by the absolutely non-magnetic ship Carnegie, specially built by the Carnegie Institution for the purpose of slowly following and tracing the lines of magnetic force in every ocean of the earth.

Dr. Bauer began his lecture, which was illustrated, by throwing on the screen a picture of The Carnegie, Ironmaster, and thereafter a picture of the other Carnegie, "the unattractive Carnegie"—the ship—which had been made possible by the first.

"All materials used in the building of this vessel were non-magnetic," said Dr. Bauer. "It is a sailing vessel, brigantine rigged, with an auxiliary engine entirely non-magnetic, constructed of brass and copper. Her canvas, with a fair wind, permits of 300 knots a day, but we did not hurry in in our work, and usually contented ourselves with about 100 miles a day, taking observations 100 miles apart. All metal parts of the ship were either of bronze or copper, so that they could have absolutely no effect on our compass. The cutlery was of Mexican silver. The sailors' sheath knives were of non-magnetic manganese steel, and even the sailors themselves were bronzed. The anchors were of heavy manganese bronze."

Dr. Bauer traced the voyages of the Carnegie from New York to St. Johns, to Falmouth, England; the Madeiras, the Bermudas, zigzagging across the Atlantic, to the mouth of the Amazon, Rio Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Cape Town, around to Ceylon, Samoa, Australia, New Zealand, and criss-cross backward and forward in the Indian Ocean. Everywhere, he said, the little ship was greeted with the greatest courtesy and hospitality by all the strange peoples she visited.

"From 1900 to 1913 the Carnegie traveled more than 100,000 miles, or more than thirteen times around the globe," said Dr. Bauer. "This year she will start a cruise in the North Atlantic Ocean, and next year one to the West Indies, passing through the Panama Canal and cruising through the Southern Pacific and Southern Atlantic Oceans."

Describing the land stations from which expeditions sent out by the Carnegie Institution were taking magnetic observations in all parts of the globe, he told of stations in South America crossing the continent along the Amazon, Central America, canoe expeditions through Canada in the Hudson and James Bay country and up the Albany River; expeditions across Asia; expeditions across Australia from north to south and east to west; expeditions in Africa carried on by English observers associated with the Carnegie Institution, and by American observers working across the Sahara desert.

"The total number of land stations established has been 3,000," he said, "stretching from Greenland in the north to New Zealand in the south, usually about 100 miles apart, and all told covering a distance of more than 900,000 miles. Adding the distance covered by the Galilee and the Carnegie we have made a magnetic survey of more than 1,000,000 miles of the earth's surface by land and sea in thirty-eight expeditions sent into ninety-four countries. The entire work has been accomplished, despite the strange and often wild places into which it took the workers, without a single loss of life. When the Carnegie returned from her last trip last Fall she had added another 32,000 miles without losing a single sail or instrument or human life in all her far wanderings."

C. B. BOSTWICK'S WILL FILED

Man Who Was Found Dead in Woods Left All to Widow.

Charles Byron Bostwick, Secretary and Treasurer of the A. J. Watts Company, who disappeared from his home at 19 West Thirty-first Street, on Jan. 4, and whose body was found two months later in the woods near East Hampton, L. I., left his entire estate to his widow. The will, filed for probate yesterday, disposes of an estate valued at more than $10,000.

Mr. Bostwick left his apartment on the morning of Sunday, Jan. 4, and told his wife he was going to the Hudson Terminal Building at 30 Church Street. He said that he would return in the afternoon. He was not reported seen again alive. A country-wide search was made for him but it was not until March 8 that his body was found. It is believed that neuritis, from which he had been suffering, caused a loss of memory and that he wandered about until he fell exhausted and died from exposure.

LETTER FROM CONGO PARTY.

James Chapin, Exploring Jungle, Writes to Museum of Success.

Keen interest was manifested at the American Museum of Natural History yesterday in a letter received by Dr. Frederic Lucas, Director of the institution, from James Chapin, leader with Herbert Lang of the Lang-Chapin Congo expedition.

Rare and valuable specimens have been gathered by the Museum's Congo Expedition, which has been aided by the co-operation of the Belgian Government in its work of exploration through the great jungle region of Central Africa. Already the members of the expedition have spent nearly five years in the field, and the specimens obtained run up into the thousands. It was this expedition which captured the rare Okapi, the white rhino, the black rhino, and several elephants for the collections of the Museum. When completed the Museum's African collection probably will be one of the largest in the world.

Mr. Chapin's letter, dated Avakubi, Jan. 12, said that the task of transporting to Stanleyville the collections deposited at Avakubi had been completed, and that fifty loads, as well as those from Medje likewise had been forwarded to Stanleyville, where all the caravans had arrived without mishap. He added that 687 porters had been sent off, as well as nine large canoes, the contents of which would represent loads for at least 180 men, by way of the Aruwimi River.

In the monarchy of Mangbetu the exploration party received aid from King Okondo, who gave the explorers permission to take pictures of his village of 100 huts.

England's Most Famous Shaving Soap, has one of the instinctive attributes of gentlemen the world over—the love of bodily cleanliness.

John Knight, Limited, London, the world's most famous soap maker, made it originally for English gentlemen of the historic type, whose first daily duty is the morning tub and shave.

These Englishmen have carried it everywhere—through the trackless bush of Australia, across the heated sands, through the jungle and over the vast African veldts, into India, and China, the East and West Indies, to the frontier outposts of Canada, to every land and every people who dwell on the shores of the Seven Seas, and thus it has found a permanent place in the shaving kits of gentlemen in every quarter of the Globe.

With a due regard for the exact meaning of the word, it is the Perfect Shaving Soap.

MODERN DANCING
By Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle.

This book on the newest decent dances of to-day—brought out under the auspices of several New York social leaders—and written by the one recognized authority on dancing—makes it possible for every reader to know what the latest accepted dances are and to learn how to dance them. The new dances such as the Castle Walk, the Hesitation Waltz, the Tango are described step by step and more than one hundred illustrations from photographs and moving pictures reveal the slightest change in the position of the feet. Above all, it is a practical book—practical as well as authoritative.

SOCIAL FORCES IN ENGLAND AND AMERICA
By H. G. Wells.

"Here," says Wells himself, "is a fairly complete view of all of my opinions. It is practically all my miscellaneous writing for the last four or five years, edited and drawn together into an effective whole." He discusses divorce, motherhood, schoolmasters and doctors; the political disease of our times; speculates upon the future of the American people; considers a possible set-back to our civilization which he finds menaced by panics and war. He draws a picture of what the ideal citizen of the future should be; considers the still undeveloped possibilities of science.

UNDER HANDICAP
By Jackson Gregory.

A romance of reclamation—the reclamation of an American desert by irrigation, and the reclamation of a rich idler (handicapped by his father's name and wealth) to strong, self-reliant manhood. And, when, in spite of opposition and treachery, the great project was finished, the man who had succeeded found favor in the eyes of the girl whom he loved from his first sight of her riding across the desert. The story has virile outdoor atmosphere, which recalls that of Rex Beach's successes.

HARPER'S BOOK FOR YOUNG GARDENERS
By Alpheus Hyatt Verrill.

This book has been prepared to show how much profit and pleasure may be obtained from simple gardens, and how to plan, arrange and care for them properly. School gardening, experimental gardening, ornamental gardening are all explained, and the author shows what can be accomplished at a small outlay in a city back yard or vacant lot.

"A chill rainy day at Larchwood, and in the afternoon my wife and I for a ride in W. Fodda petroleum wagon, which I enjoyed not at all. We had dinner in a great room, and then I did read aloud D. FIRST CASH PAID SIEGEL DEPOSITORS

HAD BEEN KEPT APART

Checks Are Ready at Receiver's Office for Fifty-four Others Who Deposited on That Day.

The first payment of money to the depositors of the failed private bank, Henry Siegel & Co., was made yesterday by Henry Melville, receiver for the bank. Mr. Melville, by direction of United States District Judge Hough, refunded deposits that were made on Dec. 29, 1913, the day that the bank was closed. There were eighty-two deposits for that day, and they amounted to $2,785.38. A total of $919.07 was returned to twenty-eight depositors by Receiver Melville, and checks are waiting at his office, 45 Cedar Street, for the other fifty-four depositors of Dec. 29. The deposits made on the day the bank was closed were kept apart.

Many of the depositors who went to the office of the receiver to get their money were doubtful of receiving an actual refund of their deposits. One of the first persons who called to see Receiver Melville was Miss Mary Jane Cochrane, 15 years, of 145 Van Dyck Street, Brooklyn. The receiver handed to her a check for her deposit, $15.45. The girl looked at the face of the check, and then turned it over and looked at the other side. Finally she turned to the receiver and asked:

"Mr. Melville, do you think this check is good?"

She was assured that the check would be paid immediately when it was presented at the bank, and departed greatly relieved.

Another depositor whose money was returned to him was Tony Capozzi of 266 Tillary Street, Brooklyn. He approached the receiver with excitement and explained that he had seen in the newspapers that the money was to be distributed. He was glad that the news was published, because he had moved from his old address, and he might have failed to get the notice sent out on Thursday night by the receiver. Capozzi's deposit was $100, and he thought it great luck that he got the full amount instead of about $15, which may be the proportion of the depositors other than those who placed their money in the bank on the day it was put in the hands of a receiver. Capozzi said he deposited $100 in the private bank on Sept. 29, 1913. On Dec. 29 he closed his account, but soon after withdrawing his money was induced to deposit it again. In that way he became a depositor of Dec. 29, and his money was kept aside with the rest in a sealed envelope.

Mrs. Anna Holmes of 141 West Seventy-seventh Street, was another of the depositors whose money was returned to her. She put $225 in the private bank on the day it closed, and yesterday she and her daughter went to the office of the receiver to get the refund. Mrs. Holmes's hand had to be steadied by her daughter before she could sign the receipt. She opened her account on Dec. 29, at 2 P. M., and her account was No. 45,095.

Still another of the depositors who was doubtful at first about accepting the refund was Mrs. L. A. McDonald, who opened an account for $1 for the American Rationalist Association, 180 Madison Avenue, of which she is the President. Under another name she carried an additional account of her own for $40. When she first appeared at the office of Receiver Melville a check was offered to her but she refused to accept it because she said she was afraid she might be waiving some of her rights. However, she returned half an hour later and said she would take a chance on her rights.

Singly and in couples the depositors called at the office of the receiver all day. Nearly all of them expressed their gratification on receiving their checks. Among the first dozen were four negroes, and in addition to these there was a Japanese depositor.

REORGANIZATION GOES ON.

Banks with Claims of $95,000 Have Accepted Options.

Judge Hough issued an order yesterday confirming the action of the creditors of the Siegel enterprises, who had agreed to accept one of the two options offered by the Siegel Stores Corporation in its bid for reorganizing the Simpson, Crawford Store. Judge Hough also has confirmed the sale of assets of the Simpson, Crawford Company and the Merchants' Express Company to the Siegel Stores Corporation.

The Creditors' Committee, headed by Pierre Jay, President of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, which has represented the mercantile and bank creditors of the Siegel enterprises in the reorganization of the Simpson, Crawford Store, filed a schedule showing the creditors, with the amounts of their claims, who had elected to accept the options. The bid was contingent upon the acceptance of the first option by creditors representing 75 per cent. of the indebtedness of the Simpson, Crawford Company.

Option No. 1 provided for a payment of 80 per cent. of their claims with stock exclusively, 25 per cent. in 7 per cent. first preferred cumulative stock, 25 per cent. in 6 per cent. second preferred cumulative stock, and 30 per cent. in common stock. Those desiring a part cash payment, by Option No. 2, were enabled to obtain on their claims 10 per cent. in cash, 10 per cent. in first preferred stock, 15 per cent. in second preferred stock, and 25 per cent. in common stock.

According to the schedule filed by the Creditors' Committee, it hold proxies for 919 claims amounting to $358,021.88. One hundred and seventy-three creditors, with claims aggregating $114,809.10, accepted Option No. 1, without giving proxies, and other creditors, with claims amounting to $2,951,561.78, elected to accept the first option giving proxies. Option No. 2 was accepted by forty-five creditors, with claims aggregating $20,442.06, without giving proxies. The total amount of claims of the creditors who accepted the two options was $3,144,815.62.

To those who accepted neither of the options has been made a third offer of a payment of 16.5 per cent. of their claims in cash. This payment will be possible because so few of the creditors have not accepted either one or other of the options offered in the bid. As surety that the 16.5 per cent. cash payment will be made to those electing to accept it, the Creditors' Committee has turned over to the receivers $250,000 by order of Judge Hough. The order issued yesterday by Judge Hough directs those creditors who may elect to accept the third option to file notice of their acceptance before April 10, otherwise they will be regarded as having accepted the first option.

The schedule of the Creditors' Committee shows the following banks as creditors of the Simpson, Crawford Company who have elected to accept either the first or second option:

Citizens' National Bank, Towanda, Penn.	$10,000
First National Bank, Poultney, Vt.	2,500
First National Bank, Bethlehem, Penn.	5,000
First National Bank, Henderson, N. C.	5,000
First Nat. Bank, Bloomsburg, Penn.	5,000
First Nat. Bank, Greenville, Penn.	5,000
First Nat. Bank, Rome, N. Y.	2,500
First Nat. Bank, Lock Haven, Penn.	5,000
First Nat. Bank, South Boston, Va.	2,500
First Nat. Bank, Boonville, N. Y.	2,500
Hazelton Nat. Bank, Hazelton, Penn.	5,000
Lincoln Trust Co. of New Jersey, Jersey City, N. J.	5,000
Littleton Savings Bank, Littleton, N. H.	5,000
National Bank of Waterville, Waterville, N. Y.	2,500
N. Y. State Nat. Bank, Albany, N. Y.	5,000
National Bank of North East, Penn.	2,500
Ridgewood National Bank, Ridgewood, N. Y.	2,500
Second Nat. Bank, Barre, Mass.	2,500
Wood County Bank, Parkersburg, West Va.	5,000
Cayuga County National Bank, Auburn, N. Y.	5,000
Utica Trust Co., Utica, N. Y.	5,000
Wyndham National Bank, Williamantic, Conn.	5,000
Total	$95,000

The schedule further shows that some of the largest creditors of the Simpson, Crawford Company were the Bank of the Metropolis, $181,143.35; the Garfield National Bank, $25,000, and A. G. Becker, note broker, of Chicago, $90,000. The only claim against the Merchants' Express Company, according to the schedule, was that of the Simpson, Crawford Company for $155,255.56.

It was learned yesterday from Henry Melville, receiver of Henry Siegel & Co., bankers, that the 3,400 shares of common stock of the Siegel Stores Corporation, listed at $3,400,000, held by him for the depositors, probably had an increasing value following the reorganization of the Simpson, Crawford Store, particularly because of the voting power it represented. Mr. Melville would not venture an estimate of its value, but persons familiar with stock transactions said that from 5 to 20 cents on the dollar might be realized from it.

When the Grand Jury in Boston begins its investigation of the private bank in the Boston store of Siegel and Vogel Mrs. Henry Siegel will be one of the witnesses. District Attorney Pelletier announced yesterday that she would be examined for the purpose of discovering assets. Mrs. Siegel, however, has been ill since her statement, making charges against her husband on Tuesday. If she is unable to appear in Boston the Grand Jury will consider other evidence, including the reports of auditors who have been at work on the books of the Boston Store.

The Simpson-Crawford Corporation, incorporated in Albany on Thursday with a capital stock of $3,500,000, to do business in a department store, yesterday elected the following officers: Alexander McLachlin, President of the O'Neill-Adams Company, President; Frederick W. Wakefield, Vice President; J. S. Dale, Secretary, and J. T. Ochiltree, Assistant Treasurer. Announcements have been made that the Simpson-Crawford store will be opened on Monday.

One of the first acts of the Directors of the Simpson-Crawford Corporation was to vote unanimously to instruct the Treasurer to pay to the Sick Benefit Association of that store its small fund that was deposited in the private bank of Siegel and Vogel. The fund was made up of an assessment of the employes of 2 per cent. of their weekly wages each month. During the holiday season the assessment was raised to 4 per cent. of their weekly wages.

Henry Siegel has retained Lemuel E. Quigg as counsel to represent him in the divorce action begun against him by Mrs. Marie Vaughn Siegel, who has named two co-respondents.

BARNES SAYS 'BOSS' IS LIBEL AND SUES

OPEN LETTER OF MARCH 23

Anderson Called on State Chairman to Have Optional Local Prohibition Bill Passed.

William Barnes, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, through his attorneys, Ivins, Wolff & Hoguet, began a suit for libel yesterday against William H. Anderson, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of the State of New York. Mr. Barnes, in his complaint, asks for $5,000 damages, together with the costs of the action. The suit is based upon an open letter to Mr. Barnes which Mr. Anderson gave out for publication on March 23 in which he accused the State Chairman of using his influence to kill the Optional Local Prohibition bill at the last session of the Legislature.

In his bill of complaint Mr. Barnes states that he resides in the township of Guilderland, Albany County; that he is a publisher; that for three years he has been Chairman of the Republican State Committee and is a representative from New York State of the Republican National Committee. Mr. Anderson began his letter by referring to the State Chairman as the "Boss of the Liquor End of the Republican Party," and the plaintiff, in objecting to the word "Boss," gives it this definition:

"Here used as an odious and opprobious epithet in common use by those whose cry is 'Down with the Bosses,' meaning thereby those who, through their influence and position in recognized political parties, dominate and control nominations made by such parties or appointments to office, and through such domination and control in procuring nominations and appointments, improperly, immorally and illegally influence or attempt to influence the representatives of such parties in their public office to perform acts in violation of their oath of office and against the general welfare, and to surrender and subordinate their own will to those of such 'Bosses'; one who dispenses places, rewards the loyal, punishes the mutinous, concocts schemes and negotiates treaties; a political leader who compels public officers to do as he wants."

In his open letter Mr. Anderson called upon Mr. Barnes to have Assemblyman Hinman, the floor leader, suspend the rules if necessary and have the bill reported out of committee and passed, and Mr. Barnes in his complaint continues:

"That defendant published said libels maliciously and with intent thereby to induce the plaintiff unlawfully to use his influence in procuring the passage of said bill, and for the purpose of defaming and injuring the reputation and legitimate political influence and activity of the plaintiff in the performance of his duty of citizenship.

Mr. Barnes said last night:

"My purpose in bringing an action for libel against Mr. Anderson, who has charged me with having, unlawfully and immorally, defeated a bill pending in the Assembly, and who, at the same time, called upon me to intervene in the same manner in an effort to resuscitate it, is to demonstrate that I will not permit a charge of this kind to go unchallenged. I hold that I have no function as Chairman either to favor or oppose measures pending before the Legislature, except such as the party itself may be committed to or had declared against, in which case my support or opposition should be open and above board and without any improper or illegal exercise of any influence which I as a party official may have.

"Each member of the Legislature should be responsible to himself and to his own constituents, and to no one else. Popular government breaks down when an outside agency is able to control the action of the representatives of the people chosen to the Legislature. The existence of such an agency brings the Legislature into disrepute and contempt. It is true that members of the Legislature at times have endeavored to hide behind such an agency—existent or imaginary—and are themselves open to blame for the creation of the impression that they are irresponsible.

"It will be made clear that Mr. Anderson's allegations are false, and that he endeavored by threat to induce me to superimpose his will upon the minds of members of the Legislature, thus involving me, had I the power to do so, in a violation of the very principle which I have here set forth and to which I know all thinking people adhere."

VETOED WAREHOUSE BILL.

Glynn Thought He Saw a "Joker" in Proposed Amendment.

ALBANY, April 3.—Gov. Glynn to-day vetoed a bill to amend the business law because he thought it contained a "joker."

The present law in relation to elevators and warehouses in cities of 130,000 and over, specifies that not more than five-eighths of a cent a bushel shall be charged by their owners. The amendment would have permitted the fixing of the fee by "any person, co-partnership, or corporation, or association of persons, co-partnerships and corporations, or any of them."

The Governor thought corporations owning warehouses and elevators might organize under this protecting clause and evade the original law.

Mules to Stay on the Canals.

ALBANY, April 3.—The mule will not be superseded by motor trucks, for some time at least, in so far as furnishing motive power for canal boats is concerned. Attorney-General Carmody to-day informed Duncan W. Peck, Superintendent of Public Works, that he was without authority to grant the application of a corporation which desired to operate a line of motor vehicles for towing purposes.

STRICKEN IN CAR, DIES.

Joseph Seidenberg, Cigar Manufacturer, Victim of Apoplexy.

Joseph Seidenberg, a cigar manufacturer with offices at 24 West Broadway, was stricken with apoplexy on a surface car at Park Place and West Broadway at 7 o'clock last night. He became unconscious and died half an hour later in the Hudson Hospital.

There were no cards or letters in Mr. Seidenberg's clothes and his identity was established by the tailor's label in the lining of his coat. Detective Clare of the Greenwich Street Station communicated with Mr. Seidenberg's son, John Seidenberg, who took charge of the body.

Mr. Seidenberg was 74 years old. At the hospital his address was given as 123 Post Avenue.

Massachusetts Eugenic Law Favored

BOSTON, April 3.—A bill to establish a eugenic marriage law was favorably reported by a Legislative Committee to-day. The measure is similar to the Wisconsin law and would require a physical examination and certain tests by physicians before the issuance of a marriage license.

WITNESSES BARRED AT DR. PRICE'S TRIAL

ONLY TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

Come from Secret Hearing Complaining of Cross-examination and Tell of Proceedings.

The first day of the trial of the Rev. Dr. Jacob Embury Price, pastor of the Washington Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, who has been accused of "unministerial conduct" by several men and women of his congregation, went by yesterday without much progress in the taking of testimony, but with severe denunciation of the minister by witnesses and would-be witnesses and complaints by them that they were treated unfairly by the Ecclesiastical Court. The court, which sat in a room of the Metropolitan Temple, took testimony in secret and declined to issue any statement regarding the trial.

Many of the witnesses, however, after they had left the trial chamber, told freely what they had testified or had wanted to testify.

Several of them said that they had been approached when it became known that they intended to testify against Dr. Price and had been threatened with everything from "inconvenience" to "a life of misery" if they backed up their accusations on the witness stand. Every person who came from the trial room after going in to testify was indignant with the court, some saying that irrelevant and insulting questions had been asked them and others that they had not been allowed to give their testimony in full.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur Jamieson, pastor of the Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, who was at the trial representing the New York Methodist Episcopal Conference, now sitting, by which the Ecclesiastical Court was appointed, said that the charge that the court was attempting to "whitewash" Dr. Price was "outrageous." All the testimony that had been excluded, with the exception of that offered by one woman, he said, was mere "gossip" and "hearsay evidence." He said no questions had been asked any witness that were not justifiable. It was natural, he said, that any man "practically on trial for his life," as Dr. Price was, should attempt to discredit the testimony of the witnesses against him.

Dr. Price, who attended his trial, was represented before the court by the Rev. Dr. Frank J. Belcher, Superintendent of the Five Points Mission. His legal counsel is ex-Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss, and Claude Doré of 40 Exchange Place is legal counsel for the complaining witnesses and himself a complainant. Both were excluded from the trial room. Mr. Moss did not go to the Metropolitan Temple at all, but Mr. Doré took charge of his side of the trial from an anteroom.

The first witness of the day was Mrs. E. J. Leger, formerly a member of the Washington Heights Church, but now living at 699 Beck Street, the Bronx. She testified, she said, that she had accused Dr. Price of "amorous conduct" toward herself on several occasions and had specified that one day in May, 1912, he had come to her apartment and found her dressed in a kimono. She said that he made improper advances and that she escaped from the room after a struggle with him.

Resents Cross-examination.

Mrs. Leger was especially indignant because of the cross-examination to which she was subjected. She was asked, she said, whether Wilbur F. Bruce, one of Dr. Price's opponents, had ever been in her rooms, whether she had not frequented cafés, whether she had ever taught dancing, and whether she did not dance the "new dances." She answered all of the questions in the negative except the last, admitting that she sometimes danced a few of the "new dances."

Mr. Bruce, who was in the witness room, also denied that he had ever been in Mrs. Leger's room, and attacked the Ecclesiastical Court for "putting the witnesses on trial, and not the defendant."

The second witness was Mrs. Claude Doré, wife of the counsel for the complainants. She is one of the signers of the complaint against Dr. Price and reaffirmed her statements in the complaint in which she charged the minister with kissing her and other conduct "unbecoming his calling." She and Mrs. Leger were the only two witnesses heard by the court. The next witness called was Claude Doré, but he was not allowed to testify on the ground that he had nothing to say except what had been told him by his wife and others.

Not Allowed to Testify.

The next witness sent in by Mr. Doré was Mrs. Hilma Dohl, a seamstress, of 601 West 140th Street. She was not one of the signers of the original complaint, but volunteered her testimony yesterday after she had read of the charges against Dr. Price in the newspapers. She prepared her charges in writing and submitted them as a supplemental complaint, but the court ruled that her testimony could not be admitted under the Methodist law, as it had not been filed before the trial began. Her complaint, it was said, will be presented to the Methodist Conference to-day, which will refer it to the court if it is deemed relevant and material. In such an event Mrs. Dohl will be permitted to testify at the trial to-day.

In her written complaint she accused Dr. Price of "imprudent and unministerial conduct, sinful tempers and words, and conduct in violation of the moral law." She specified that in the Spring of 1911 she went to the parsonage on church business and was insulted by him there. He embraced her, she said, and attempted to reassure her by saying, "I am a widower and you are a widow, and we can be of comfort to each other." She told him he had better get married again, she said, and then, she added, "I wrenched myself loose and fled from the house in tears."

Mrs. Dohl said that she intimated her intention of testifying against Dr. Price several days ago, and that a man and a woman had approached her and warned her that she would "spend her life in tears" if she persisted in her purpose. Mr. Doré affirmed yesterday that he had not summoned Mrs. Dohl, and had not, in fact, heard of her existence until she voluntarily appeared at the Metropolitan Temple to testify. He contended that under the Methodist law her testimony should have been admitted.

Ivin N. Kelso of 566 West 162d Street, formerly a Methodist preacher in Detroit, Mich., and at present a law student in this city, went into the courtroom to testify in behalf of his sister-in-law, Miss Christine Schonhelt, now of Detroit, whose name has hitherto been mentioned in the case as "Miss C." He could not afford, he told the court, to pay Miss Schonhelt's expenses from Detroit to New York, but he had a letter from her in which she made charges against Dr. Price, and he was prepared, he said, to testify of his own knowledge to "the great spiritual harm" his sister-in-law had suffered through her association with Dr. Price.

Threatened with "Inconvenience."

He was not allowed to testify at all, however, on the ground that he could give only "hearsay evidence." He said that his sister-in-law was prepared to put her charges in the form of a deposition, but that the court had ruled that it would not be admitted as evidence, because counsel for defense would have no opportunity to cross-examine Miss Schonhelt. Mr. Kelso also had a letter from his sister-in-law in which she said she had been threatened with "inconvenience" by a woman.

After the adjournment of the court a wordy meeting took place between Dr. Jamieson and Mr. Doré in the witnesses' room. In the presence of the witnesses and newspaper reporters Mr. Doré accused Mr. Jamieson of being the prosecuting attorney in the case and at the same time of attempting to suppress evidence against Dr. Price. Mr. Jamieson hotly retorted that he was not the prosecuting attorney and that he had suppressed no legal evidence.

Those in charge of the defense of Dr. Price would say little yesterday. In answer to a rumor that he had withdrawn from the case, Mr. Moss said:

"I certainly have not withdrawn and I do not intend to. I am Dr. Price's counsel because I am his friend. I have known him for many years and I have the utmost confidence in him."

The trial will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock in the Metropolitan Temple. Last night persons interested in the prosecution made every effort to have Mrs. Lillian Miller, of 189 Claremont Avenue, on hand to testify to-day. She is now in Baltimore with her sick son. She has made charges against Dr. Price to Allan MacRossie, District Superintendent of the church in New York, it is said, but her direct testimony before the Court is wanted by the prosecution.

The Rev. Ralph Welles Keeler, Assistant Editor of the Sunday School Publications of the M. E. Church, gave out a statement last night in defense of the Ecclesiastical Court and its manner of conducting the case.

"Thus far," he said, "the trial of the Rev. J. E. Price, Pastor of Washington Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, before the tribunal of the New York Conference, has brought forth no testimony such as the stories given out in advance by the aggrieved members of the little band attacking him seemed to promise.

"The method of procedure in such a trial is for charges signed by the complainants to be placed in the hands of the District Superintendent. Upon this being done the District Superintendent must write to the complainants for a copy of specifications for himself and the accused. The Conference of which the minister is a member then appoints a committee to try the accused and a counsel for the complainant and a counsel for the accused, both of whom must be ministers. The Presiding Bishop appoints a member of the Conference to represent him at the trial. Both the charges and the specifications are turned over to the trial committee.

"The only witnesses on hand to-day competent to testify were Mrs. Claude Doré and Mrs. Leger. Because of the few witnesses available to the complainants, the committee, with the hearty acquiescence of the counsel for the defense, voted to keep the trial open until 10 A. M. to-morrow to give the prosecution time to get new witnesses if they are able."

WOULD UNITE CONFERENCES.

Methodists to Vote on Radical Change in Government.

At the meeting of the New York Methodist Episcopal Conference yesterday in the Eighteenth Street M. E. Church, the Rev. Dr. J. Lewis Hartsock, pastor of the Union M. E. Church, in Forty-eighth Street, introduced a resolution favoring the combining of the Conferences of New York, Brooklyn, and Staten Island. He said that this action contemplated "one of the most radical movements in the history of local Methodism," but he urged it as necessary for efficiency and economy in church government. The resolution was indorsed by the Reverends Allan MacRossie, George P. Eckman, Wallace MacMullen, and E. S. Tipple. It will be acted upon to-day.

The Rev. Dr. N. Dwight Hillis of Brooklyn, addressed the Conference yesterday afternoon on the subject of "The Strategic Note in Modern Missions," and Dr. F. C. Iglehart and William H. Anderson spoke last night on the anniversary of the Church Temperance Society.

The Laymen's Association met yesterday morning and afternoon in the Stephen Merritt Building, Eighth Avenue and Nineteenth Street, and a conference on the subject of co-ordinating the work of local church societies was held in the Eighteenth Street Church in the afternoon.

M'KAY TESTIFIES AGAINST GILLEN

Police Head Says He Warned Inspector Four Times About Vice Conditions.

OFFERED "CLEAN-UP" AID

Places Raided by Costigan Not on "Suspected List"—Gillen's Work Praised by Clergymen.

Police Commissioner McKay personally took the stand yesterday at Police Headquarters at the trial of James H. Gillen, the Inspector of Police, whom he suspended on charges of failing to suppress disorderly resorts in the lower Tenderloin. The Commissioner was a severe witness against Gillen, and brought out some interesting data bearing on Police Headquarters and its relation to the vice situation in the administration of Commissioner Waldo.

It appears that Mr. McKay had his eye on Gillen last August when he was the acting head of the Police Department. Mr. Waldo was traveling in Europe then and Mr. McKay called Gillen before him. He told Gillen that he had received many complaints about disorderly resorts in his district. He wanted an explanation from Gillen, and Gillen, apparently, didn't furnish a satisfactory one.

Mr. McKay then summoned Gillen again and gave him five days within which to make preparations for a "clean-up." He offered the Inspector any of the investigators at Police Headquarters whom he might want to aid him. He told the Inspector that if he didn't hurry up and do something he would send a squad of raiders from Police Headquarters into the lower Tenderloin to get evidence. The Commissioner testified that he had frankly warned Gillen that if his men got evidence charges would be preferred.

In the meantime Commissioner Waldo returned from his vacation in Europe and Mr. McKay again assumed the rôle of First Deputy Police Commissioner.

When Mr. Waldo got out of the department and Mr. McKay became Commissioner the Gillen case was revived. Mr. McKay once more called Gillen before him. Again he warned him and told him that he must get busy and do something. He warned him a third and a fourth time, principally regarding hotel conditions in his district, and finally the axe fell.

Mr. McKay produced the original monthly reports made by Gillen to the department from September to February. Assistant Corporation Counsel Stover, who is prosecuting the Gillen charges, brought out that none of the twenty or more places against which evidence was gathered by Lieut. "Honest Dan" Costigan and his squad, was on Gillen's "suspected list." The Commissioner was asked whether he had rescinded a rule of the department that police investigators should not enter hotel rooms with women. He said that he had never heard such a rule and that the only rule pertaining to investigators was that they should not degrade themselves in getting evidence.

Three clergymen were called by the prosecution during yesterday's two sessions and each told of the bad reputation of certain hotels and cafés in Gillen's district. Two, however, said much in favor of Gillen's record and said that he had kept the lower Tenderloin much cleaner than it had been under a number of other Inspectors.

The clergymen were the Rev. Rather Maurice McMahon of St. Vincent de Paul Church, Twenty-third Street near Sixth Avenue; the Rev. Lee Beattie of the Madison Square Church House, Third Avenue and Thirtieth Street, and the Rev. Dr. Robert Bachman, Jr., of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, Broadway and Tenth Street.

Father McMahon was asked about Tekulsky's café at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street, and said that it had a bad reputation in the neighborhood and among his parishioners.

The Rev. Mr. Beattie said that he knew that the Madison Square Hotel, at Twenty-fourth Street and Sixth Avenue, had a bad reputation, but that he had no first-hand information against it. He had seen no change in Gillen's district recently, he said.

Dr. Bachman shook hands with Gillen when he entered the trial room. He was called by Mr. Stover, and said that he had formerly been Chairman of the Vice Committee of the Gramercy Neighborhood Association. He said that the Hotel Cumberland on Third Avenue had a bad reputation, but that he had never received any complaints about it.

Bruce Ellison, attorney for Gillen, made Dr. Bachman his own witness, and brought out that Gillen had acted on several complaints made by Dr. Bachman to the complete satisfaction of the latter. Gillen had suppressed no less than three disorderly resorts on the east side, of which Dr. Bachman had had reports from the Neighborhood Association, the lawyer showed. Dr. Bachman spoke highly of the work which Gillen did at his request.

When the trial is continued on Monday morning at 10 o'clock, Mr. Stover will present more citizens who are expected to tell of disorderly resorts. In the afternoon, it is expected, Mr. Ellison will begin to offer his side of the case.

TAX COMMISSIONER QUITS.

Frederick B. Shipley Appointed to Succeed Edward W. Allen.

Edward W. Allen, who was appointed Commissioner of Taxes by Mayor Mitchel, resigned on Feb. 26, to take effect on March 1, it became known yesterday when the Mayor made public Mr. Allen's letter. The Mayor kept the matter secret until he could find a successor, and yesterday he appointed Frederick B. Shipley of 615 East Eighteenth Street, Brooklyn, to the place. Mr. Shipley is President of the International Wholesale Dry Goods Company and was a member of the Fusion Executive Committee.

In his letter Mr. Allen said he resigned because he found it necessary to devote his entire time to his private business. He is the New York representative of an insurance company.

"I cannot afford to abandon my own business, which is my life's work, and I am obliged to relinquish public affairs to those who can give them the exclusive time and attention they should have. I do not care to profit at the public expense, and to the detriment of the public service," wrote Mr. Allen. In reply the Mayor wrote:

"While I regret your decision, allow me to say that your point of view has not been entirely common among public officials in the past, and that your attitude in this matter does you much credit."

The salary is $7,000 a year. Mr. Allen is a Progressive, and Mr. Shipley an Independent Democrat.

LOOT A BUILDING, THEN SET IT AFIRE

Police Discover Fire in Crosby Street Lofts After Thieves Leave It.

BOXES BURNING ON FLOOR

Doors Leading to Every Loft Smashed—Amount Stolen Not Yet Learned.

What the police believe to have been an attempt of burglars to burn down the five-story loft building at 18 Crosby Street and 452 Broadway after the three occupied floors had been looted was discovered last night by Patrolman Fisher of the Mulberry Street Station. Fisher was passing the Crosby Street side of the building and noticed a rope dangling from a fire escape. He rapped his stick on the sidewalk, and Sergt. Barret, Patrolman Bruns, and several other policemen of the Mulberry Street Station came in answer to the signal.

With Bruns leading, the policemen climbed the rope and entered the loft of M. Kabat & Son, manufacturers of children's dresses, on the first floor above the ground. They discovered a pile of broken paper boxes and other inflammable material burning in the middle of the floor. With fire buckets from the wall they extinguished the blaze and then made a tour of the building. They found the door leading to every loft smashed in and other evidences of burglary throughout the building. Gutman Brothers, manufacturers of silk hosiery and underwear, occupy the ground floor, and Joseph Kaplan & Brothers, shirts, are on the top floor.

Whether the burglars obtained any money or only merchandise the police were unable to say last night. They believe that the thieves concealed themselves in the building before it was locked for the night, and then, after every one else had gone, lowered their loot and themselves by the rope from the fire escape, first starting the fire which was intended to burn the building and hide any trace of the burglary.

$500 GONE, CHILD ARRESTED

Child Says He Threw Away Money, According to Police.

Henry Kimble, ticket agent of the downtown subway station at Lenox Avenue and 135th Street, missed the contents of a canvas bag, which held his day's receipts of $500 in bills and $30 in silver, at 6 o'clock last night, just after Albert Ackerman, a negro, 9 years old, whom he had employed as his lunch messenger, had left his booth.

Detectives Dukeshire and Kerr of the Lenox Avenue Station arrested Ackerman at his home, 509 Lenox Avenue. He told them, they said, that he had gone to a motion picture theatre nearby, and had thrown the money away when he saw Andrew O'Connor, a gateman at the subway station, enter the theatre. He said two other negro lads he knew picked up the money and ran from the theatre, according to the detectives.

A piano player in the theatre said he had seen two negro boys run from the place with their hands full of bills.

Detectives Dukeshire and Kerr late at night arrested Leonard Blanks, 12 years old, a negro and his brother, Arthur, 11, in their home at 174 West 135th Street, on charges of being implicated in the theft. According to the detectives, the two boys admitted their share in the proceedings but said they had lost the money. With Ackerman they were taken to the rooms of the Children's Society.

GALES DELAY THE LINERS.

Rough Weather on the Atlantic Brings Ships In Late.

Atlantic liners are experiencing exceedingly rough weather this week, and are all arriving from one to two days late. Capt. Poncelet of the French liner France sent a wireless message to his agents yesterday that the ship would be late in arriving owing to strong gales, which had compelled him to go at reduced speed since Wednesday. She will not be here until tomorrow morning.

The Cunarder Mauretania was delayed by the weather, and did not arrive in Quarantine until 9:45 o'clock last night, twenty-four hours late, and will be at her pier early to-day. The American liner St. Louis was twenty-four hours late with the mid-week mails, arriving yesterday forenoon, instead of on Thursday.

TWO RUN DOWN BY AUTOS.

Old Man on Fifth Avenue and Boy on Death Avenue May Die.

Thomas Gale, 80 years old, of 1,025 Second Avenue, while crossing Fifth Avenue at Twenty-eighth Street last night, was struck by an automobile owned by Lord & Taylor and operated by Andrew Kagella of 241 Hull Street, Brooklyn. Persons who saw the accident said the aged man apparently was confused by traffic, and got in the path of the automobile. At Bellevue, where he was taken in the automobile, it was found that he had suffered a concussion of the brain, from which he had slight chance of recovery.

John Morten, 9 years old, of 544 West Fifty-seventh Street, stopped directly in the path of an automobile at Eleventh Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street last night, and was struck and perhaps fatally injured. The automobile was owned by Samuel Bullard of 88 Central Park West, and was driven by Irving Clark of 211 West End Avenue. The boy was taken in the motor to Roosevelt Hospital.

TRUSTED AGENT ACCUSED.

Young Man Who Handled Large Sums Held for Taking Purse.

Irving Wingate, with the Marcus Loew Theatres for the last three years, during which he is said to have been trusted with large sums of money, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Appleton in the West Side Court, charged with robbing Mrs. Lena Rinaldo of 181 West 110th Street. Wingate was held in $1,000 bail, furnished by Joseph M. Schenck, who told the Magistrate that Wingate, while acting as his confidential agent in the employ of Marcus Loew, had handled large amounts of cash, and had been in charge of all contracts.

Wingate, who gave his age as 20, and his home as 1,526 Boston Road, the Bronx, was arrested on an uptown platform in the Ninety-sixth Street Subway Station on Thursday night by Detective Finn. The detective said he saw Wingate, while concealing his hand with a newspaper, reach for the handbag of Mrs. Rinaldo. Finn informed her that her handbag was open, and Mrs. Rinaldo missed her purse containing $2. Finn said he followed Wingate when he boarded a Lenox Avenue train, and saw a purse and key, identified later by Mrs. Rinaldo, fall to the floor. The prisoner admitted having seen the purse and key but denied he took them from Mrs. Rinaldo's handbag. The detective took the prisoner to Police Headquarters, and on the way, he said Wingate attempted to bribe him with $100 to let him go.

PRISON FOOD FOR ALL IN THE CITY JAILS

PUTS END TO PETTY GRAFT

Protests from Those Who Have Been Thriving on Supplies Sent to the Prisoners.

To end the grafting of keepers and prevent the smuggling of whiskey, morphine, cocaine, and other contraband goods into the city prisons Commissioner of Correction Katharine B. Davis yesterday ordered that henceforth no prisoners be allowed to send outside for their food. The order applies to the Tombs, Raymond Street Jail in Brooklyn, and the Jefferson Market Prison. To make the order more effective, Dr. Davis further ordered that no prisoners be allowed to keep money in their possion, whether they were convicted or awaiting trial.

The order produced a howl of protest among those runners who have heretofore been thriving off the supplying of meals from outside the prison. They were loud in their questionings of the Commissioner's fairness or authority to issue such an order. But Commissioner Davis smiled and said she hadn't any doubt of the legality of the order, nor of its efficacy.

"If there is sufficient presumption of guilt to warrant a Magistrate's holding a person in the Tombs, the person so held should comply with whatever regulations we see fit to make for the best interests of the prison," she said. "I find that various sorts of implements and tools used in attempted escapes are smuggled into the prison with the food brought to prisoners, and that the forbidden dope and other contraband is likewise so smuggled in to them.

"The caterer inside the prison will hereafter submit a printed schedule of prices, and all the portions of food will be weighed, so that a prisoner will know he is getting his money's worth when he buys anything. The money he has turned over to the prison authorities will be kept as in a bank, and the amount of his purchases deducted therefrom. There will be no exorbitant tipping of keepers. The caterer will also sell standard brands of tobacco at reasonable prices."

QUINN NOT A CANDIDATE.

Would Not Accept Place on Public Service Board, He Says.

Thomas J. Quinn, Vice President of the Bronx National Bank, who was a candidate for Public Service Commissioner to succeed John E. Eustis, announced yesterday that he did not desire the place and would not accept it if offered to him. He said:

"I ceased to be a candidate when the Governor offered the Commissionership to Surrogate Schuls, and should the latter decline it and the Governor appoint me I would not accept. The persistence of some of my friends in continuing to regard me as a candidate and the publication in THE TIMES to-day of the intimation that I was still one of the candidates have annoyed me, as I intend to devote my work exclusively to the banking business.

"Through reports from Albany I have been mentioned erroneously as being interested in some contracting business, which may have affected my application for the position," said Mr. Quinn. "Though it is of no consequence now, as I have withdrawn my application, I want to say that I am not interested in any contracting firm or business aside from the financial affairs of the bank."

TRACTION MEN INDICTED.

Terre Haute Officials Charged with Robbing Union—Out on Bail.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 3.—T. F. Grover, manager of the Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern Traction Company, and Edward J. Davis, Auditor of the company, indicted by the Grand Jury here to-day on charges of burglary and receiving stolen goods, were arrested this afternoon and released on bond. Grover was required to furnish bail of $3,000 on the burglary charge, and $1,000 on the charge of receiving stolen goods. The bond of Davis was fixed at $1,000.

David Masterson, indicted with the traction officials and now held under bond of $25,000 on charges of conspiring to dynamite the home of Special Judge Blankenbaker, was already in jail.

The three men are alleged to have entered the room of C. J. Colgan, an organizer for the street car men's union, and to have taken several documents pertaining to union affairs.

ALBANY, April 3.—Edward J. McGoldrick, Assistant Corporation Counsel of New York, conferred to-night with Gov. Glynn in regard to the Foley-Maier Water bill, which is opposed by the New York City authorities. It is believed the bill may prevent New York City from supplying Catskill water to parts of Kings and Queens Counties now being supplied by private companies. Neither the Governor nor Mr. McGoldrick would discuss the result of the conference. Gov. Glynn will take no action until the end of next week. A public hearing will be held by the Governor next Friday.

TWINS MEET HERE ON WORLD TOUR

G. W. and E. P. W. Walker Started in Different Directions from Australia.

MISTAKEN FOR EACH OTHER

They Agree That Woman Suffrage and Labor Movement Have Been Bad for Their Commonwealth.

Pierre, the maitre d'hotel of the Ritz-Carlton, happened to pass by the manicuring department of the hotel yesterday morning when he saw inside a man he thought he knew.

"Good morning, Mr. Walker," he said, "I hope you have enjoyed your week in New York?"

"Just got here yesterday," was the reply. "You must be mistaking me for my brother."

Pierre apologized and withdrew.

A little later he accosted a man in the Forty-sixth Street lobby of the hotel.

"Good morning, Mr. Walker," he said. "Do you know I mistook your brother for you just now in the manicure department."

"No you didn't," was the reply. "That was myself."

Pierre apologized again, and retired, scratching his ear.

A little later, Luigi, the head waiter of the grill room, was startled to hear a man he thought he knew say: "So this is the place where one lunches, is it?"

"But Mr. Walker," said Luigi, with a bow, "you have already lunched here several times."

"First time I have seen the room," replied the other. Luigi gasped, happened to look past the man he had addressed, and gasped again, for he beheld another man who was the exact counterpart of the first.

With these few words, let there be introduced the Walker twins, of Sydney, who are famous in Australia, and whose lives have contained a succession of practical jokes and spelled continuous mistaken identity.

Lest it be gathered that the Walker twins may be seen soon on the stage of one of the local variety houses, it must be explained that they are here simply on a pleasure trip. Neither has to work, and one, whose name is G. W., doesn't. The other, whose front initials are E. P. W., is a stock broker by occupation. Several months ago both started out from Sydney in opposite directions, planning to meet in New York. E. P. W. took a P. & O. steamer and headed for Suez, while G. W. made for San Francisco. E. P. W. stopped in England to do a bit of motoring. G. W. halted in California to do a little automobiling, and he liked the climate out there so well that the other brother had been a week in New York when G. W. showed up here Thursday night.

The twins are 32 years old, and they confess that their resemblance has often served them well. If one had an engagement and didn't feel well, he would get the other to keep it in his place. To assist their immediate friends in telling them apart they used to part their hair on different sides. Then when they were at dances they would go upstairs and shift parts and programmes and try to "get something" on each other. Both affirmed vigorously yesterday that woman's suffrage had been a failure in Australia.

"You see, we've had it for a long time, and now we are reaping its evils," said E. P. W. "The women are responsible for the labor Government from which Australia is now suffering. You see, those labor chaps went around at election time and promised the shopgirls new hats. These girls voted as they were told, but, of course, they didn't get the millinery. The upper classes of women in Australia will not go to the polls. If the laboring woman doesn't go out and vote, her husband, if she has one, beats her. The latest evil we are threatened with is a union of domestic servants, which will demand an eight-hour workday. This will mean that nobody will be able to get along with two servants, and every household will have to have at least two shifts of help."

"Then," said the other Walker, there is the union of rural workers, which demands an eight-hour day and $2 for working on a farm."

"Yes," said E. P. W., "to show you what we thought of that, we had a property in the country which we were using for dairy purposes. On the basis proposed by the union we decided we couldn't make a fair profit, so we sold out the dairy stock and turned the land into fields for merely fattening cattle."

"If you give the laborites enough rope, they will hang themselves," philosophized G. W. "They have been spending money so recklessly that they are positively hurting Australia's credit in Europe."

"They have a working majority of one in the Federal House," explained E. P. W., and it looks as if Prime Minister Cook would apply for a dissolution of Parliament. Still, we have had a wonderfully rich harvest, and there has been plenty of wool, and the Labor Party has not been able to do the country much harm on that account. But, if we have such a thing as a severe drought again—and that has been partly discounted by the irrigation works we have put in—it will play the dickens with the Labor Party.

"Business is good in Australia. There are big openings out there for American farmers, with good land to be had at $4 an acre, and plenty of it. Dry farming experts would find a gold mine out there. When we left we hadn't had any results from the removal of the American tariff on wool. We are looking forward to supplying your Pacific Coast with frozen beef. As a matter of fact, all our best products go to London, mutton, and everything. Why, if you were to see a lot of beautiful apples on a tree in Australia and you wanted to buy some, the chances are you'd be told you would have to buy them through London. They don't save any of the best for the home markets.

"Mix-ups? I should say so," said G. W.

"All the time," said E. P. W. "Why, when I was in London a man picked my pocket because he thought I was my brother. I was standing in front of a bank where my brother was well known. I caught a man stealing my handkerchief and grabbed him. I was about to give him in charge to a bobby when it was explained that he was an employe of the bank who was on friendly terms with my brother.

"Yes, it is sometimes embarrassing, but we have had a great deal of fun out of it."

And then the Walkers marched into the restaurant together and made the other patrons sit up and figuratively rub their eyes as they saw two faces which made them think of those postcards where you look into a mirror while the camera snaps you.

CANNON SAILS TO 'BOIL OUT'

Film Concerns Will Show "Uncle Joe" and Angel Fish at Bermuda.

Joseph G. Cannon, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, who is known to most Americans as "Uncle Joe," will sail to-day for Bermuda on the Royal Mail Steam Packet Arcadian to "boil out," as he said. Two moving-picture concerns have booked passage on the steamer to get pictures of the ex-Speaker and to make films of the angel fish as they jump out of the water when the keeper of the small lake at Hamilton, Bermuda, blows the dinner horn.

The charge for seeing the fish eat at Hamilton is 25 cents, and it is said that the angel fish have been so well trained by the thrifty Bermudians that they stay at the bottom of the lake until the keeper knocks three times with his pole as a signal that the visitors have paid the entrance fee.

FINDS LONG-LOST DAUGHTER

Inspector Tedesco Awaits Girl from Hungary After Twenty Years.

Andrew J. Tedesco, Inspector of Immigration at Ellis Island, will be reunited to his daughter, Miss Maria Tedesco, on the arrival of the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria here to-day. He has not seen his daughter, who is 21 years old, since she was an infant.

In Hungary twenty-two years ago Mr. Tedesco married a young woman against the wishes of both their families. Three years later, after their daughter was born, business reverses forced Mr. Tedesco to emigrate to this country. His wife chose to stay in Hungary near her parents, and later the couple became divorced. Soon after this Mrs. Tedsco died.

Mr. Tedesco sought to obtain custody of the daughter, but he was unable to obtain information about her from any of his wife's relatives. He made many inquiries through friends in Hungary, but they could learn nothing, and he included that she had died. About twelve years ago Mr. Tedesco entered the Immigration Service here. He married again and had two children born in this country.

A few weeks ago the Police Department referred to the Ellis Island authorities a letter written in Hungarian, with the request that it be translated and returned. The letter was from Maria Tedesco. She wrote that she had read in a Budapest newspaper of an immigration case handled in New York City by Inspector Tedesco, and she thought he might be her father whom she had sought for many years. In conclusion she asked that the letter be turned over to Inspector Tedesco.

The following day Inspector Tedesco cabled to the young woman, who was teaching a school in a village in Hungary, that he was her father and was eager to have her join him in Austria. Arrangements for the girl's passage to this country were made immediately through the United States Consul General in Budapest, and a few days ago word was received that she had started for America on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria.

De Morgan Again and at His Best

In WHEN GHOST MEETS GHOST Mr. De Morgan appears to have repeated the success of his "Joseph Vance." The critics are being remarkably cordial and unanimous. The Times calls it "a fine romance" and adds "these are the people whom we shall place along with those of 'Joseph Vance,'" while Frederick Taber Cooper in The Bookman speaks of "its complicated and mysterious plot . . . . the big, fine, pathetic situation that looms up behind the multitude of happenings . . . a big, sane, eminently human story, done with an amplitude of means, a generosity of portrayal, a wealth of happy phrasing such as Mr. De Morgan has not equalled in any other book since the publication of 'Joseph Vance' . . . . inimitable child portraitures . . . . the thronging treasure-house of these pages." This novel already in its third large edition consists of "860 pages . . . . so alluring that you hate to skip."—Brooklyn Eagle. ($1.60 net.)

Coningsby Dawson's Romance of a Puritan-Pagan

The publication of his GARDEN WITHOUT WALLS, less than seven months ago, at once put its author among our foremost novelists. It had a quality characteristic of the approved poet who wrote it, and was "singularly touched to beauty."—(Chicago Record-Herald.) "All vivid with the color of life; a novel to compel not only absorbed attention but long remembrance."—(Boston Transcript.) "A novel of exceptional quality and interest . . . . appealingly human."—(Dial.) Its popularity continues undiminished and an eighth printing has been called for. ($1.35 net.) The author's FLORENCE ON A CERTAIN NIGHT and other Poems is to appear on April 25th.

Julie M. Lippman's Lovable, Plucky Irish-American

Her humor, pluck and lovableness are probably the qualities of MARTHA-BY-THE-DAY that have brought that book into its twelfth printing ($1.00 net) and its newer sequel MAKING-OVER-MARTHA already into its fourth. ($1.20 net.) "No sweeter humor has been written into a book," said The Hartford Courant of the earlier one, while of the sequel The Outlook said, "the delightful Irish-American philosopher, whose common-sense rivals that of Mrs. Wiggs," and The Brooklyn Eagle "Martha's imperturbable good humor, her good sense and her faculty for doing things and guiding people are qualities for which our readers will be the better."

This is a mystery story of adventure, rich in color and interest, by the master story-teller of the South Seas—a story that takes the reader into the tropic wilderness of New Guinea in the feverish quest of "the sorcerer's stone," a wonderful diamond. There is a suggestion both of Kipling and of Stevenson in the vivid, breezy story as it is told by Flint, and the net result will be to greatly widen Miss Grimshaw's already large circle of readers.

Illustrated. 12mo. Cloth. $1.20 net.

The Uttermost Farthing

By R. Austin Freeman, author of "The Mystery of 31, New Inn," etc.

A rare treat for lovers of mystery and adventure stories. When Humphrey Calloner—a specialist in criminal anthropology—dedicated his life to the apprehension and punishment of his wife's murderer, he "started something" that is absolutely new in mystery fiction. Mr. Freeman has created a curious and indescribable atmosphere, not only so weird and real, but so irresistible to the reader, that one is strongly reminded of Edgar Allan Poe.

AMERICAN SUCCESS IN SOUTH AFRICA

OUR GOODS WIDELY USED

Now Surpass German Articles—Johannesburg a Boom Town with Permanent Qualities.

E. N. Gunsaulus, American Consul at Johannesburg, South Africa, who has been home on leave of absence, is sailing to-day for England on his way to his post. Mr. Gunsaulus remarked yesterday that if there was one corner of the outside world where the American exporter was taking full advantage of his opportunities, it was in South Africa.

"There are many Americans in the various States of the Union of South Africa," said Mr. Gunsaulus at the Wolcott yesterday, "and in and about Johannesburg and Pretoria they are really numerous. There are as many as 600 registered at the consulate in the former town, and that by no means is a large share. There must be several thousand in that one locality.

"A considerable number are employed as superintendents of mines, and there are many assistant superintendents and experts of various kinds in the gold and diamond mines. You see, the gold reef extends for a distance of about thirty miles on either side of Johannesburg, and there are many different companies. Many of the big American manufacturing concerns, particularly those which make mining and agricultural machinery, have branches or agents there, and it is possible to get almost any kind of American-made article.

"The Germans are largely represented down there, too, and until comparatively a few years ago they outsold us, but we passed them, and are far ahead. One of the big mining companies is a German concern.

"The South African negro is very much like the American negro. Indeed, if one has known the old type of colored 'uncles' and 'mammies' in certain sections of the South, he can often find their counterparts among the Kaffirs. The blacks constitute the serving classes, and the men, even if they are 75 years old, are still known as 'boys.' There is still a great deal of talk about witchcraft among them, just as in some parts of the South it is still possible to find negroes who believe others 'put spells' upon them.

"Johannesburg, you might think, was something like a hustling mining town out West, but it isn't. It is a hustling place, all right, but the town is thoroughly cosmopolitan. They don't put up temporary makeshifts of improvements when they are doing anything in that line. The town has a Carlton hotel, which is run like the Carlton in London, and I can assure you that the place does not lag behind in the fashions and social customs. The tea dance and the tango and the one-step are danced there just as well as here or in London or Paris.

"Comparatively few people of Boer extraction live in Johannesburg in proportion to the population. These mostly cling to the rural districts. Living in Johannesburg is very expensive, though not nearly what it was ten years ago. Still, when the main supply of eggs and butter have to be brought all the way from Europe, that makes against cheapness. The cost of living has been reduced somewhat by the fact that cattle raising has been gone into extensively, and the meat supply of the Union is now raised within its borders, whereas formerly much of the meat had to be imported.

"There are good clubs and golf and the usual sports, and there is a great deal of entertaining. English theatrical companies come down there at intervals. Of course, it is a long way off from here. Most of the freight to South Africa goes direct from here, but, as there is not enough to fill steamers coming back, much of what does come has to go to Europe and be reshipped.

"I haven't seen any late predictions as to when the Cape-to-Cairo Railway would be completed. The southern section has got beyond the Belgian Congo, but there is still an interval of considerable length between its terminus and that of the northern section."

Miss Eleanor Gunsaulus, who has been attending school in Toronto for a year and a half, is going back to Johannesburg with her father. She says she is "crazy" to get back, because she has spent four years there, and she would rather live there than most anywhere else.

MAYOR IN ATLANTIC CITY.

Will Name McKay's Successor on His Return, It Is Said.

Mayor Mitchel went to Atlantic City yesterday afternoon to stay until next Monday. He took no action regarding the appointment of a successor to Police Commissioner McKay, but it was said that he intended to settle the matter soon after he returned.

Arthur Woods, the Mayor's Secretary, is still considered to be in the lead for the place. Some persons thought that the Mayor intended to appoint City Chamberlain Henry Bruere to the job, but friends of Mr. Bruere denied that he was being considered. The Chamberlain is content to stay in his present place, and it is said that he has convinced the Mayor that he will be of more value to the administration if he watches all the departments than if he is confined to one.

It was said also that the Mayor intended to appoint Clement J. Driscoll a Deputy Police Commissioner. Driscoll was a Deputy Commissioner under Commissioner Cropsey for a short time after he had won Mayor Gaynor's commendation as Commissioner of Weights and Measures. He has recently been doing work for the Bureau of Municipal Research, and Chamberlain Bruere, it is understood, would like to see him back in the Police Department.

If Arthur Woods is selected as Police Commissioner the chances are that Theodore Rousseau, Executive Secretary to the Mayor, will be the Mayor's private secretary, although Robert S. Binkerd, secretary of the City Club, is a candidate for the place.

SCHULZ MUM, GLYNN WAITS.

Meantime McCooey Is Reported to Have Man for Public Service Job.

ALBANY, April 3.—Gov. Glynn said to-day that he had received no word to the effect that Surrogate George M. S. Schulz of Bronx County would not qualify as a member of the Public Service Commission, to which he was appointed a week ago. He said he talked with the Surrogate over the telephone before sending in his name. Mr. Schulz said at the time that he did not want to take the office, but the Governor said he would be obliged to send his name to the Senate. Since that time the Governor has not heard from Mr. Schulz.

It is believed here that if the appointment is rejected the position may go to the Borough of Brooklyn. John H. McCooey, Democratic leader of Kings County, conferred with the Governor today, and is said to have urged a candidate for that county, in case Mr. Schulz should refuse to accept the position.

MISS BRANDT LOSES ANOTHER SKIRMISH

SURROGATE FOWLER UPHELD

Supreme Court Equity Suit Instituted to Attack Abrogation of Her Adoption.

Miss Florence Louise Brandt, the Davenport, Ia., kindergarten teacher, who is waging a legal contest to get half of the $16,000,000 estate of William Ziegler, the baking powder king, which went to her brother, William Ziegler, Jr., lost one of her skirmishes yesterday when the Appellate Division dismissed her appeal from a decision of Surrogate Fowler. The Surrogate had thrown out of court her petition to have him reinstate her as an adopted daughter of Mr. Ziegler. She removed herself in 1902 by electing to return to her father, George W. Brandt. At the time, Surrogate Thomas, now dead, abrogated her adoption.

In an opinion of remarkable brevity, written by Justice Scott, the Appellate Division unanimously adopted as its own the decision of Surrogate Fowler, in which he severely criticised Miss Brandt's present legal campaign, and denied Miss Brandt's main contention, namely, that her mother, whom her father divorced, was necessary party to the abrogation of her adoption.

One part of the decision indicated another avenue of attack open to Miss Brandt. This is a Supreme Court action in equity, which she has already instituted. In this action, the Appellate Division said yesterday Miss Brandt might attack the sufficiency of the consents to the abrogation of her adoption, on the ground that it was more of an administrative, than a judicial act, since a statute fully outlined and limited the powers of the adopting and abrogating officer.

Miss Brandt sought to revoke the abrogation of her adoption because it would put her in a better position to contest Mr. Ziegler's will. Her lawyers have indicated, however, that even if beaten in the Supreme Court suit to restore her to a daughter's position, as she has been in the Surrogate's proceedings, she will not abandon her efs to obtain an $8,000,000 share in Ziegler's estate. In papers already record, she has asserted that when Ziegler and his wife, E. Matilda der, adopted her and her brother was on the understanding that they s to share equally in Mr. Ziegler's perty at his death. This she said a contract, and, being in her or, could not be revoked, if the revoion were contrary to her interest, e she was a minor at the time of alleged abrogation and thus legally ward of the courts.

er father, George W. Brandt, is understood to be supporting her in her fight to obtain a share in her late foster-father's estate.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Mrs. George W. Brandt, stepmother of Florence Louise Brandt, who resides at 515 Wellington Street, refused to-night to comment on the court opinion. Miss Brandt's Chicago attorney, J. D. Walker, 187 North Clark Street, declared that he was surprised at the decision, but would make no comment until he had consulted with his New York representative.

FULLY LIABLE FOR BAGGAGE.

Railroads Can't Place Limit Without Specific Contract, Says Court.

ALBANY, April 3.—The Court of Appeals decided to-day that a railroad company cannot limit its liability for the loss of a passenger's baggage unless a specific contract is entered into.

This was held to-day in the case of William J. Healy of Schenectady. He checked his baggage at the local station of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, and when he returned found that it had been given to another person. He demanded full payment for his property to the amount of $70.10. This was more than the company's printed regulations say they will be responsible for, but, having signed no contract, Healy sued and won.

The Salamander

THE Salamander comes roving from somewhere out of the immense reaches of the nation, revolting against the commonplace of an inherited narrowness, neither sure of what she seeks nor conscious of what forces impel or check her.

She brings no letters of introduction, but she comes resolved to know whom she chooses.

She meets them all, the men of New York, the mediocre, the interesting, the powerful, the flesh-hunters, the brutes and those who seek only an amused mental relaxation.

She attracts them by hook or crook, in defiance of conventions, compelling their attention in ways that at the start hopelessly mystify them and lead to mistakes.

Then she calmly sets them right and forgives them.

The Salamander

A girl of the present day in revolt, adventurous, eager and unafraid; without standards, or home ties; with a passion to explore but not to experience, and a curiosity fed by the zest of life.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1914.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE DISTRICTS.

The announcement of the twelve districts into which the United States has been divided for the purpose of organizing the Federal reserve system should not be discussed as though it were something else than exactly that. For example, New York has no such grievance as it would have if the districts compartmented the business to be done in them. Regardless of what the Organizing Committee has done, individuals and corporations will continue to do their banking where they will. Member banks of the reserve system also will follow their trade where they must, regardless of their membership in the system. There will be a natural presumption in favor of their doing necessary business with the keeper of their Federal reserve, but they will establish what other banking relations they find convenient. If a New Jersey or a Connecticut or a Pennsylvania bank finds a New York deposit necessary in connection with its business it will have one. If that necessity puts such banks to the embarrassment of dividing their banking resources that will inconvenience them more than it will prejudice New York. It would be unfortunate and untrue to suppose that New York will assume an attitude of opposition because of the manner in which it has been treated. No original characterization of the intention of the Organizing Committee is necessary, since the subject was exhausted by Chairman Glass, who certainly is competent to speak on this point. He said, as quoted by one banker:

> I know very little about this subject, but this I am sure of, that we are going to try to deprive New York City of its prominence in the banking field by distributing the reserve more equitably throughout the country. In this manner we will take these funds out of the clutches of Wall Street.

To this enlightened purpose our distinguished townsman has lent himself with no manifestations of dislike, and the equitable distribution of reserves has resulted in an inequitable—because unbusinesslike—distribution of reserve districts. No reference is intended to the suggestions that some districts are inexplicable without reference to the membership of the districting committee, certainly excepting our distinguished townsman. He needs no defense of favoritism toward New York. The results are the subject of discussion, not the method in which the results were reached. All that the Organizing Committee needed was a census and a geography. So many men, so many acres, so many banks make a district. The district was erected accordingly, following State lines in some cases, and county lines in other cases. Notoriously this is not the way that business divides itself. It was absurd for our Chamber of Commerce, when it was considering the subject, to assemble statistics of bank clearings, with an analysis showing the nature of business from which the clearings arose. The Chamber of Commerce thought that the affiliations of trade were stronger than the relations of geography, or political divisions, and that such considerations ought to control. This method gave a prominence to New York which it was the object of the Legislators and the organizers to annul so far as possible, and they have done their best.

Nevertheless we look to the patriotism and the professional capacity of New York to do its part in good faith to make the reserve system successful, partly because it must be made to succeed, partly because it is not a demonstration that New York is prejudiced to any extent which it cannot remedy. There are several banks outside the Federal system which will overshadow the Federal bank, and competition with it is made easier by excessive subdivision of resources. It is the Federal system which is crippled, not the trade of New York. The trade of London is unapproachable, but the banking situation there is in some respects the same as that created for New York. The Bank of England is easily the first British bank, although many joint stock banks, without the circulation privilege, surpass it in volume of business, but not in quality of business. It is a futility, almost an imbecility, to carve New York to create reserve banks in cities without the trade or population of a New York City ward. It was possible to create only twelve districts, and there are ten times twelve cities aggrieved by the choices made. Clearly the situation is not a finality. The proposal to create more reserve districts may result in a decision to create fewer, through the difficulty of supporting banks of this sort in regions unsuited to this sort of banking. The present allotment of districts is purely theoretical, and upon considerations which will not ultimately control the practical working of the system. The Federal Reserve Board has superior authority, and is yet to be heard from.

THE WAIVER OF IMMUNITY.

State Engineer BENSEL is a sworn official of this State. He was asked by Mr. JOHN K. CLARK, counsel of the Assembly Investigating Committee, to sign a waiver of immunity before testifying about his official acts. Evidence has been adduced to show that contractors have been blackmailed for political purposes and great funds have been misused that should have been devoted to the economical building of the State's highways and canals. Mr. BENSEL has had official relations to these funds and public works. He refuses to sign the waiver; he falls back on his legal right to be protected if his testimony should show that he has committed a criminal act.

For this Mr. BENSEL gives two reasons—the request to sign a waiver is an "insult," and Attorney General CARMODY, who is his associate on the Canal Board, advises him to refuse to sign it. Presumably if Mr. CARMODY called to testify he, too, will insist on his privilege of immunity.

If these officials have done nothing contrary to their oaths of office, it cannot hurt them to sign a waiver of immunity. Experience has shown, notably in the Beef Trust prosecutions, that guilty men have been eager to testify in legal proceedings in the hope of getting an "immunity bath." It is natural that District Attorneys and investigating counsel should wish to avoid giving immunity baths to men in any way concerned with irregularities into which they are inquiring. By signing waivers of immunity official witnesses do a public service. Many perfectly upright men have signed them without incurring the slightest disgrace—quite the contrary—and they have been applauded for their decision. We think Mr. BENSEL and Mr. CARMODY would likewise be applauded if they should change their minds on this point. For they must see that they establish a precedent of which rascals may later take advantage.

THE "INFLUENCE" OF THE PRESIDENT.

The other day at the Republican Club luncheon, some of the members of Congress present intimated that the independence of that body was in these days unduly hampered by the influence of the Executive. President MCANENY, whose main object was to discuss the relations of the Executive and Legislature in our own State, and especially in our own city, ventured to suggest that the situation, alleged to exist in Washington was "pathetic" and required explanation. He could think of but two ways in which the President could exert much influence on Congress. One was by the soundness of his recommendations, which no one could complain of. The second was by the existence of "understandings" relating—to put it plainly—to the distribution of patronage. As to that he remarked:

> They overlook the second fact that if the influence of that other, "invisible," force is to be put down or curtailed, they have it within their power to curtail it. But I am afraid they don't want to very seriously. They rather like the chances that remain that the "understandings" will be cashed in, so far as they can be cashed in. They might begin, for instance, with the repeal of the Tenure of Office acts, which, since 1820 at least, have burdened the Executive with the duty of reviewing the bulk of the Presidential appointments every four years. They have been frequently urged to do that, but they do not like to, for some reason or other. Although the Constitution of the United States gives the power of appointment to the Executive in a vast number of cases, it does not say that that power shall be exercised once in four years, nor does it fail to leave opportunity to the Congress to put safeguards around the use of that power—even to limit its use. I merely throw that out as a suggestion. No one will say for a moment that it is either healthy or right that the use of the patronage should be so strong a factor in the turning out of legislation in any capital city. No one will so maintain. I don't myself see a great deal of difference between WALPOLE peddling one-hundred-pound notes in the House of Parliament and an Assistant Secretary of State peddling the promise of Consulships in our House of Representatives. It is a long story; I didn't mean to lug it in; but I was rather tempted to suggest, nevertheless, to those who complain of the growth of executive power and of the doubtful character of its use—that largely the remedy lies with them.

This really goes to the root of all the actual difficulty existing in the relations of the President and the Congress. It is not inherent in the provisions of the Constitution. It lies in the practice that has grown up. The Constitution gives to the President the power to appoint certain officers, including those defined by statute, with the advice and consent of the Senate. Since the time of ANDREW JACKSON in the Presidency the advice of the Senate has largely been confined to the recommendations of individual Senators, and the consent of the Senate has been given, as a rule, only when the nominations were acceptable to the Senators immediately interested. If the terms of the Presidential offices were indeterminate, changes would be made only for positive reasons. But the tenure of office laws that have made four years the general term open the way for a clean sweep during each Administration. And a clean sweep is the golden opportunity of the place hunters and the place-mongers

The subordinate civil service has been brought pretty well within the operation of the merit system; appointments for tested fitness are the rule. Removals except for reasonable cause are relatively rare, since there is little temptation to create vacancies that can only be filled by competitive tests of fitness. If Congress should repeal the tenure of office acts it would leave to the President ample authority to make changes in the offices having to do with the policy he may pursue, but it would make removals in less important cases much less frequent. It would break up in great degree that prostitution of the appointing power to party purposes which is the bane of the American system of administration. It was a good idea for President MCANENY, who has high authority in the discussion of this class of questions, to implant in the minds of the Republican Club and its guests a practical suggestion in this direction.

NOT IN THE PARKS.

The plan to establish in this city a chain of Museums of the Peaceful Arts, to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent, is admirable. The directors of the association formed for this purpose are leading men in the community. Museums wherein the development of the arts and industries may be studied in the best models have been of the highest advantage to progress in European capitals. Historic records are ill-conserved in this country, and one of the twenty projected museums would realize the aim of the Modern Historic Records Association, while all of them would bring its ideals to full fruition. They would be of great cultural value, showing concretely the history of the conveniences of civilization.

But no sites for these museums may be found in the public parks. Central Park is immediately spoken of. Those of the organizers who know that this would arouse strong public opposition think, nevertheless, that Riverside Park might serve—by reclaiming some land from the river. But no park should be touched.

Twenty museums, a building for the Academy of Design, a municipal opera house, a municipal theatre, a stadium, public swimming pools, skating rinks—how many hurried projects would come tumbling over each other to follow a single precedent of encroachment! There are men in this city rich enough to give sites as well as buildings for the Museums of the Peaceful Arts.

FEDERALIZATION AND LEGISLATION.

Sir EDWARD GREY'S views regarding the federalization of England acquire added interest when contrasted with Viscount MORLEY'S. Both use the United States as an example, to be followed according to GREY, to be shunned according to MORLEY. GREY argues that unless England is federalized the country "would go under "through the sheer inability of Par- "liament to transact its business." MORLEY'S view is that England should shudder at the horrible results of the facility of legislation exemplified by federalization in the United States. MORLEY regards this as an aboriginal and internal threat to our institutions, and he would preserve England from such a plague of legislation as ours. This is a consideration more enduring than the exigencies of the Irish situation, whose acuteness assuredly needs some remedy. To adopt federalization to placate Ireland is futile, unless it is to be carried through to the ultimate end. In that aspect federalization is of importance entitling it to be considered on its merits in principle, rather than as a political expedient. Thus far the British dominions or "nations" have been kept in a state of inferiority, something like our counties, rather than sovereignties, like our States, independent within constitutional limitations. MORLEY had been informed that within four years Congress had passed 10,000 acts, and he wonders how we endure the litigation which results from legislation by nearly fifty Legislatures.

Viscount MORLEY'S remarks are moderation itself, considering the provocation. New York State inherited the common law of England, but has passed 56,973 more laws. And New York is not the leader of legislation by any means. The addition of the output of laws by forty-eight Legislatures to the grist of Congress, which so surprised Viscount MORLEY, does indeed make a formidable total. Even Americans have been staggered by it. But there are two reasons why they expect their institutions nevertheless to survive, let us say, as long as the unfederated British Empire. One is that nobody is expected to obey all those laws. The percentage of mortality among American laws explains the high vigor of American institutions. The disadvantage of excessive litigation must be admitted, but it is offset by the ability to get things done if they are really necessary things. The excessive output of laws by Congress may be compared without disadvantage to the inability of Parliament to legislate at all. They have been observing our Federalism a full century, and they have not yet understood it. The proof is that they are unable to federate even the British Isles, not to mention the Dominions overseas. The settlement of the Irish question on the principles of Federalism would be purchased cheaply at the cost of even multitudinous laws, objectionable though they might be. The quieting of Ireland would be only one benefit. The removal of the Irish legislation to Dublin would allow the United Kingdom to get some laws passed for itself. Honors are easy between an excess of legislation and an inability to get necessary laws.

THE PISTOL LAW.

Sentences imposed by one Judge upon thirty-five persons, from fines of $25 to terms of three and six years or over in prison, put the community on notice that the Sullivan concealed weapons law is a dangerous statute to evade. Revolvers, blackjacks, slungshots, stilettos, and razors were found on the persons of those whom Judge ROSALSKY sentenced on Monday. Some of these weapons could have no innocent use, and by those who carried revolvers permits had not been sought. The convicted men were with some exceptions an ill-favored lot. The community will be safer for their being in jail.

But this law should be administered in a way to make it easy for any person of good character to get a license to carry a pistol in self-defense, or for the protection of his family and goods. The authorities have been remiss. The law provides that such a person, if a citizen of the United States, may obtain a written license "issued to him by a Police Magis- "trate * * * or by a Justice of "the Peace * * * or in such manner "as may be prescribed by ordinance."

A few licenses were issued by the Magistrates of this city, and then, since there was no provision whereby they might charge fees for the service, they referred all applicants to Police Headquarters; there, after inconvenience and expense, their prayers may be granted. In proportion to the trouble that this process causes, a certain disrespect for the law has been manifest.

But the law in terms permits the Aldermen to require the Magistrates to issue permits to carry weapons. There should be no charge for the formality. The passage of such an ordinance would at once remove the obstacle to honest men's—provided they are citizens—conforming to the law.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

For Them Death Has No Terrors.

That courage—that readiness to risk life in the performance of duty and the service of the public—which with the rarest of exceptions has always characterized the whole New York police force and done so much to outweigh its faults, was never better illustrated than in the episode which included the death of Detective GUARNIERI. He had but recently, and not wholly, recovered from terrible wounds received in making the arrest of a desperate criminal, yet he and his companion, Lieut. HAERLE, did not hesitate to follow into the Fitzgerald flat the man HORGAN, who had just committed one murderous assault and was known by them to be armed and much more than likely to resist capture with all the stupid ferocity of his class.

It was no fair and open battle in which these policemen engaged. They had to advance upon the object of their search as he crouched in darkness with leveled pistol, and to let him fire the first shot—a shot almost sure to find its mark. The mark it found was GUARNIERI, who fell mortally wounded, and it was only then that HAERLE could use his own revolver to avenge his companion, defend himself, and vindicate the law. He did it, promptly, skillfully, and effectively.

It is some satisfaction that the community is freed from the burden and peril of the murderer's existence, but the price paid for the relief is a heavy one, and so many of HORGAN'S stripe are left that the police are hardly safer than before. Woefully little is accomplished by the occasional "removal" of such a fully matured product of our social inaptitude as this man HORGAN was.

It is a curious and confusing fact that even HORGAN came to his death under the impulse of an emotion in itself commendable—the impulse of paternal affection. To his darkened mind the witness who had testified against his son deserved to be put out of the way. Confusing, also, is the attitude of the two FITZGERALDS, husband and wife, in whose flat HORGAN took refuge. They seemed to have an instinctive antagonism to the police, and did what they could to prevent them from achieving their purpose. Possibly their object was to protect the later intruders from what the FITZGERALDS knew might be death, but much more probably they wanted to save HORGAN from arrest, if they could, no matter what he had done. And that, from one point of view, was a sort of loyalty!

Answering a Foe of Latin.

A reader who evidently doesn't think much of Latin as a part of modern education makes against some recent commendation of that language, printed on this page, the point that the commendation itself had to be, or at any rate was, expressed in words the greater number of which were not of Latin origin. Selecting a single passage, he finds in it twenty-two Latin words and sixty-six that would be called Anglo-Saxon. So he wants to know what warrant there was for calling Latin "the muscular part" of English.

On looking over these lists one notices that the shorter one contains not a single duplication, while the other has so many that if they were removed it would cease to be the longer. Yet our critic insists that the Anglo-Saxon words were those that gave "motion and driving power" to the sentences he analyzed—that, therefore, they were the "muscular part" and the Latin merely the bones.

We cannot ourselves see it that way. There is not much "motion and driving power" in such words as "is," "a," "and," "but," "it," "the," "of," "to," "there," "shall" and "should," "that," "whose," "still," and "nevertheless," and the like. Yet these words comprise the bulk of the non-Latin words which our correspondent groups together.

There is a lot of what Mayor MITCHEL calls "bunk and moonshine" in the talk about pure Anglo-Saxon. In the 513,000 words presented by the Standard Dictionary in its latest edition, a few thousand only are Anglo-Saxon, and of these the ones most frequently used are of the kind that make the skeleton of the language—the very articles and connectives which our critic has enumerated. Within this flexible skeleton, material has been assimilated from almost every language under the sun to make up the real meat and tissue of English. The bulk of the importations, however, has been from Latin, and from its offshoots, French, Spanish, and Italian. Some of the short Saxon words are pithy and expressive, but often for sheer power and always for variety of expression the Latin is superior.

Collectionism in All Its Purity.

Our local columns supplied yesterday two highly instructive examples of the sort of merit that appeals most to those in whom the collecting instinct is strongly developed—the sort that excites their wildest enthusiasm and opens widest their purses.

The philatelist is of all collectors the one whose ideals are what should be described as "purest." That is, the objects of his eager search and satisfied possession are either of no use whatever or if they have any he at once deprives them of it. Some of his stamps have a certain beauty, but of beauty he makes no account in estimating values. For that his one standard is rarity, and a unique stamp, no matter how ugly, is more precious than any other, though singularity be its only charm. Naturally enough, therefore, the highest price was paid at the stamp sale reported yesterday for a stamp on which, by a printer's error, the portrait it bore was upside down. That made it worth $450.

Turn, now, to the other side of the day—a sale of books. The top price at that, $330, was paid for a first edition of EUGENE FIELD'S "Tribune Primer" for the truly collectorial reason that on the cover of this copy are the thrilling words, usually lacking: "Sent postage paid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of 25 cents. Tribune Publishing Company, Denver, Col."

People for whom a book is something to read, and for whom the best edition is therefore usually the last, do not understand the yearning to have one because it bears an inscription like this and others do not. But the yearn is all right and beautifully innocent. It just doesn't have much to do with literature, however, and similarly the stamp with the inverted portrait doesn't have much to do with art.

TRENTON COMMISSION PLAN.

Mayor Donnelly Says The Times's Account Found Most Readers.

City of Trenton, N. J.,
Department of Public Affairs,
April 2, 1914.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Perhaps you may be interested in knowing the sequel of the publication of the report dealing with Trenton's first complete year under a commission government charter which appeared in several of the metropolitan papers last Sunday. The article was used quite extensively in New York and Philadelphia papers, as you doubtlessly know.

Since then I have been deluged with requests from readers for copies of the report. In every instance, with a single exception, the request has been based on reading the article in THE NEW YORK TIMES. Singularly significant is the fact that a great number of the requests came from places many miles from New York City, but all referred to THE NEW YORK TIMES. It was indeed a revelation to me, and plainly indicates the vast army of readers who depend on your wonderful newspaper.

FREDERICK W. DONNELLY,
Mayor.

UNGUARDED BACHELORS.

The Gentle Sex Is in a Challenging Spring Mood.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The other night, having to stay in town, I wandered into one of the old bookstores of New York. One of the volumes I emerged with was of de Maupassant. The first page I turned to held the most profound wisdom I have met with in some time—of course next to my recent and now famous observations on a milk-white-nosed baby as printed in your discerning columns.

The passage from the Gallic philosopher touches upon certain well-known human tendencies and relates how an elderly gentleman prevents an ardent youth from making the acquaintance (oh! most informally) of a demure and provocative young person one pulsing Spring night upon a Seine river boat. For, says the elderly gentleman:

> Monsieur, when Winter comes, with its cold, wet, and snowy weather, your doctor says to you constantly: "Keep your feet warm; guard against chills. * * * " But when Spring returns, with its leaves and flowers, its warm, soft breezes, and its smell of the fields, causing you vague disquiet and causeless emotion, nobody says to you:
> "Monsieur, beware of love! It is lying in ambush everywhere; it is watching for you at every corner. Beware of love! It is more dangerous than brandy or bronchitis." Yes, Monsieur, I say that the Government ought to put large public notices on the walls, with these words: "Return of Spring. Citizens, Beware of Love," just as they put "Beware of Paint."

I, who am a bachelor, see the sense in all this and vaguely feel it my duty to call the subject to the attention of your masculine readers. Never before has mankind experienced a Springtime with the erstwhile gentle sex possessed of so challenging, so imperious a mood, so dangerously touched with the diaphanous impress of Poiret, Paquin, and others. Never before has there been a Springtime so charged with the impelling presence of those amazing beings who, so long our superiors, are fast becoming our equals.

Youth makes but one entrance in the comedy of life. G. C.

Arbitrary Postal Rates.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The other day we had to send to a city address a package of foreign periodicals.

The package weighed 3 pounds and 14 ounces, and according to the new regulation had to be franked with 31 cents of postage stamps, while if the package had weighed 4 pounds it would have cost only 17 cents by parcel post.

The writer thought these facts so peculiar that he went to the Post Office station and inquired if this was really the rate at which the package had to be franked, and at the information desk he was told that this was the case, that a package weighing 3 pounds and 14 ounces costs 31 cents postage, and a package weighing 5 pounds costs 17 cents postage.

We thereupon, in order to clear up this matter further, wrote to Mr. Morgan, Postmaster of New York City, and we received from him a letter wherein, in a matter-of-fact tone, the facts were confirmed.

CHRONIC LONELINESS.

A Disease for Which the Victim Is Often to Blame.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The "B. E." lady correspondent who utters her "Lonely Cry" in THE TIMES somewhat to this effect: "I know what loneliness in a big city is. I have spent five years of my life in it—the vital, soul-searing kind of loneliness that saps the energies of both body and mind and leaves a blight on the spirits that a thousand years of joy and amusement can never make up for," is a perfectly hopeless case, and she might as well throw up her hands and quit trying to be happy. When anybody anywhere gets such a fit of lonesiness that a thousand years of joy and amusement can't make up for it, I leave it to any fairly balanced human being if the case isn't incurable.

The lady shows all through her wail that she belongs to the class of unhappies who want everything done for them without doing anything for themselves or for others, and, in addition, everything that is done must be done just the way they want or they simply refuse to be happy. I know a lot of them, and more than one of them has wailed his wail and her wail through the newspapers of this town. When "B. E.," yearning for some let-up to that soul-searing, energy-sapping loneliness which environs her like a pall, has a chance for companionship and a little of the joys of life, she throws them down because, forsooth, the form of the divertissement, though perfectly harmless, as she admits, is not quite up to her sensitive notions, and she goes into the sulks and stops speaking to the one woman who will tolerate her silliness and try to spread a streak or two of sunshine along her darkened pathway.

There may be really lonely people in New York, just as there are elsewhere, but those who don't have loneliness as a disease can by a very little properly directed effort make friends and dispel their gloom, and most of them do. The diseased ones don't and won't, and they put in their unoccupied time writing letters to the newspapers and saddling their sorrows on somebody else except themselves. They make me tired.

> Mankind is merely matter;
> There are shiners
> And there's whiners,
> And God save us from the latter!

New York, April 2, 1914. L. J. W.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If "B. E." really wants to meet congenial people, let her try. She seems to want us all to do what she ought to do herself. She is evidently a very selfish person. Let her join some society which engages in work for others. Let her do some definite work to make the world better, instead of sitting moping in her room every evening. Let her seek out and help others more unfortunate than herself. Has she never thought of affiliating with some Church? If she will attend the services of some church near her boarding house, and give her name and address to the ushers, or else put her card on the collection plate, the pastor will call upon her, and will, no doubt, judging from what I know of pastors, introduce her to others in the church, and admit her to one or more of the parochial societies that are doing social or philanthropic, literary or other definite work. There is no need for any one to be lonely in New York, with all our churches, societies, Y. W. C. A.'s, and other organizations. HENRY MANNERS.

New York, April 2, 1914.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am an Englishwoman, and have been living here for seven years, absolutely alone, with no relatives or friends in this country. I work very hard all day as private secretary in a lawyer's office.

When I first came here I tried living in a boarding house, but found it all "B. E." describes in her letter, and also it cost more than my salary would permit if I wished to live in a nice neighborhood.

Now I have a little flat of my own, and have furnished it gradually, and I get so much pleasure from my little home, keeping it neat and surrounding myself with my books and music, that I have no time to feel lonely; the evenings pass only too quickly. After a long, tiring day, I am so exhausted that the little flat is a haven of refuge where I may rest without the necessity of still keeping on "company manners."

AN ENGLISHWOMAN.

New York, April 2, 1914.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"A Lonely Cry" in your issue of to-day does seem to the undersigned such a confession of arrogance and poor taste that I cannot refrain from adding a word to the discussion. "B. E." says she "cannot belong to girls' aid homes, or the Y. W. C. A." She claims to have "health and strength and good looks!"

There are some of us who lack all these advantages, and who do not find it necessary to utter such a "bitter cry." We believe that we have something to give to our fellow-man as well as to receive from him, and if our boarding-house circle is too unattractive, we have our church, whose minister will be only too glad to meet us half way if we make but a step in his direction, or we are not so superior and so self-conscious that we cannot walk to the nearest library or public lecture or concert hall without an escort.

Really, sympathetic and kind-hearted people should waste no sympathy on the "B. E.'s" who take such delight in discussing their woes. C. M. S.

PARIS AND HELEN.

Homer's "Iliad" Puts Blame on the Trojan Prince.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is unfortunate if Mrs. Gilman has cited the story of Helen and Paris to support her argument that in a man-ruled world the beauty of women has been condemned for evils that are in reality due to the incontinence of men. The Homeric legend simply will not bear her out. There is every indication that, even in that rude age, Paris was rated by his compeers precisely as he would be to-day—as a self-indulgent, philandering wife-stealer. His morality was no more representative of that of the men of his age than is the conduct of Harry Thaw an ethical norm for men of to-day.

Let Mrs. Gilman read in the "Iliad" (III., 39, ff.) Hector's passionate denunciation of his brother, after the luxury-weakened Paris had run away from Menelaos:

> Oh, handsome wretch, woman-mad, deceiver; would that you had never been born, nor wed. Very likely the Greeks deride us, knowing your shallow, foppish wit—your lack of real strength—and believing you to be a leader among us. Your villainy has wrought great harm to your father and to your city and to all your people. Why do you not go to meet Menelaos and learn the mettle of the man whose wife you have stolen? Of little avail your Venus—gifts of music and personal charm ones you were thrown into the dust by the angry Greek, eh? Were the Trojans not a timid people, truly you would have put on, ere this, your stone tunic, for the evils you have brought them.

It is to be hoped that Mrs. Gilman's analogies from natural history are less inept and inaccurate than her reference to Homer. That would not have passed muster even at the village debating society, in the days when feminism was regarded as a purely academic subject, and "masculism" would not have been printed even in "quotes."

THE HEALING CULTS.

Dangerous Bills to Intrench Them in Gov. Glynn's Hands.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The New York State Legislature just adjourned leaves no more distinguishing mark of its asininity than the stamp of approval on the Mental Healing and Osteopathic bills, whose disposition now rests with the Governor. The passage of the Anti-Tipping bill, for example, was but a morsel of ludicrous legislation, a burlesque on the law-giving power. But to amend the public health laws in favor of Christian Scientists and osteopaths is a genuine menace.

No one has the right to deny any person the privilege of singularity. If a believer in the warped philosophy of Christian Science chooses to abrogate the chances offered to him by scientific medicine in favor of the absurdities of Eddyism, the community has no power to interfere unless the individual be stricken with an illness of such a nature as to jeopard the interests of others. In this regard the bill just passed at Albany is exceedingly dangerous. It permits persons of no scientific qualifications whatever to treat the sick by spiritual or mental means—a practice which must inevitably result, among other things, in increased dissemination of smallpox, typhoid fever, diphtheria, and kindred infections. The State, having erected an elaborate system of defense against just such emergencies in the form of sanitary officers and boards of health, now purposes to oppose its own ends and to lower the barrier to plague and pestilence.

The Osteopathic bill is scarcely less threatening. Without providing for preliminary educational qualifications of any sort, it confers on the osteopath, after two years of study, the same rights and privileges as the holder of a license to practice medicine, with the exception that surgical instrumentation and the administration of drugs are denied. Nevertheless, the bill in question entitles the osteopath to certify to the cause of death, and confronts him with vast and intricate problems of diagnosis, with few of which is he more capable of dealing than a hospital orderly.

Here, then, are two bills of immediate and far-reaching importance. Both are dangerous in the highest degree. Surely Gov. Glynn will not prostitute the seal of the State of New York to any such purposes.

READY-MADE TESTIMONIALS.

Sewell Ford Spurns a Tobacco Agent's Bribe.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If it is fitting, may I mildly protest against the extravagant methods of a certain advertising agent who is seeking to tempt me by an insidious offer? He sends a neatly prepared, ready-made testimonial enthusiastically indorsing a brand of smoking tobacco. All I am asked to do is sign and send on with my photograph. He will do the rest—a page "ad," nothing less, in a periodical of wide circulation.

In return he says he will supply me with several tins of said tobacco—number not definitely stated—and a pipe. He does not even stop to ask if I am a smoker.

Far be it from me to suggest that authors seem to be held somewhat cheaply in advertising circles. Having some acquaintance with the mental attitude of "ad" men in general toward the writing fraternity, I am neither disturbed nor interested in such appraisal.

But why such reckless prodigality? Why needlessly add to the high cost of publicity?

Why Mayor Gill Was Elected.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is interesting to see how quickly the anti-suffragists rush to use the re-election of Hi Gill as an argument against woman suffrage, and how equally emphatic the suffragists are to show that his re-election is directly due to a moral reformation.

Arguments on both sides are wide of the mark. The real situation is this: The women at the polls had only the choice of two candidates for the office of Mayor. Each received his nomination at the primaries. That was the time and the hour when the women had their opportunity to choose good candidates. As far as can be learned, however, the Seattle suffragists, in their blind desire for a privilege, failed to appreciate the duties inseparable from it—jury duty, office holding, attendance at primaries and conventions, where policies are determined and men chosen for office. So in the final hour Hi Gill was the "lesser of two evils." That's all. M. E. N.

MOODS.

In quietest ease I walk through my days,
My tasks too slight to name,
Picking things up and laying them down,
Moving about, serenely and still,
Working contentedly, trifles in mind,
Friendly, affectionate, happy, at peace,
Busy, devoted, content.

Then great moments come! I surge out of ease;
I tighten with questions, stiffen with Whys;
I strain at my harness—stinging dreams lash;
I reach out—and reach—with clenching desire.
There is something I want—tell me what! Tell me what!
Let me grasp it and live! Let me be—let me do!
Let me feel—let me find—let me climb till I see!
Let me do till I've done what is calling to me!

Such a pettiness, steadily grinding my days!
Such a spirit of emptiness, rattling my hours!
Such a thinness of talk—such a deadness of deed!
Oh the things—and the things—and the things—all around!
See me picking them up and laying them down!
I could throw them away—I could run—I could fly!
I could fight—I could shake off my days—I could die!
Just to live—and be free of the harness of things;
Just to be—just to do—with my uttermost powers;
Just for space to reach out—just for will to achieve!
Think of deeds standing tall 'gainst a measure of dreams!
I am tense in the grip of a vision's high urge—
A longing that pants to be flung into life.

A clock strikes across—the day's wheels are set;
The hours close around with tasks yet undone.
A long shaken breath like a bridge from afar—
I cross and am back. This and that wait around.
Something slips, something fades, and I move through my days,
(My tasks are too slight to be named.)
Picking things up and laying them down,
Walking and sitting, busy, content,
Loving and neighborly, humming a song,
Smiling and cheerful and calm.

You call hearts' content Human Life?
Then what of the biting unrest?

$10,000 FOR PALMS FOR PALM SUNDAY

Largest Dealer Handles 150,000 Heads—Sold to City's Churches for 4 Cents Apiece.

Fine Easter Display at St. Patrick's Cathedral—Europe Comes to America for Lily Bulbs.

About $10,000 will go into the hands of dealers and makers of special articles to pay for palms used in churches to-morrow, Palm Sunday. The overwhelming number of palms are bought by Catholics, the dealers making provision for 750,000 persons in New York alone. In Protestant churches the use of palms is growing slowly, however. The palms come from Florida, and churches pay $4 a hundred heads. Half a dozen different dealers here handle them.

The largest dealer brings in 150,000 heads, another brings 100,000, and several smaller ones bring in 30,000 each. Besides church purchases, women in considerable numbers buy palms, make them into fancy forms such as are seen worn by men and women on Palm Sunday, and sell them for the benefit of charities and parish societies. It is calculated that $4,000 at least is thus realized.

Money expended for flowers at Easter, for altar purposes alone, reaches $25,000 at least. Dealers say flowers are plentiful and fairly low in price this season. Easter is rather late, and wet weather has brought flowers into perfect condition. Churches themselves spend almost nothing on Easter flowers. All are contributed, chiefly as memorials.

St. Patrick's Cathedral will have by far the handsomest and largest display, costing fully $1,000. It will be placed in the Lady Chapel on Holy Thursday, and on Easter Day removed to the high altar of the Cathedral itself.

St. Batholomew's P. E. Church had $600 to spend this year. The Vanderbilt, Gillespie, and other tablets are decorated. White and red are the colors employed. The design called for many asparagus palms, and was made to harmonize with the great picture, "The Ascension," that forms the background of the sanctuary.

St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church in Fifth Avenue, used for an Easter service the first time this year, will have no lilies. It is almost the only church in New York not using them. The design calls for white and pink, with double rows of small potted plants, chiefly pink tulips, around the base and the altar lines. A temporary reredos still forms the western end of the sanctuary, and its color has to be reckoned with. The expense will be about $600. In the burned church many memorials were decorated, but in the new one a florist does everything. Special funds are contributed, together with some flowers.

Trinity Church is decorated at Easter by an alter guild. Last year the florist bill for the year went to nearly $1,000. At the Cathedral of St. John the Divine no special floral display is ever made.

The Bermuda lily trade to furnish New York and other Eastern cities with Easter flowers came up suddenly, and went down as quickly. Ninety per cent. of all the Easter lilies seen this season were grown from bulbs that were brought from Japan. Two importers in this city handle nearly all of them, and furnish them to dealers in every part of this country and Europe. It is an interesting fact, and a tribute to American enterprise, that many of the lilies to be seen by worshippers on altars of Paris, Berlin, and even London and Rome and St. Petersburg churches this year have grown from bulbs once owned by Americans.

The Bermuda growers were unable to control dates of blossoms, and transportation to American cities cut out profits. Japan beat Bermuda in excellence of bulbs and is now supplying the world.

DEMOCRATS THREATEN BOLT

Independents Serve Notice on Tammany State Machine.

Independent Democrats, who belong to the Democratic Association, of which County Clerk William F. Schneider is President, threatened last night at a meeting of the organization in the rooms of the Cleveland Democracy, 1,030 Madison Avenue, to withhold their support from Tammany and either run an independent Democratic ticket next Fall or select candidates from all the other parties for whom they can vote. Resolutions were passed arraigning the Legislature for failure to pass the Glynn primary amendments and calling upon the Governor to include them in his message when he calls a special session of the Legislature.

"One hundred and fifteen thousand enrolled Democrats refused to vote the Tammany ticket last November," said Mr. Schneider, "chiefly because they disapproved of the method of its selection, and as it seems obvious that neither of the two dominant machines is desirous of passing an honest primary law, we independent Democrats serve notice upon the Tammany State machine that we do not consider ourselves bound by any party obligations to support their candidates under the present law, and will either run an independent Democratic ticket or select candidates from all parties for whom we can vote."

A committee of fifty was appointed to wait upon the Governor, among them being Judge Richard H. Smith, Assemblyman Edward C. Boylston, Thomas F. Woods, Cornelius Huth, George J. Vestner, Joseph A. Flinn, George H. Mundorff, John F. Cowan, William J. Lee, Joseph Burke, Marshall Matthew,

SOCIETY TO GREET QUEEN OF BULGARIA

Many Invitations of Hospitality to be Extended to Her Advance Agent on His Arrival.

SEMI-PUBLIC RECEPTIONS

Society Women Who Will Entertain Queen Are Allied with Charities—Welcome from Her Countrymen.

Although no definite plans have been announced for the social entertainment of the Queen of Bulgaria, who is expected to arrive here the latter part of May, it is understood that society will open its door to the royal visitor and entertain for her on a large and regal scale.

Generally the social activities in New York are over by June 1, and the large portion of society either abroad or at their country homes. This year the international polo games at Meadow Brook, which are to be held early in June, will bring many back from Europe, and society, as last year, will be centralized around New York.

When the advance agent of the Queen arrives here next week on the Imperator he will be met with many invitations from prominent society people of New York, who are anxious to extend the hospitality of their houses to the distinguished visitor. There are many houses on Fifth Avenue much larger and more pretentious than the royal palace at Sofia, and they would easily accommodate the royal suite of fifteen persons.

The Queen's personal representative has already stated that the Queen hopes to be treated here in the same way as any private visitor. The big hotels are all keenly alive to the importance of housing such an important guest. The addresses that she plans to give are all to be delivered before specially invited audiences, and will be in the nature of semi-public receptions. She will probably speak in Carnegie Hall before an invited audience.

It was said yesterday by a prominent member of society that the society women who will give entertainments for the Queen while she is in this city will be those who are allied with the great charitable and philanthropic enterprises at home and in the Orient. Many Bulgarian girls are attending school now in Constantinople, where several large educational institutions are maintained by American financial support. The Queen is a Protestant.

While society is awaiting the arrival of the Queen's agent before making any plans for her entertainment, the small group of her loyal subjects in this city are making ready for a patriotic welcome. There are only about 100 Bulgarians living in New York, and the more prominent of her subjects are to assemble to-morrow at Tivoli, the Stephanoff's Café, 3 Morris Street, which runs from Broadway, near Bowling Green, to Greenwich Street, to discuss plans for a royal welcome to their beloved Queen Eleanora.

MYSTERY OF THE VISIT.

State Department Not Yet Notified of Royal Plans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 3. — Although announcement has been made in Sofia that Queen Eleanora of Bulgaria will start for America in May and her forthcoming visit is a matter of common knowledge in European courts, this Government has had no notification on the subject from the Bulgarian Government and has taken no steps to arrange for Her Majesty's reception and entertainment.

Beyond a brief dispatch from Charles J. Vopicka, the American Minister to the Balkan States, saying that the United States Consul General at Sofia had been informed that the Queen was contemplating a tour of this country, the State Department knows nothing officially as to Queen Eleanora's intentions.

The situation is peculiar and may become embarrassing if Queen Eleanora should arrive in the United States without formal notification of this Government. It is customary, in fact required by the rules of etiquette among nations, that no reigning sovereign or Chief of State should visit the territory of another State without prior notification to the Government of the State to be visited. The traditional purpose in this course is necessary to ascertain whether the sovereign proposing to make a visit to a foreign land would be welcome.

Government officials hazarded the prediction to-day that within a short time Minister Vopicka would receive formal notification of the Queen's purpose to come to this country. When this is received the State Department will notify Congress of the fact, and in due time provision will be made by a suitable appropriation for the expenses of the Queen's entertainment and a formal programme will be made out at the State Department covering the whole itinerary of the Queen's tour in the United States.

It has not been customary for Presidents of the United States to provide accommodations for visiting royalty at the White House. The Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII., of Great Britain, was a house guest of President Buchanan at the White House when he visited Washington toward the end of Mr. Buchanan's Administration. But most of the other royal personages who have come to this capital have been accommodated at the expense of the Government in hotels.

The Infanta Eulalia, aunt of the King of Spain, was provided with a suite of rooms at the old Arlington Hotel, since razed, when she came to Washington as the guest of the nation in the Columbian World's Fair year. The White Hounse was not suitable at that time to accommodate the Spanish Princess and her suite. Since then the old mansion has been provided with a larger amount of living and bedroom space, but it is still hardly commodious enough to provide quarters for visiting royalty.

ART SCHOOL RECEPTION.

The Art School League gave a reception and tea yesterday at the National Academy of Design, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street. The reception was continuous from morning until evening, when it ended with a concert. The tea was from 3 until 6 o'clock in the rooms of the Architectural League in the Academy building. A string orchestra played, and many society women attended. Mrs. Allan Gouverneur Wellman, represented the Junior League of young society women and invited Mrs. Alexander D. N. Pratt, Mrs. Jay Gould, Mrs. John Ogden Hammond, and the Misses Mary E. Alexandre and Edith Wellman to receive with her and look after the visiting actresses and actors.

Mrs. John W. Alexander, Mrs. Robert L. Gerry and Mrs. Laurent Oppenheim of the patronesses and Board of Managers were also present. Other patronesses who attended were Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. V. Everit Macy, Mrs. Robert Low Pierrepont, Mrs. William Church Osborn, Mrs. Simon Baruch, Mrs. Austin Gray, Mrs. George R. Peck, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mrs. Alfred T. White, Mrs. Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. Charles W. Ide, Mrs. St. Clair McKelway, Mrs. William A. Putnam, and Mrs. Frederick B. Pratt. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was unable to be present.

Others who accepted invitations to represent various clubs and societies and assist in receiving the visitors were Mrs. Gordon Wendell, Miss Beatrice Bend, Miss Eleanor Bannister, Mrs. Boudinot Keith, Mrs. James Lancaster Morgan and Mrs. Camden C. Dike.

Among the actresses who accepted invitations to the tea and many of whom came for a short time were Blanche Bates, Jane Peyton, Mary Lawton, Louise Dresser, Margery Maude, Frances Starr, Florence Reed, Irene Fenwick, Julie Opp, and Margaret Wycherly.

More than a thousand tickets at $1 each were sold before the afternoon meeting began and many more came in afterward, so a considerable sum was raised for the league.

John W. Alexander is the President, James Parton Haney is Chairman of the Executive Committee, Otto Kahn is the Treasurer, and Miss Florence N. Levy is Secretary of the league.

Homer and Rappold and the Misses Sparkes and Case, Mme. Rappold appearing for the first time this season as Euridice. Mr. Toscanini conducted.

In the afternoon the cast for "Hansel und Gretel" was the usual one, except that Robert Leonhardt was the father in place of Otto Goritz, though not for the first time. "I Pagliacci" brought forward the unusual combination of Mme. Fornia as Nedda, Carl Jörn as Canio, and Dinh Gilly as Tonio. Hans Morgenstern conducted the former and Mr. Polacco the latter.

A ROUND OF ENJOYMENT

SEES DANGER IN EVOLUTION

"Domestic Woman Wants to Level Things Up, and Feminist to Level Them Down."

Mrs. Henry M. Burton, Vice President of the Rochester Anti-Suffrage Association, discussed Feminism, which she called "that strange movement stretching from pole to pole and sea to sea," before a large audience of women at the York Club, 52 East Fifty-fourth Street, yesterday afternoon. As a definition of Feminism Mrs. Burton liked best "it is everything that isn't feminine."

"Have an open mind," she said, "but have it open at both ends, with little harbors on the sides for harboring beneficent ideas. Lake Ontario, on which I live, seems to me to be like that, and the opposite is the Dead Sea, into which rivers run but there is no outlet, and nothing can live in it. That seems to me to represent the average feminist of the present day."

She told of the Wellesley College girls who, when they first saw the reflection of the fire at their college in the sky, thought it was the dawn.

"Many new ideas seem to us like the dawn, but they are some of them devastating fires," she added.

"Eve represented the first woman's movement, Pandora lettting troubles out of the box the second. There was also Helen of Troy, who caused the Trojan war. And Delilah, cutting off the hair of Samson, seems to me most like the feminist movement of to-day. Women think men are happier than they, or why should they wish to be like them? I think if we should chalk up the troubles of men and women we would find that men, with their worries and troubles, did not have the monopoly of pleasure."

Mrs. Burton did not believe that woman's place was the home and she did not think men belonged there either.

"Men are domesticated animals," she said. "Their places are not really in the home. I think of men's clubs as jungles that they like to get back to from the sacredness of home.

"You have all heard it said that 'woman's place is the home.' The suffragists say it with a sneer and the antis with something like sentiment. I don't believe woman's place is the home. I don't want any one to define my place for me. I can find it for myself.

"The feminist claim to political life is a menace. Not content with altering laws, the women now wish to smash conventions. There seems to be something the matter with marriage these days, and people seem to think there is too much faithfulness in it. They think things need equalizing, leveling. The domestic, home-loving woman wants to level things up and the feminist wants to level them down.

"These days pleasure is put before duty and there is worship of the god of joy.

"There was a movement a number of years ago to open the trades to women. The women who are now in industry are there because the women who are in suffrage to-day opened the way. If these women in business are suffering, I don't wonder the suffragists feel conscience stricken, for they put them there."

The speaker referred to a danger of the present evolution of women becoming a revolution, but she was not discouraged by it, and ended her remarks with: "We fearlessly greet the unseen with a cheer."

Little Stories of Real Life No. 8

THIRTY THOUSAND school children, many of them backward, were prescribed adenoid and tonsil operations last year. Six thousand only were operated upon, 3,332 of the needy ones in our hospital. How about the other 24,000?

It is vitally important, therefore, that we make the greatest use of our hospital facilities. The demand for service is far above the supply.

WILD MISH-MISH COMING.

With a Kuss-Kuss and Other Beasts and Birds on the Moltke.

The steamer Moltke of the Hamburg-American Line is due to arrive to-day from Hamburg with a menagerie of animals collected from all parts of the world, including a black panther which was formerly a household pet of the Begum of Bhoopal; three leopards from Silliguri, a blue kuss-kuss from the Sahara desert, two Madagascar mustard cats, two dancing orang-utangs from Jalla-Jalla, West Africa; a piping bullfinch from Darjeeling, two hippopotami from New Guinea, four cinnamon bears from Siberia, two mauve foxes from Somaliland, eight crates of snakes, ninety-six swans, and a fine specimen of the wild mish-mish of the Atavapo River, which flows into the Orinoco.

This rare bird is amphibious, it is said, and after swimming under water it will suddenly climb the tallest palm on the banks of the river and then utter a mournful note, which sounds like its name, and dive down into the water again. No one appears to know why the mish-mish does this.

Henrik Ibsen's Widow Dead.

CHRISTIANA, Norway, April 3.—Susanna Ibsen, widow of Henrik, Norwegian dramatic poet, died here to-day.

Mrs. Ibsen was the daughter of the Rev. Hans Conrad Thoresen, rector of Holy Cross Church in Bergen, Norway, the city in which Ibsen made a disastrous attempt at managing a theatre. Her stepmother was Anna Maria Thoresen, better known as Anna Maria Kragh and for a number of years was one of the most active women of letters in Norway. Ibsen married Miss Thoresen on June 26, 1856, one year before he left Bergen crippled with debts. During his stay in the city he had written her a charming though fragmentary set of verses in which he refered to her as "the young dreaming enigma." She was 20 at the time. In another verse he referred to Miss Thoresen's "blossoming child-soul" as the bourne of his ambitions, and it was while he was courting her that he wrote "The Vikings at Helgeland."

Gustavus Robitzek.

Gustavus Robitzek, 62 years old, died Thursday at his home, 1,331 Franklin Avenue, the Bronx. Mr. Robitzek was born in Austria and came to this country at the age of 3. His parents became residents of the Bronx, and he had lived there for more than fifty years, and was prominently identified with all movements in the borough. He built many apartment houses, owning at times as many as twenty-five. Mr. Robitzek was at one time President of the East Morrisania China Works, and at the time of his death was senior partner in G. Robitzek & Brothers, coal merchants. He was a charter member of the North Side Board of Trade, and a member of the Wieland Lodge of Masons, Schnurer Club, and Bronx Club. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Anne Robitzek; two daughters, Mrs. Ada Moll and Mrs. Carissa Duryea, and two sons, Edwin and Gustavus, Jr.

STOWE MEMORIAL PLANNED.

In Florida Hamlet Where the Author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Lived.

MANDARIN, Fla., April 3.—This little hamlet, for many years the Winter home of Harriet Beecher Stowe, is planning to honor the most famous of its residents by installing a memorial window in the Church of Our Saviour, founded largely through the efforts of the novelist. All the other windows of the little edifice have been preempted as memorials for former parishioners or their relatives, but the one which Mrs. Stowe asked to have reserved for herself has remained of plain glass for thirty years. A Stowe memorial window fund has been started, to which not only the Northern residents, but even the negro school children have contributed. It is hoped to raise $500.

Mrs. Susan H. Hooker, as trustee of the fund, is now seeking to interest in this memorial not only those who actually knew and loved Mrs. Stowe, as did the people here, among whom she lived and worked for twenty Winters, but some of the many thousands who knew her only through her writings. Checks may be made payable to her, until May 1, at Mandarin, and after that date at 15 Carthage Road, Rochester, N. Y.

Other memorials of Mrs. Stowe survive in the century plant and the big fig tree which she planted; but the rambling house which she and Prof. Stowe built—popularly known locally as "the house of seven gables"—has been torn down, and the ground on which it stood no longer belongs to the Stowe family. Most of the timber, when the house was demolished, was carried over to the negro settlement back in the pines, where some of its ornate carvings may still be seen decorating half a dozen porches.

Tourists, however, usually expect to see the house in which "Palmetto Leaves" and many others of Mrs. Stowe's later works were written, and keep the natives busy explaining its disappearance. A recent visitor, a young Southerner, hearing the inquiries of his Northern fellow-excursionists from Jacksonville, asked curiously: "Who was Mrs. Stowe, anyway?" "Why, she wrote 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,'" was the surprised answer. "Never heard of her," said the young man cheerfully.

The church is Episcopalian, and is attended by practically all the white Protestant population of Mandarin.

IN PAPER FLOWER BOWER.

Twenty Women Working on Accessories to Spring Festival.

Three young women working in a bower of paper flowers in the front window of the second floor of 129 West Forty-second Street are the only visible evidence of a new scheme of The League for Political Education to assist unemployed women and incidentally to obtain sufficient quantity of paper flowers to be used as decorations at their coming Spring festival and ball. When it was decided to give a Spring festival in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, from April 22 to 24, the question of where to obtain the dogwood, wisteria, cherry blossoms, and other flowers necessary for a Spring setting, was raised. The committee decided to have paper flowers made.

The vacant floor was obtained, and yesterday afternoon some twenty women began making the flowers. They are working under the supervision of an overwomen of paper flower concern, and those in charge hope that by the time of the festival the workers will be expert enough to obtain permanent positions as paper flower makers. The money received from the festival will go into the fund for the erection of "The Societies" Building, which is to be built in West Forty-ninth Street, near Sixth Avenue, and which will house many civic societies.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

Brooklyn Bats Stilled by Effective Pitching of Yankee Boxmen.

This business of opening the baseball season at Ebbets Field in the middle of Winter is proving profitable for the drug stores in Brooklyn. The sale of cough mixture hasn't been so big since the blizzard of '88. The physicians' association are going to vote thanks to Mr. Ebbets and suggest that next year the season be opened in March.

Frank Chance's Yankees thrived in the cold yesterday and beat the Brooklyns by a score of 6 to 1, superdreadnought Robinson attributes the defeat to the drop in the temperature. Inability to hit the ball and some glass-arm pitching by Elmer Brown also had considerable to do with the Dodgers' collapse. The only thing that Brownie had on the ball was his lilly white fist.

Yesterday's crowd would have almost filled two Subway cars. There was quite a gathering outside of the park, but they were huddled about a peanut roaster, trying to keep warm. The only warm thing in the vicinity of Ebbets Field was Frank Chance's conversation with Bob Emslie in the fifth inning, when the umpire called Jimmy Walsh out for trying to stretch a single into a double.

The Yanks looked like a real ball team and the pitching of "Slim" Caldwell and "King" Cole carried too many twists for the Dodgers' eyesight. Cole, especially, mixed 'em up in tantalizing hot weather fashion. Cole is built so tall that he caught more of the wind than the other players, but the breeze didn't take any of the curl out of his service.

Brown, the first pitcher Brooklyn used, would have had a hard time throwing the ball through a thick fog, and he was also a bit wild. A volley in the fourth, which consisted of Lute Cook's double and Peckinpaugh's triple, was the finish of Brown. He was succeeded by Edward Joseph Pfeffer, one of the best pieces of pitching furniture that has come out of Grand Rapids, Mich., in some time. He had a change of pace and a fast one which somewhat stilled the Yankees' batting enthusiasm. Hartzell fell down on a couple of hard chances, but otherwise the conduct of the Yankees in the field called for admiration. Peckinpaugh at short was again a live wire, while King Cole fielded his position handily, covering first base a couple of times with surprising agility.

The Yankees got away with a rush in the first inning. Maisel got a pass and went to second. He stayed there Hartzell's smash to left, the runner taking second. Jimmy Walsh singled to centre and Hartzell scored. Williams sacrificed and Walsh continued to third on Holden's out at first. Brown then uncurled a wild pitch and Walsh counted. Hartzell got a pass in the third inning, but was caught slumbering some little distance from the pillow.

Brooklyn's lonesome run was gathered in the third inning. Bill Fischer leaned on Caldwell for a three-base smash to the right field wall. Brown rolled to Caldwell, and "Kid" Elberfeld, coaching at third, informed the pitcher that he could go home. Elberfeld was all wrong and Fischer was run down at third and his big hit went for naught. Brown took second during the proceeding, and Dalton was safe on Hartzell's error. Brown going to third. He scored when Daubert forced Dalton at second.

The other Yankee run came in the eighth, when Pfeffer was pitching. Maisel singled, and Hartzell rolled to Cutshaw. He touched Maisel on the way to second, but failed to make a double play at first, the toss traveling wide. Hartzell stole second, and went to third on Walsh's out at first. Hartzell scored on Harry Williams's single to right. The score:

Arguments Heard in Carnaitz Case.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., April 4.—Arguments of counsel in the injunction suit against Howard Carnaitz, Federal Baseball League representative, to prevent him from interfering with Pittsburgh National League players under contract, and the defense that organized baseball is a trust and the contracts invalid were completed at noon to-day and the case submitted to the Chancery Court. J. P. Henderson, the Chancellor, took the case under advisement and announced that he would render his decision to-morrow. The Pittsburgh National players have left Hot Springs, but President Dreyfus will remain until the case has been settled.

Tip Tops Still Without Bradley.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 3.—Manager Bradley of the Brooklyn Federal team did not get back to Columbia to-day as was expected. It is not known when he will return, as no word has been received from him. This morning the squad had a good long practice and then played a few innings, the Colts getting the better of the contest.

Columbia Second Baseman Ill.

R. W. Watt, '16, star second baseman of the nine a year ago and selected to fill the same berth this year, has been reported seriously ill and will probably not be able to play for several weeks. Watt is the second veteran that Columbia has lost in the last fortnight, the other man being George Smith, the big pitcher, who splintered his kneecap. Watt's illness has necessitated a change in the line-up of the Blue and White team for the game this afternoon with New York University on South Field. Haaren will be moved from third base to second to fill Watt's place, and Gretch will go from the outfield to third. Stone will probably get a try-out in the field. The team will probably line up with O'Neale, pitcher; Roseff, catcher; Hann, first base; Haaren, second base; Gretch, third base; Friedrich, shortstop; Page, left field; Stone, centre field, and Haskins or Dwyer, right field.

GIANTS IN THEIR STRIDE.

Special to The New York Times.

BEAUMONT, Texas, April 3.—With three straight from Beaumont and seven straight from Beaumont and Houston combined, the Giants to-night hit the highway for New Orleans, where to-morrow and Sunday they play the Southern Leaguers and at the same time will be rivals as visiting attractions of Joe Tinker's Chifeds. The Chifeds will play a semi-pro team while the Giants are trying to clip the Pelicans' wings.

To-day's game was lifted by a score of 6 to 1. As was the case yesterday, there was little to the game once the Giants girdled the diamond. Having found a way to make a run the Giants made enough to win handily and their system for completing the ringtrasse was diversified. They bunted and stole base and made use of the hit and run trick with pleasing unison between runner and hitter.

The Oilers tallied in the third on two scratch infield hits, and a too lofty throw by Chief Myers. The Chief's hectic shot was the only blot on the New York fielding escutcheon, and considering the fact that the Chief later rid himself of a two-bagger and a three-bagger was a mere bagatelle.

Ferd Schupp, the Southpaw boy, was the first of McGraw's regular pitchers to go nine innings. He pitched the full route with the dash and conviction of a salmon going through the rapids. He had everything, including a bit of unsteadiness, but the latter was a negligible fly in the ointment compared to his effectiveness.

Arthur Fletcher was back in the lineup. He sported the regulation finger glove. It was the first time his left hand has been thus conventionally adorned since he broke a finger a month ago.

A double by Meyers and single by Bescher gave the Giants their first run, the same being earned. Murray was safe on a hit in the fourth and stole second. Snodgrass singled and stole second. Then Meyers cleaved the left field vista with a three-base liner. All sorts of ingredients figured in New York's two runs in the sixth. There was a fumble, hit, and run singles by Snodgrass and Schupp, a passed ball and a double steal by Murray and Snodgrass. The run in the eighth also was tinctured with variety. A bunt by Merkle, a wild pitch, a steal by Merkle, a fielders' choice, and a sacrifice bunt by Snodgrass were identified with its consummation.

The major part of the New York hitting was done by the lower half of the batting order, though everybody partook of the hitting except Fletcher and Doyle. Only the fact that the Beaumont right fielder was in the right place and didn't have to move deprived Larry of a ringing line hit with three on bases. The score:

Young Giants Win at Texarkana.

Special to The New York Times.

TEXARKANA, Ark., April 3.—Prieste of the Giants Colts was knocked out of the box in the last part of the fifth inning by the locals to-day, who scored two runs. Prieste, who had been pitching good ball, became rattled and hit two batsmen, which, with a two-bagger, put the Texans in the lead. Capt. Donlin yanked him out, sending in Palmero, who promptly struck out Harry Forsey for the third out. Donlin tied the score in the sixth with a swat to centre with two down. Palmero struck out the side in the eighth and in the ninth brought Donlin home with a three-bagger to right. The Colts leave to-night for Memphis. Score:

Princeton Opens with Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, April 3.—After a week of postponements on account of the rain Princeton opened its baseball season to-day by defeating Dickinson 6 to 2. Until the sixth inning the game was fast, the Tigers just managing to keep their one-run lead. Copeland of Princeton had allowed only sixteen men to face him in the first five innings, but both he and Brenneman, the latter pitching for Dickinson, loosened in the sixth frame, and when it was over all the scoring of the game had been done. Three pitchers were relieved after this inning. The score:

Lafayette Nine at Fordham To-day.

Lafayette College baseball team, after a victorious Southern trip, will play at Fordham Field this afternoon. Coach Robertson decided on a tentative line-up for the season after yesterday's practice period. Only one new name appears in the list, the substitutes of last year's nine displacing the Varsity players lost through graduation. Flanigan at first base, Kiernan at second, Carroll at third, McEslearn at shortstop, Dooling, McGovern and Kane in the outfield, Conway behind the bat, and Keelen on the mound, will be the line-up against Lafayette to-day. Conway, who came to Fordham from St Bonaventure's College with a baseball record, has obtained the jump on Viviano, regular backstop last season. Viviano is the only veteran displaced, but he will be retained by Coach Robertson because of his versatility, being able to play any position well and because of his reliable batting. Capt. Billy Walsh is again training with the squad, and is expected to pitch the Cornell game next Tuesday at Fordham Field.

McGraw Would Buy Dallas Club.

DALLAS, Texas, April 3.—It became known here to-day in connection with the refusal of the Houston, Texas League, Club owners to sell their franchise to John J. McGraw that the New York National's manager has made similar overtures to the owners of the Dallas Club. It was said the club is not for sale.

Too Cold in Philadelphia for Game.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.—The baseball game between the Philadelphia Americans and Philadelphia Nationals scheduled for to-day was called off because of cold weather.

EAST AND WEST IN PINEHURST FINALS

B. S. Worthington and Paul E. Gardner to Compete for Golf Title To-day.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 3.—To-morrow's 36-hole final for the championship trophy emblematic of the united North and South golf championship lies between R. S. Worthington of the Shawnee Club, Delaware, and Paul E. Gardner of Onwentsia, Chicago. Gardner advanced to-day with a 4 and 3 win over Dr. C. H. Gardner, the Rhode Island champion, and Worthington run away from W. M. Paul of Mecklenberg by a score of 6 and 5.

Both matches attracted big galleries, but attention soon centred on the East versus West contest when it became known that the score was all even at the turn with medal cards of 40 each. Going out all holes but the sixth, which Paul Gardner won, and the ninth, which he lost, were halved. Turning home all even the Chicago player struck a championship gait, winning four and halving two of the six holes, coming in in 3, 4, 4, 3, 4, or 5 under bogey, and completing the bye holes with a total of 34.

Mr. Paul was 3 down at the turn in his match with Worthington. Going out he lost the first five holes, halved the sixth, won the seventh, halved the eighth, and won the ninth. Halving the tenth in 5 Worthington took the next three holes in 4, 3, and 4 for the match.

R. W. Harvey of the Philadelphia Country Club defeated H. B. Lee of Detroit by 1 up in the consolation, winning the seventeenth to gain the lead and halving the eighteenth. He plays Harold Weber of Toledo to-morrow.

In the second division F. H. Gates of Lake George defeated J. P. Gardner of Midothian. He plays E. C. Beall of Uniontown, who disposed of R. F. Robinson of St. Catherines, the Canadian representative. Beall made the turn in 38 strokes 1 up, and he was 3 up on the eleventh. The Canadian tied the score on the fifteenth, halved the sixteenth and seventeenth, but lost the eighteenth and the match 1 down. In the consolation W. H. Faust of the Buffalo Country Club come together.

Stock Exchange Golfers Organize.

Various members of the New York Stock Exchange got together yesterday afternoon and formally organized the New York Stock Exchange Golf Association, with a view to holding a more pretentious competition this year. H. H. Henry was chosen President, Charles Hitchcock, Jr., secretary, and W. H. Wallace treasurer. On the Executive Committee, in addition to the officers, there will be C. R. Auchincloss, Louis Livingston, W. H. Meyer, and Cornelius F. Lee. Instead of the customary one-day handicap the members will play at Fox Hills on Saturday, May 9, in an eighteen-hole medal play handicap from which those with the sixteen best gross scores will be paired off for match play to proceed at the convenience of the contestants until Saturday, May 23, when the final match will be played for the Stock Exchange Championship.

ROUGH AND TUMBLE SOCCER.

Columbia Defeats Cornell — Bad Feeling Among Players.

In a rough and tumble game Columbia defeated Cornell at soccer on South Field yesterday afternoon by a score of 5 to 2 and thereby gained its first victory in the series for the championship of the Intercollegiate League. Worn out by their tussle with Harvard on Thursday and the trip from Boston the Lions ran a ragged game and held the Columbians in check all through the first half. In the second period, however, the reserve of the Columbia eleven began to tell and the Blue and White won with ease.

Fist fights were narrowly averted among the players, and one of the Columbia men, Hamilton, the centre half, was charged so energetically in the second period that he was knocked out and had to leave the game, Frihoff taking his place. H. Hamilton, the Columbia centre forward, and Thomas, the Cornell right half, had a passage at arms in the second half, but they were separated before harm came to either. There were several other such occurrences, most of them however being due to overzealousness rather than intentional foul play. The line-up and summary:

Columbia.	Position.	Cornell.
Krefeld	Goal	Creiffelds
Romeo	Right back	Gordon
Hamilton	Centre halfback	Lynch
Colquohoun	Inside right	Newold
H. H. Shanholt.	Centre forward	Cotton
H. Shanholt	Inside left	H. Shanholt

Hydro-Bullet Wins Second Race.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., April 3.—The Hydro-Bullet, owned by Earl H. Deakin of Chicago, to-day won the second trial for speed boats of the twenty-six-foot class in the fifteen-knot handicap event of the Southern championship speed boat races here. The final will be run to-morrow.

Jane S., owned by Dunbar Wright of New York, won the first leg of the twenty-five knot event.

Pine Stick for Vanitie's Mast.

BOSTON, April 3.—Pine sticks from which will be fashioned the spars of the sloop Vanitie, the cup defense candidate under construction at Neponset for Alexander Smith Cochrane of New York, arrived to-night. The timber was cut at Ostander, Wash. The longest of the pieces measures 110 feet, and yachtsmen generally accept this as the approximate height of the Vanitie's mast.

To Enlarge Robbins Reef Clubhouse.

The Robbins Reef Yacht Club of Bayonne, N. J., last night formulated plans for the enlargement of their clubhouse for the coming season.

AMERICAN GOLFERS WIN.

Travers and Herreshoff Defeat Ball and Nicholls in England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 3.—Jerome Travers and Fred Herreshoff twice defeated John Ball, who several times won the British amateur championship, and Capt. Nicholls at Hoylake to-day in a four-ball foursomes match, winning the morning round by one hole and the afternoon by 2 up and 1.

STUDENTS GAIN POINTS.

Columbia Managers, However, Will Be Named as in Past.

At a mass meeting of the members of the Columbia University Athletic Association last night in Earle Hall it was decided to make no change in the method of electing the managers of the teams which has been in vogue for the past year, this proposed change being the really big point under discussion. Three points, however, were carried to give more privileges to the members of the association, namely: That there should be more publicity, larger participation from the college at large, and more privileges to members to enforce this. The question of more publicity is the one really big advantage gained. Up to the present time the manager has not been compelled to make returns to the student body of the conduct of his office. From now on, however, he will have to give an accounting to the association whenever it is asked, and to whatever extent desired.

The election of managers was the much mooted point and brought out much argument pro and con. It was the desire of many to eliminate the purely competitive system which involves the arbitrary appointment of a manager by a student board without the members of the athletic association having a part in the matter.

At present there is not a large number of members in the association, about 250 with the dues $10 per year. To increase this membership it was decided to give the members greater privileges with regard to choice seats at games and to place them on sale earlier to those in the association.

GOULD MAY PLAY BROTHER.

Kingdon Gould Enters National Court Tennis Championship

With the professional match between George Covey of England and Jack White of New York to-day, court tennis will hold sway for eight days at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club. The professional match will serve as a curtain raiser for the amateur championship in singles, which starts next Monday and continues throughout the week. Eleven entries have been received for the championship, which will be defended by Jay Gould, the title holder. These include the best amateur court tennis players in America. The only notable absentee is Joshua Crane, Jr., who is in England for the purpose of making another effort to capture the British championship.

It was expected that the Hon. Neville Lytton, the English amateur champion, would compete this year, as he is in this city with Covey, who is employed by him as professional. The British title holder has done no real court work since his arrival about a month ago and feels that he could not do himself justice.

Added interest in the singles will be the tournament owing to the entry of Kingdon Gould, the brother of the world's champion, who will make his first appearance in a championship tournament. He has been practicing under the instruction of Fred Forrester, who brought out Jay Gould, and is said to be almost the equal of his famous brother. He will be opposed in the opening round by Larry Waterbury, the raquet champion and polo player.

New York is represented by four contestants, Philadelphia will have three in addition to the defending titleholder, Boston has entered an equal number, and Tuxedo one. According to the draw three matches will be played on Monday, four on Tuesday, two on Wednesday, and one on Thursday. There will be no play on Friday, and the challenge match will be played on Saturday. This will make a total of eleven matches to be played in five days.

In addition to the Kingdon Gould-Waterbury match on Monday, C. S. Cutting, New York Racquet and Tennis Club, will play Charles E. Sands, his clubmate, and Daniel L. Hutchinson, Philadelphia Racquet Club, and Philip Stockton, Boston Tennis and Racquet Club, will engage in the third match.

In the second round Pierre Lorillard, Jr., Tuxedo Racquet and Tennis Club, is drawn against G. W. Wightman, Boston Athletic Association, and Fulton Cutting, New York Racquet and Tennis Club, will oppose C. T. Russell, Boston Tennis and Racquet Club. William H. T. Huhn, Philadelphia Racquet Club, drew a bye.

BROWN AND HOMMEY DRAW.

Slam-Bang Bout in Empire Athletic Club's Main Feature.

"Knockout" Brown and "Packey" Hommey furnished the excitement in the main ten-round bout at the Empire A. C. last night. Neither added much lustre to his reputation, and their furious mixup ended in a draw marked by willingness, rough work, and a mutual evasion of skill. Brown scaled at 133, and Hommey at 132½. They kept the referee as busy as themselves. Lots of blows were delivered, often being clean, but mainly the "guess at it" variety. The spectators were divided as to who deserved the decision, but the most distinctive difference was that of weight.

There were things doing when Young Brown and Benny Leonard got together for their ten-round session. Seldom has a better one been seen, so it is but fair to call it a draw. Leonard supplied the skill and footwork, Brown the tenacious bulldog tactics. He was everlastingly at it, so to speak, but marred his work by a tendency to holding and fighting in clinches.

Brown scaled at 136 pounds. Leonard weighed 131. It was the best bout of the evening.

Bert Fagin, who was to have boxed Johnny Wilson, was forbidden by the club physician to go on because of heart trouble. Jimmy Fry of Philadelphia was substituted. The boys scaled at 156 pounds. It was a slashing go up to the fourth round, when Fry landed several hard rights which took a lot of steam out of Wilson. Fry played almost entirely to land a right-hand knockout. They weathered along until the eighth, when Wilson made a great rally, evening up matters. The ninth was a standoff, and the tenth made it a fair draw.

BOXER DIES OF PNEUMONIA.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3.—John Eggers of New York, bantam-weight boxer, was exonerated in City Court here to-day by Judge Broyles of responsibility for the death of James Grant, who became unconscious at the end of a ten-round contest with Eggers Tuesday night, and who died to-day. Physicians testified that pneumonia caused the death of Grant.

Nine Clubs to Hold Boxing Bouts.

Nine local boxing clubs have scheduled shows for to-night. In New York the Fairmont, Sharkey, and Atlantic Gardens Clubs will offer good weekly bills; the Broadway Sporting, Irving, Dexter Park and Vanderbilt have booked good men for Brooklyn fight fans, and the Queensboro A. C. of Long Island City and the West Brighton A. C. of Staten Island complete the list. Manager Gibson of the Fairmont has matched Young Joe Fox of England at 122 pounds with Joe Wagner for the main event. In the semi-final of ten rounds Harry Condon will clash with Walter Hennessey. A six-round contest between Gene Gilvey and Joe Malone, and seven four-round bouts will complete the bill. Another Englishman, Tom Bridgford, will be seen in action at the West Brigaton Club, where he exchanges blows with George Fraser of Pittsburgh in the feature event. Three ten-round contests will make up the Irving A. C., with Young Brown and Johnny Martin as the feature. Pakey Kline and Willie Jones will be the headliners at the Broadway Sporting Club.

AMERICAN POLO PONIES AT LAKEWOOD

Larry Fitzpatrick Takes Mounts for International Match to Practice Grounds.

American polo players will be in active practice for the selection of a team to defend the International Challenge Cup at Lakewood, N. J., next week, providing the grounds are in fit condition. Fifty-one polo ponies in charge of Larry Fitzpatrick and a string of thirty grooms made the trip from Roslyn, L. I., to the practice field yesterday in a train of five cars and a coach. Instead of the old water and rail trip with its two tedious transfers, the train was run over the Pennsylvania road, direct from Roslyn to Red Bank, and then over the Jersey Central to Lakewood. A few polo lovers who knew of the movement of the ponies were at the station to get a glimpse of the ponies and a chat with the trainer. They got the latter, but not the former. Fitzpatrick, who knows polo ponies from the hoof up, was delighted with the lot and said they were as speedy and good looking a lot as he had ever trained. That was all, but it was enough to satisfy the enthusiasts.

Thirty-eight of the ponies belonged to the old "Big Four," six belonged to Malcolm Stevenson, four the property of Perry Beadleston, and three of C. C. Rumsey's string having been added to the lot which Mr. Fitzpatrick has been conditioning for some weeks. Being good lookers, snappy in action, and having been worked in the South during the Winter, they were welcome additions. The trip to Texas to find new material developed nothing worth while, so that there are no novices in the string.

Word was received in the city last evening that the ponies made the trip without accident, and that the grounds were fit for the players to go to work on at once if they wished to. The ponies will be allowed to rest until Monday, however, and the real business of the next two months will begin for them on that day, weather permitting.

Capt. Harry P. Whitney, Lawrence Waterbury, J. M. Waterbury, Devereaux Milburn, Malcolm Stevenson, Foxhall Keene, Perry Beadleston, C. C. Rumsey, Rene La Montagne, and Harry C. Phipps, with possibly a few other enthusiastic players who may try out the ponies and at the same time try themselves out for possible positions on the team. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 3.—King Alfonso of Spain, personally will select the team which will represent Spain at the international polo tournament in San Francisco next Spring for which the Panama-Pacific Exposition has appropriated $100,000.

Were it possible for the Monarch to overcome probable objections of his Cabinet based on the dangers of assassination, he would be a member of the team. This announcement was made by Colvin B. Brown, United States Commissioner for the Exposition, who has returned from abroad, where he was informed of the King's plans and desires by Alfonso himself.

COURT OF COMMON SENSE.

U. S. Commissioner Appoints Reporter Judge in $10 Dispute.

A special Court of Justice was convened yesterday in the Federal Building to pass upon the questions of law and fact involved in a dispute over the ownership of the $10 bill which United States Commissioner Clarence S. Houghton picked up in Broadway outside the Federal Building on April Fool's Day. While he admitted that his own claim to it was merely that of possession, he was not satisfied that Frank Ebbich, a fireman, of 131 Beacon Street, Jersey City, who asserted that it was his, had any right to it.

So the Commissioner summoned James Corrigan, dean of the reporters, who covers the Federal courts, and commissioned him as Judge of the Supreme Court of Common Sense for the occasion. Judge Corrigan gathered round him eight of his colleagues and proceeded to call for the testimony.

First Ebbich told how he had $5 of his own and his sister had given him $20 more on April 1 so that he might buy himself a suit of clothes. He had thrust the bills loose in his pocket and had come to Manhattan. As he was standing in front of the Woolworth Building, he had seen the Commissioner pick up a screw of paper from the street and put it in his pocket. Feeling in his own pockets he had found $10 missing, and he had then claimed the bill as his ten-dollar bill.

As he talked a crowd of Assistant District Attorneys, court stenographers, surety company agents, and elevator men gathered round to see Judge Corrigan preside.

"Was the back of the bill," asked his Honor, "green or yellow?" and a murmur of approval of his acumen ran round the throng.

"Yellow," promptly replied Ebbich, and the friends of the Commissioner looked blue.

"What did you do when you found you had lost $10?" asked the court.

"I went and bought a picture for $9," said the claimant.

One of the jurors whistled in surprise, and was called sharply to order. Then the Commissioner told his tale.

"I saw," he said, "on April Fool's Day at 2:10 in the afternoon a screw of paper being kicked about. This man was standing nearby, and I thought was about to call "April fool" at any one who picked the bill up. After I had got the bill I stepped toward him and he toward me, and not until I had seen it was genuine did he say it was his. I wish to state, though, I am in the hands of the court, and if it decides the bill belongs to this man he can have it."

The jurors took a lively part in the questioning, one even going so far as to allow a genuine $20 bill of his own to be used as an exhibit. In the end a ballot was taken, showing seven votes for handing the money to Ebbich and one for awarding it to the Commissioner, Judge Corrigan not voting.

"Justice has been vindicated," exclaimed Juror Tom Piper, with emotion.

"What is there to pay?" asked Ebbich, as the yellowback was handed him by the Court.

When he was told there was nothing, he asked the Commissioner to step out for a drink, but as none of the jurors heard him no one went with him.

ARGENTINA GRAIN COMING.

Chicagoans Said to Have Bought 200,000 Bushels of Corn There.

CHICAGO, April 3.—A report was going around in grain circles to-day that Argentine corn in large quantities soon would be put on the Chicago market. Elevator owners were said to have negotiated for 200,000 bushels of the South American maize, the shipment to start before April 15.

The shipment from Argentina would take an all-water route to Chicago, coming by way of the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes, in time for delivery on May contracts.

JOKE COST HIM HIS CASE.

Court Orders New Trial Because Lawyer Reflected on Jewish Race.

Remarks meant to be humorous made by a lawyer in summing up a case before a jury in the Fifth Avenue Municipal Court, in Brooklyn, on Dec. 14, caused the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court yesterday to reverse a judgment for $213 awarded to his client. A new trial was ordered.

Floyd Martin Sheffield, a lawyer, brought suit against Cohn, a former client, to recover for legal services. In summing up the plaintiff's attorney told a story reflecting on the Jews as a race. The Appellate Term in its decision, said:

"We think juries are not usually influenced by such methods unless their outraged sense of propriety inclines them against the perpetrator. Decency and ordinary courtesy should characterize a lawsuit. There is no reason why the defendant's character should be attacked. Neither a witness nor a party on the witness stand is subject to insult and base insinuations. Nor should any attacks upon any creed, race, or sect be permitted to counsel."

ASKS McCLAVE ACCOUNTING.

Trustee in Bankruptcy Objects to Large Salaries Paid by Lumber Co.

Supreme Court Justice Cohalan directed yesterday the McClave Lumber Company, which is now in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy, to give an accounting of the transactions of the concern. The application of A. S. Williams, the trustee, for the accounting, recites that Charlotte N. Williams, the widow of John Williams, had received a salary of $12,000 a year as Vice President of the company; that S. Wood McClave and John McClave received a salary of $5,200 a year each, and that their brother, Charles L. McClave, received $3,900 a year.

The liabilities are $71,015. In ordering an accounting Justice Cohalan criticised the payment of large salaries, irrespective of the earnings of the concern, and said that this was against the interests of the creditors.

ACQUIT PATROLMAN WALSH.

Jury Accepts His Story That He Shot Stevens in Self-Defense.

Patrolman Francis C. A. Walsh of the Elizabeth Street Station in Manhattan, who had been on trial for several days before Judge Nieman in the County Court in Brooklyn, on a charge of manslaughter in the first degree for killing of James Stevens, was acquitted last evening. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty after being out half an hour.

Stevens was shot and killed early on the morning of Dec. 14 in front of a saloon in Nostrand Avenue, near Hopkins Street. Walsh was off duty and was not in uniform at the time of the shooting. The policeman said that he shot in self defense. His story was that a stranger told him that a man was after him with a "gun."

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

Within a few days there will be a big shakeup in the staff of the Municipal Civil Service Commission. It has been decided to remove Frank A. Spencer, who has been secretary to the commission for many years. He will be transferred, it is said, to some other one of the city departments. Mr. Spencer is President of the National Assembly of Civil Service Commissions. There will be changes in other bureaus of the commission. A thorough reorganization of the department is in progress. President Meekowitz believes that much of the work is being done under inappropriate titles, and that some salaries are too high and others too low.

There were 927 competitors in the examination for patrolman which has just been closed. The applications numbered 3,580. Those who presented themselves for examination numbered 2,919. On the medical test 1,800 were rejected and 189 failed in the gymnasium tests. Thirteen stayed away from the mental examination. It is expected that the eligible list will contain about 825 names.

United States.

The duties will consist of making and assisting on surveys, preparing plans and reports upon drainage projects, collecting technical data, and conducting original investigations. The work will be principally outside of Washington, D. C., and ordinary traveling and subsistence expenses will be allowed the engineers when they are away from official or temporary headquarters. Promotion from lower to higher grades may be made from time to time according to the proved ability of the man and at the discretion of the department. Competitors will be examined in engineering and drainage questions, report, education, training, and experience. An educational training equivalent to that required for the bachelor's degree in engineering, science, or agriculture from a college or university of recognized standing is a prerequisite. The Home of Knickerbocker

The Beer That Satisfies

A Verified Statement Becomes the Polished Truth.

IN this advertisement we say:—"Finest Brewhouse on the face of the earth." We insert this because we know the statement is true, but all who may read it cannot feel nor grasp the vastness of its meaning without a personal investigation and verification of the object referred to—the Brewhouse itself. We invite the whole world to verify our statement.

Our chief object is to impress the truth upon the minds of the public through illustrations and words describing the home and place where KNICKERBOCKER BEER is made and by personally conducting any interested parties through the plant. The more the public knows about the purity of beer and the harmless materials which are used to make it the pure, healthful beverage that it is, greater will be the appreciation of those citizens who advocate temperate living.

Our product speaks for itself; the hundreds of thousands who drink it praise "The Beer That Satisfies;" and all who visit the home of Knickerbocker express their admiration.

During the past few months Architects and Engineers from different parts of the world have visited our plant and all pronounce it the acme of brewery sanitation and completeness. The Harvard Engineering Society of New York, after a personal investigation by their committee, pays the following compliment:—

Feb. 17th, 1914.

Jacob Ruppert's Brewery,
90th St. & 3rd Ave., New York.

Gentlemen:—

I am directed by the Society to express our sincere appreciation of your courtesies to us on the occasion of our visit with you on Saturday last.

May we also express our admiration at the completeness and efficiency of your plant and your manufacturing process.

Very truly yours,
ROGER C. BARNARD,
Chairman Committee of Meetings.

judging from the net earnings of the railroads, is the Southern section. These earnings indicate prosperity. We are offering a first mortgage five per cent. bond, to yield almost 6%, of a company which is located in one of the most prosperous States of the South, and supplies the community it serves with gas, electricity, and street railway service. This bond should increase in safety with the coming years.

Reaction in Stocks—Factors Contributing to Increasing Money Ease.

Both the diminished volume of trading and the decline in prices which occurred yesterday reflected the exhaustion for the time being of the optimistic impulses which for four successive days had carried the general level of prices upward. The average net gain in quotations during that time amounted to abcut seven-eighths of a point. Yesterday's reaction averaged about three-eighths of a point, but in some leading issues the net decline approximated a full point. Missouri Pacific, whose rise on reports of an impending change in control had contributed something to speculative enthusiasm earlier in the week, lost ground yesterday because of the abandonment of indefinite postponement of the proposed deal. Moreover, the hope of an early rate decision, which had also buoyed up the market, had not been reduced to sufficiently specific terms yesterday longer to serve the purpose of a market stimulant.

In addition to the passing of these influences, the announcement of the Federal Reserve Organization Committee's decision regarding the redistricting of the country for the purposes of the Federal reserve bank system served to revive discussion of the bearing of Governmental and more narrowly of political activities upon business questions. While it is recognized that it would be more or less impossible to satisfy entirely all sections of the country in such a division as the committee was called upon to make, it was felt that the limits imposed upon the New York district gave practical expression to the desire which was all along believed to exisit at Washington to limit the power of the New York bank as much as possible. The exclusion from this district of adjoining territory which through long business practice is tributary to New York City was cited in support of this view. It was argued, however, that trade and the banking operations connected with it would take their normal course, despite any effort arbitrarily to divert them to other channels, and this despite the inconvenience to which trade might be put because of an effort to change the established flow of banking transactions.

The naming of the Federal reserve districts served to arouse afresh discussion of the possibility of expansion under the new system and of the need of wise guidance by the Federal Reserve Board against the opportunity which may exist for inflationary extension of credit. It is hardly to be doubted that the impending establishment of this new system is contributing to the present great ease in money, and there are other similar factors which are conducive to the same end. Prominent among these is the reduction in reserve requirements allowed under the new banking law in this State, which is now before the Governor. In a situation of this kind it is particularly desirable, especially during the period of transition from higher to lower reserve requirements, to avoid abnormal stimulation of credit. This service may well be performed by the spirit of caution which now prevails. The present tendency in money rates may well be regarded as in part the effect of these banking changes, but it is also of course closely related to the condition of trade. Twelve months' money in considerable amount has been loaned at 4 per cent., and the pressure of funds upon the market is also seen in the low rates quoted for commercial paper. These are conditions which are favoring to increasing extent the chances of the forthcoming city bond sale. The new bonds were quoted yesterday as high as 101⅜.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

J. P. Morgan & Co. announced yesterday that subscriptions aggregating $700,000 had been received for the Greek war loan. Of this total $450,000 were put with the office in this city and $250,000 were received by the Paris branch.

It was announced erroneously in this column yesterday that Arthur L. Mohler had been elected a Director of the Harriman National Bank. The new Director is Adam L. Mohler, President of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

William C. Orton, formerly with De Haven & Townsend, has become associated with Gilbert Elliott & Co. as general manager.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Company of St. Louis has issued a pamphlet on the Federal Reserve act, illustrated with portraits of all the Secretaries of the Treasury.

The Protective Committee for the receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic Railroad Company, Georgia Terminal Company, and the Alabama Terminal Railroad Company has called for immediate deposit of the receivers' certificates with the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company under the plan of reorganization, which provides that each holder of a receivers' ticket for the face amount of $1,000 will receive on completion of the reorganization cash to the amount of $600, interest at 6 per cent. on the amount of the receivers' certificate from July 1, 1913, to date of cash payment, and first and general mortgage thirty-year 5 per cent. bonds of the reorganized company to the amount of $444.44.

N. W. Halsey & Co. and W. R. Compton Company have obtained several legal opinions that the $3,000,000 bonds to be issued by the Port of New Orleans constitute an obligation of the State of Louisiana.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Missouri Pacific Dream Ended.

The dream of a Missouri Pacific backed by untold Standard Oil millions was dispelled by denials issued yesterday by those on both sides of the reported negotiations. Those who had talked the loudest on the advance were the first to sell for a decline. Now that it has been said that efforts were made to effect a sale of the Gould family's holdings, either without the owners' authority or on terms not acceptable to the proposed buyers, persons who bought stock on the advance are wondering if the market was not manipulated by the same persons who opened the negotiations, which, if sucessful, would have meant a great deal to the Missouri Pacific. John D. Rockefeller has not been conspicuously successful with the Western Maryland, which he took over from the Goulds, but whether this was because of the change in management or because of greatly altered conditions which affected the road's earning power temporarily cannot be determined until the new President has had a year in which to fit the Western Maryland's operations to its new connection. An alliance of Rockefeller money with the Missouri Pacific system would remove any uncertainty as to the disposition of the $25,000,000 notes maturing in June, and to that extent at least would be a bull argument on the shares.

St. Paul Made Retrenchments Early

A. J. Earling of the St. Paul system, who returned to Chicago yesterday, said that his company did its retrenching early. The present working force is 15 per cent. under that of a year ago, but the reductions were made early in the present year, and unless there is a further shrinkage in business he does not expect to have to make further cuts. Mr. Earling said that more business was handled in March than for that month a year ago, but that merchandise shipments were very quiet. He says that the prospects for an improvement in business, which means the outlook for good crops, are favorable.

Market Overtired.

Brokers who commented on the stock market as they were leaving the floor yesterday seemed to think that traders had become tired of waiting, and that the market had dropped off in the face of several very improbable rumors which were circulated in the afternoon. Almost without exception the various issues gave ground under the late selling, and closed the day with losses. Missouri Pacific lost 1½ points; New York Central, still suffering from the bad effect of its February earnings, declined a half point further to 89⅞. The Rock Island issues established once more new low records. The preferred sold down to 5½; the common to 3¾, and the C., R. I. & P. collateral trust 4s, to 34¼.

Uncertainty Among Steel Men.

A steel trade journal said this week that the belief was growing throughout the industry that something more than an increase of railroad freight rates would be needed to make the mills run on full time. Steelmakers assert that buying by the roads will be larger if the carriers get more money to spend, but some of them, at least, are uncertain about the extent of the impetus general purchases are likely to receive from a favorable decision in freight rates. There are manufacturers who fear that a spurt may follow which will be short-lived and leave the industry where it was before.

Express Companies Retrenching.

"Economy and efficiency" are the watchwords now in the offices of the express companies. Notwithstanding severe retrenchments inaugurated when the parcel post went into operation, a closer supervision of expenditures has been evident since the transportation charges were reduced last February. Many men have been discharged, and the result has been, say express company officials, not only a saving of expense, but an improvement in the service. The men of the three big concerns have labored harder than ever before to increase earnings and thereby save their jobs. Because of this it is predicted that the February incomes of the companies will not make so poor a showing as was predicted when the lower rates went into effect.

Branch Banks a Factor.

In the midst of protests against some of the selections for reserve cities under the currency law, there were bankers yesterday who said that the time had not arrived for criticism. They thought the situation could not be sized up fairly uptil the number and location of the branch banks had been announced.

NEW HAVEN TO SELL A STEAMSHIP LINE

Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company to Pass to Baltimore Men.

WILL END VOTING TRUST

Reorganization Will Follow Transfers of Ownership — Price for the Line Not Yet Determined.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 3.—That the control of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company is to pass to Baltimore capitalists in the near future is now almost a certainty. The Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company of this city, which is controlled by the Jenkins Brothers, former owners of the Merchants and Miners, is about to close negotiations with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad for the purchase of the controlling stock in the steamship line.

This announcement puts at rest all rumors of deals reported to have been pending between the New Haven officials and Boston and New York banking syndicates.

The New Haven road holds 25,317 of a total of 50,000 shares of the Merchants and Miners' Company's stock. The voting trust formed at the time of the purchase of control of the line probably will be dissolved at once if the control of the line reverts to this city and the direct management be placed in the hands of the stockholders. An entire reorganization probably will follow immediately.

When it became known that the deal was about consummated the market value of the stock broke four points, to $30 a share.

Officers of the New Haven Railroad System admitted yesterday that negotiations for the sale of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company to the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company of Baltimore were under way, but they said that the price of the property and other details had not been settled. Chairman Howard Elliott of the New Haven, who visited the financial district yesterday, declined to discuss the matter.

The New Haven system has been expected to dispose of its "outside lines" as a part of the disintegration process on which it has entered. It has contended for the retention of the "Sound lines," and the settlement of this question has been left to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

UPHOLDS ERIE'S PASSES.

Judge Hough Says Road May Carry Agents for Foreign Companies Free.

Judge Hough refused yesterday to restrain the Erie Railroad from issuing passes to the agents of transatlantic lines and of the Great Eastern Railway Company of England, as the Government asked. In a complaint drawn by Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox these passes were held to violate the Interstate commerce law.

In his opinion Judge Hough asserted that it was admitted that the Erie Railroad could exchange passes with the New York Central. He could not see, he said, why it was a violation of the interstate commerce law for it to do the same thing with foreign carriers.

Then he considered the argument advanced by the Government, based on the fact that certain municipalities, such as Boston and New York, were common carriers in that they owned ferries, and the United States was also a common carrier in that it was reputed to own a railway in the Canal Zone and was about to construct and operate another in Alaska. The Government had argued that these facts passes might be issued to every official from the highest to the lowest of these municipalities and of the United States, if passes were granted to officials of the steamship companies and the English railway company, and that this would be to the great detriment of the public. Of this reasoning Judge Hough said:

"The jumping of such intellectual fences as these may be left until we come to them. To my mind the argument only shows how fallacious is the argument 'ab inconvenienti.'"

ST. AUGUSTINE'S LOSS.

Fire Cost $750,000—Clearing up the Ruins.

ST. AUGUSTINE, April 3.—A force of workmen to-day began clearing away two blocks of charred ruins left in the wake of yesterday's fire in the historic water-front section of St. Augustine. Plans have already been made for rebuilding the Florida, Munson, Clairmont, Central, and Atlantic Hotels, and the St. John's County Court House, which were destroyed. It was estimated to-day that property loss in the fire, which owners of the burned buildings said might reach $750,000, was one-third covered by insurance.

Physicians to-day said that Miss Alice M. Smith of Amherst, N. S., the only person previously believed to have been fatally injured during the fire, would recover. Miss Smith, a guest at the Florida House, was hurt in jumping.

A company of militia, which had been stationed about the devastated section to aid in restoring order and to prevent lootings, was replaced to-day by a small squad of policemen.

20 ILLICIT DISTILLERIES.

From Fermented Sugar and Raisins "Schnaps" Is Made Here.

There are in the cellars of tenement houses on the lower east side, according to what Lazarus Hannis, one of the men arrested on Tuesday by the Internal Revenue officers, told Assistant United States District Attorney Stanton yesterday, about twenty illicit distilleries. There, from fermented sugar and raisins, are turned out compounds sold as "Yiddish groceries" and "schnaaps."

Hannis is now in the Tombs, through his failure to get $15,000 bail, and the examination of Max Siegel, who was arrested with him, has been set by Commissioner Houghton for April 7. Siegel is held in $5,000, and Elias Albert and Bernard Becker, other two prisoners arrested at the same time, have been released on their own recognisances.

BARS MAGAZINE FROM MAIL.

Mrs. Sanger Is Notified to Take Away Copies of 'The Woman Rebel.'

Notice was served yesterday on Mrs. Margaret H. Sanger of 34 Post Avenue by the Post Office authorities that her publication, "The Woman Rebel," had been found "unmailable," and that a bundle of the magazines which were littering up the Washington Bridge Station would be turned over to her if she would drop in and ask for them. The decision had been reached, Mrs. Sanger was informed, after consulting Section 211 of the Criminal Code as amended by the act of March 4, 1911. Deputy Attorney General W. H. Lamar ruled that the magazine, a monthly publication, also violated Section 480 of the postal laws.

It wasn't the fact that Mrs. Sanger called upon the women to rise and demand emancipation which worried the postal authorities. The Post Office objected to certain other matter in the magazine. Mrs. Sanger, for one thing, expressed the belief that there were altogether too many children in this world and advocated race control. She promised other articles on the subject.

Mrs. Sanger is a member of the I. W. W., and figured prominently in stories of the strike at Lawrence, Mass., when many of the children of the strikers were brought to this city and given homes. She also testified in the investigation in Washington into the strike conditions. About a year ago she attempted to publish a book entitled "What Every Girl Should Know," and had a clash with the authorities at that time. She is writing another book which she calls "What Every Mother Should Know." She said yesterday that she considered Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, feminist, a conservative and a reactionary, who had lost courage by obtaining too much publicity.

RESTRAINS WABASH DEAL.

Court Holds Company Must Reimburse Objecting Stockholder.

Supreme Court Justice Donnelly filed a decision yesterday restraining the Wabash Railroad Company from exchanging any more debenture mortgage bonds of the Wabash for new issues of preferred stock, common stock, and refunding bonds. Justice Donnelly directed also that the railroad should pay to James Pollitz, the plaintiff in the injunction suit, the $21,000 which he invested in the Wabash stock, with interest from the date of the investment in 1906.

Mr. Pollitz began his suit in 1908, naming the Wabash, the Equitable Trust Company, and others as defendants. A new issue of securities was authorized in July 1906, the issue to consist of $200,000,000 worth of fifty-year 4 per cent. gold refunding bonds, $16,500,000 worth of preferred stock, and $81,500,000 worth of common stock. It was planned to exchange $30,000,000 worth of debenture mortgage bonds for these new issues.

"I have found," said Justice Donnelly, "as matters of fact that although the act complained of was technically illegal the Directors in initiating, authorizing, and consummating the plan of exchange were acting in good faith and with reasonable care and diligence; and that the company sustained no pecuniary loss by said plan of exchange except so far as it is liable to compel the Directors to account to it for the benefit of such stockholders as do not acquiesce in such plan of exchange. The plan being adjudicated illegal and ultra vires the corporation, and there being no ratification for an illegal or ultra vires act possible, the plaintiff as well as other stockholders have a right to refuse to be bound by it, and are entitled to be relieved of its operation to the extent of their holdings notwithstanding that the corporation sustained no pecuniary loss."

CITY HAS STEINWAY TUBE.

Now a Part of Dual Subway System to be Put In Shape.

After disputes, which have lasted for years, the Steinway Tunnel was taken over by the city yesterday morning. The deeds, transferring it from the Trustees of the old New York & Long Island Railroad Company, were executed formally, Mayor Mitchel affixing his signature for the city. The tunnel is now a part of the dual subway system, being accepted by the city as the equivalent of a contribution of $3,000,000 to the cost of the subway on the part of the Interborough, although it took about $8,000,000 to construct the tube under the East River in its present shape.

The Board of Estimate also approved of the contract, for which the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company, the Interborough's subsidiary, was the lowest bidder for putting the tunnel in shape for temporary operation. There is an understanding that the Interborough shall reimburse the city for anything paid to the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company, which would reduce its expenditure on equipment, and that the form of contract shall not be taken as a precedent. It is hoped that cars will be running through the tunnel in a few months.

WALL ST. FIRMS DISSOLVE.

Two New Concerns to be Organized by Former Partners.

Pomroy Bros. and Thomas Denny & Co., two of the oldest Stock Exchange firms, have announced that they will dissolve on or before May 1. The Stock Exchange house of Taylor, Auchincloss & Joost, formed two years ago, has been dissolved by mutual consent. From the membership of the three firms, two new ones will be formed to be known as Denny, Pomroy & Co. and Auchincloss & Joost.

The house of Denny, Pomroy & Co. will be composed of Thomas Denny, Henry K. Pomroy, formerly President of the Stock Exchange; H. Arthur Pomroy, Charles M. Newcomb and Henry F. Taylor, who was previously with Taylor, Auchincloss & Joost. The partners in Auchincloss & Joost will be James C. Auchincloss, B. Joost, Robert S. Crocker and F. L. Tiers. Mr. Crocker has purchased the Stock Exchange seat owned by the late William Laimbeer. The price was $50,000, unchanged from the last previous sale.

EASTMAN'S BIG YEAR.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 3.—The report of the Directors of the Eastman Kodak Company, made public to-day, showed that the company and its allied interests earned net profits of $14,162,435 in 1913. It is a highly satisfactory showing, in view of the legal and governmental troubles the company has faced during the last few years. This report will be formally presented to the annual meeting of shareholders in Jersey City on Tuesday next.

A total of $4,981,873 was carried to the surplus for the past year. Liberal amounts were charged for depreciation and contingencies. Four quarterly dividends of 1¼ per cent. were paid on the preferred stock, four quarterly dividends of 2½ per cent. and extra dividends of 30 per cent. on the common stock.

The total surplus on Dec. 31, 1913, was $22,488,306, as compared with $17,507,433 in 1912.

The Directors say no final adjustment has been made of the Government proceedings against the company, but that the company stands ready to meet the requirements of the Federal authorities.

Lewis Nixon Wins Appeal.

Lewis Nixon won his appeal yesterday in the Appellate Division from a Supreme Court order which had thrown out of court his suit to recover 5,000 shares of the Standard Motor Construction Company, held by the Carnegie Trust Company. Mr. Nixon, before going to Europe in 1909, loaned the stock, he said, to C. D. Sexton. On his return, he asserted, he learned that the company had taken the stock as part of the collateral for a $66,000 loan to Charles W. Chapman.

Realty Company Solvent Again.

A satisfactory settlement having been reached with the Otis Elevator Company and other creditors, Judge Hough discharged yesterday in the Federal District Court J. Clarence Davies, the receiver appointed on Nov. 24 in insolvency proceedings brought against the West Eighty-second Street Realty Company. The company will now recover control of apartment house properties worth $2,515,000, in which its equity is $955,000.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday.....3¼@4% for the best names
Thursday.....3¼@4% " " " "
The quotation is for six months' paper.

Cord and Seal on Samples.

The Treasury Department, at the request of New York importers and designers, has extended the cord and seal method of indentifying goods so as to include samples. The amended regulations issued some time ago, doing away with the labeling and slashing of model gowns, failed to make any reference to samples. This omission was brought to the attention of the Treasury officials, who now have instructed customs officers at the different ports to use the cord and seal on samples of all kinds as a means of identification. As a result, there will be no more slashing or branding of samples.

Gray Goods Quiet, but Firm.

Steadiness and quiet were the main features of the local gray goods market yesterday. There was a fair demand for sheetings and drills in evidence, and some nice business was put through on cheap sateens. Printcloths were not very active, though some good-sized lots of 38½ inch 64-60s were sold at 5¼ cents. On the strength of the present sold-up condition of these goods some of the Eastern mills are demanding 5 3-16 cents. Buyers took some odd lots of 39-inch 68-72s in the course of the day, these goods remaining firm on the basis of 5¾ cents, while a similar condition prevailed on 39-inch 72-76s at 6⅝ cents. The Eastern mills were especially firm at this figure.

Afraid of American Exporters.

A textile merchant who recently returned from abroad said yesterday that European manufacturers and exporters are making great merchandising plans to offset the advantages that American exporters will derive from the opening of the Panama Canal. The eyes of the leading commercial countries of Europe, especially Germany and England, are focused, he said, on the tremendous field offered in South America. The gain in American exports to that part of the world last year has been the cause of much anxiety on the part of the English and Germans, and, realizing the opportunity the canal will offer for the expansion of American business on the west coast, the Europeans are working hard to head off this increase and conserve their markets.

Orders in Cloaks and Suits.

Conditions in the cloak and suit industry are described as good. The demand is confined for the most part to taffetas and moires. Orders for immediate delivery are numerous, and manufacturers express little hope of being able to supply at such short notice the merchandise that is desired for Easter. Because of the wide diversity of styles offered, retailers are picking out numbers only here and there, and manufacturers, although they complain this means big manufacturing costs, with little profit, see no relief in sight. In the higher-priced merchandise this is especially true, and it is recognized that some change will have to be made or matters will become serious. As it is now, a large amount of this grade of goods is being cut singly, and the business has become more or less that of ladies' tailoring, with manufacturing costs.

Knit Underwear Conditions.

As an indication of business conditions with the knit underwear manufacturers, the local selling agent of a number of mills shows as a result of an aggressive campaign a 15 per cent. increase in advance sales for the coming Fall. Thus, his sales in New York State increased 30 per cent.; those in the Middle West, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, 15 per cent., Missouri making the best showing with 21 per cent.; in the South 10 per cent., and in parts of the Pacific Coast States, the increase has been as high as 26 per cent., but sales in the entire territory have been somewhat less than last year. In the Southwest and Mountain States, such as Colorado, the same number of orders as last year have been booked. The amount of merchandise required by the Dakotas, Wisconsin, and Minnesota will be one-third more. New England shows an increase of 16 per cent. This concern figures its cancellations from experience in the past at 1-10 of 1 per cent.

Want to Use Preservatives.

It is understood that a movement will shortly be started in the tea trade to get the Government to permit the use of preservatives for unfermented tea, on the ground that it would better meet the needs of the American consumer. Paraffin is the chief agent suggested for this purpose, it having already been used successfully to keep the flavor and aroma in the unfermented leaves over a considerable period of time. Only three ounces of paraffin are used to a picul of 133 pounds of tea, and as each pound of tea will make from 300 to 400 cups, if properly brewed, it is argued that the amount of paraffin per cup must necessarily be very small. It is said that this is by no means so dangerous a practice as selling tea in packages lined with lead, which was stopped in France some time ago. It is also claimed that there is no real objection to the use of soapstone for polishing tea, as it is used only in minute quantities and is used without objection on tea going to foreign markets.

New Sales Scheme Popular.

Several months' trial of a new selling scheme for department stores has proved so popular in the store in which it was tried out that plans are being laid to make it a definite feature of the store's selling organization. The scheme was inaugurated in the first place on the contention that the heaviest buying is done between 11 A. M. and 5 P. M., and that, because the luncheon periods of the store's employes extend from 11 A. M. to 3 P. M., this heavy buying came at a time when approximately one-third of the whole selling force was at lunch. To avoid a loss of business several of the best salesmen were told to come to work at 10:30 in the morning and to work straight through until 5 o'clock without luncheon. These men were paid full salaries for these hours and, though the work was hard and fast while they were on duty, they were able to get along without their luncheon by virtue of late breakfasts and early dinners. The sales made by these men were large, and their short hours made them much envied by the other employes. In several stores the scheme of having certain salesmen work only half a day at half a day's wages has been in practice for some time, but, so far as learned, only one store here has been trying the scheme outlined.

Imports Are Decreasing.

Imports of general merchandise, including dry goods, at New York in the week ended March 28 were valued at $19,020,173, compared with $21,482,632 in the week before. Included in these imports are $675,323 worth of jewelry, precious stones and watches, while imports of leather, hides, &c., were valued at $1,641,330. Similar leather imports the week previous were set down at $2,803,716. There were also entered 1,113 bales of cotton valued at $121,602, as compared with entries of 1,851 bales worth $179,574 the week before. Imports of cocoa totaled $777,883, as against $809,612 worth the week before. There were entered coffee valued at $1,146,086, or nearly double the imports of the week previous, when they were $746,414. Gunny cloth imports for the week were $446,908, while the week before they were only $65,225. Imports for the week of India rubber, waste, manufactures and substitutes aggregated $1,960,619, against $1,061,003 the week previous. Sugar imports were valued at $1,237,634, compared with $2,412,565 the week before. Wool imports reached $336,108, compared with $254,899 the week before. Imports of dry goods totaled $2,254,731, and of these silk fabrics were appraised at $422,339. Dry goods imports the week before reached $3,158,296, while the silk goods were appraised at $908,227. Withdrawals of dry goods of all kinds from bonded warehouses last week were $754,737, and those entered for warehouse aggregated $573,803.

DRY GOODS OUTLOOK.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"A fair increase is shown in the total sales by our traveling representatives as compared with the corresponding week a year ago.

"Dry goods distribution has again had the support of late Easter buying which it did not have during the same week last Spring. Improvement is evident in that orders this week have been about equally divided between immediate and future business.

"As retail stocks in general are conservatively low, current demand is encouraging production in staple lines, and certain classes of novelties are wanted in excess of manufacturing capacity.

"Favorable crop and seeding conditions are having some influence in strengthening the confidence of buyers in contracting for merchandise for future delivery."

VIEWS OF PERFUMERS.

Their Association Favors the Bill to Protect Designs.

At the final day's session of the annual convention of the Manufacturing Perfumers' Association at the Whitehall Club yesterday, the Oldfield bill introduced into Congress, which has for its aim the adequate protection of designs and trademarks, was formally indorsed. It was set forth in the report brought in by the Committee on Resolutions that the bill represents constructive legislation for the protection of industrial property, such as this country has long stood in need of. Besides encouraging competition of the keenest kind, it is anticipated that if the bill becomes law, it will stimulate designing and manufacturing here, and protect the public purchasing high-grade products.

The convention referred to the Executive Board the proposal to cooperate as far as possible with the National Design Registration League of Philadelphia, for the better protection of trade-marked packages, bottles, and other commercial packages. The proposition will be taken up shortly by the board. It was decided to authorize the President of the association to issue monthly bulletins to the members and to the trade outlining the activities of the Executive Board, from month to month.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, A. M. Spiehler, New York; First Vice President, S. S. West, Cleveland; Second Vice President, F. F. Ingram, Detroit; Treasurer, A. B. Callaher, New York, and Secretary, F. N. Carpenter, New York. F. K. Woodworth and W. A. Bradley were elected members of the Executive Board to fill vacancies, while Frank B. March and James E. Davis were re-elected. It was announced that George Hall, President of the United Perfume Company, Boston, has been made a Chevalier du Merite Agricole, by the French Government as reward for his work in the development of the French perfumery industry.

The convention came to a close last night with a banquet at the Hotel Biltmore, William A. Bradley, the retiring President of the association, acted as toastmaster. The speakers included Elbert Hubbard, Charles R. Lamb, and the Rev. W. Warren Gilles.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES

Further information may be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, D. C., and at the branch office, 315 Custom House, by giving the number of the items referred to.

12,831. CYCLE CARS AND SMALL AUTOMOBILES.—An automobile dealer would like to hear from Am. mfrs. who are ready to export cycle cars or small automobiles which retail at not more than $450, as he believes they can be sold in that market.

12,832. MOTOR CYCLES, TIRES, AND ACCESSORIES.—A request comes from the West Indies for catalogues of motor cycles, motor-cycle tires, and accessories. It is imperative that the catalogues contain lowest export prices.

12,833. DITCH-CUTTING MACHINERY.—The manager of a company would be glad to hear from Am. mfrs. of steam ditch-cutting machinery; portable steam engines with large revolving disks with cutters on the periphery, cutting to any desired depth.

12,834. MOVING-PICTURE FILM SERVICE.—The owner of a moving-picture theatre in East Africa would like to correspond in French with Am. concerns that are able to furnish him with a film service. Other concerns in the same region might be interested in a similar exchange service.

12,835. COTTON GOODS.—A foreign business house in constant touch with large East Indian export houses which buy enormous quantities of cotton goods would like to get in touch with Am. mfrs., who are willing to prepare cotton goods to meet the requirements of that market. The goods especially wanted are lines of cheap handkerchiefs, calicos, printed goods, and underwear, all in the cheapest lines.

12,836. MACHINERY FOR MAKING OLIVE OIL.—From a Mediterranean country come several inquiries for machinery for making olive oil. Catalogues with prices of olive crushers, presses, filters, and allied equipment are wanted.

12,837. MACHINERY FOR CLEANING CURRANTS.—It is stated that certain improved machines which wash and dry currants are used by importing and commission houses in the U. S. A current exporter in a Mediterranean country desires information regarding such equipment.

12,838. DREDGERS.—Tenders are invited for seven dredgers in Russia, three for Bug, Luga, and Schartz Rivers, one for Dnieper Bug Canal, one single dredger and barge for removal of shallows in rivers, and two suction dredges for Oka and Northern Donetz Rivers. Tenders will be received through local agents only.

12,839. RAILWAY MATERIAL AND SUPPLIES.—The Consul at Lourenco Marques, Portuguese E. Africa, has forwarded a copy of a call for tenders on 3,600 tons of rails, 10,200 pairs of points, 41,000 bolts for points, 73,400 metal sleepers with fixtures, &c. Tenders will be opened May 18.

12,840. IRON PIPE FOR WATER MAINS AND SEWERS.—Considerable quantities of iron pipe for water mains and sewers will be required by a British municipality during the next few years. Having to unsatisfactory results from steel piping previously used, it is almost certain that cast-iron pipes will be specified. Tenders will be asked for simultaneously in the local municipality and in London.

12,841. LOCOMOTIVES AND ROLLING STOCK.—Supplementing a previous report published on March 21, a Consul has forwarded specifications covering the supplies referred to. It will be impossible for Am. firms to accept present orders, but the company will in the near future be in the market for further supplies.

12,842. BARREL STAVES.—About 55,000 staves are used in a Mediterranean district each year in the manufacture of barrels for currants and figs. The staves are made from a variety of beechwood which is very strong and tough. They come ready for use (size: 31½ inches long, 3⅝ to 4 inches wide, and ⅝ inch thick) and are seldom fashioned by the local coopers who manufacture barrels in a rough way. Staves range in price from $19.30 to $21 per thousand, cost, insurance, and freight city of destination.

12,843. HANDCUFFS.—A local business house which furnishes supplies to the English Government would like to communicate with Am. mfrs. of adjustable handcuffs, suitable for large or small wrists, made of plain polished steel chain links, not in a solid piece. The locking apparatus must be such that it cannot be reached by the prisoner. A first order of about 3,000 handcuffs will be given if a suitable article can be obtained.

12,844. PRESSED BUTTONS.—Wholesale dealers in a country say there is a good opening for the sale of Am.-made pressed buttons and desire to receive quotations on such to be used for ladies' dresses, gloves, caps, belts, uniforms, and leather goods.

12,845. RAW MATERIAL FOR MAKING BRUSHES.—A business man in Great Britain has furnished a Consulate with samples of a product used in the making of rough brushes, which the inquirer thinks is probably of tropical origin. He would like to obtain a similar product from the U. S. to be used for the same purpose. Broom corn is not used for brush making in the United Kingdom and would not be considered.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

$200,000 Lease by U. S. Rubber Company on Duane and Thomas Streets—Old Fifth Avenue Residence Leased—Bronx and Brooklyn Deals—Bayshore Home for C. W. Morse.

One of the most important transactions in the downtown section just north of Chambers Street, which has occurred in some time, was closed yesterday in the leasing on a long term by the United States Rubber Company of the six mercantile buildings at 137, 139, and 141 Duane Street and 60, 62, and 64 Thomas Street. The buildings at 62 and 64 Thomas Street and 137 and 139 Duane Street are abutting structures, the total depth being 175.6 feet. The Duane Street frontage is 74.9, and that on Thomas Street about the same.

The buildings have been leased from the Bates Brothers Real Estate Company of Providence, R. I. The building at 60 Thomas Street is now occupied by the Rubber Company as a warehouse. The lessees, it is understood, contemplate spending about $30,000 in alterations, and will make the six buildings their downtown warehouse centre. The deal is an important one for the old shoe, leather, and rubber district, and virtually assures the stability of the wholesale rubber trade in that locality for a long time.

The aggregate value of the lease is about $200,000. The deal was closed through the office of Daniel Birdsall & Co.

TELLS OF BEING ROBBED.

Real Estate Man Found Bound in His Office and Money Gone.

Peter Neff, managing clerk of the law offices of Bergman & Davis, Third Avenue and 162d Street, the Bronx, heard the groans of a man in an office across the hallway yesterday afternoon. Finding the door of the opposite office locked he got a chair and was able to see over the transom. Neff was startled when he saw the owner of the office, Leon Rains, a real estate dealer, 47 years old, lying on the floor, his mouth gagged with a white piece of cloth and his arms and legs bound tightly. Neff opened the door with his own key and soon released the real estate man, who staggered heavily against Neff as though he was unable to support himself.

The law clerk summoned other persons in the building, and one of them sent in a call for the police and an ambulance. Acting Capt. Gallagher and Detectives White and Quick of the Morrisania Police Station arrived at Rains's office almost simultaneously with Dr. Frank Feldt with a Lebanon Hospital ambulance. The surgeon examined Rains, but could find nothing wrong with him except the marks left by the linen with which he was bound. Rains, however, moaned and complained of his head, and the ambulance surgeon gave him restoratives.

Soon Rains appeared to be sufficiently composed to tell the police that a little before 2 o'clock a tall, well-dressed man had entered his office and inquired if Rains sold paint. Rains said the visitor suddenly clasped a handkerchief to his nose as another man walked into the office. From then his memory was a blank. When he finished his story the real estate man pointed excitedly toward one of the drawers in his office.

"My God," he exclaimed, "is the money safe? There was $1,000 there that I got during the week, collecting rents for my clients."

The drawer was opened but the money was missing. The police, however, found that Rains's solid gold watch and a diamond studded fob were undisturbed. They said they were informed by one of the tenants of the building that Rains was seen returning from a nearby bank about 1:30 o'clock. Dr. Feldt found no symptoms indicating that the man had been drugged.

GIRL OF 15 RUNS AWAY.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 3.—Miss Ruth Naylor, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Naylor of Lee Place, left the Stillman Public School at recess yesterday and, according to the police and the parents of the girl, went away on the noon train. On the same train was Thomas Coppenhaven, 22 years old, a former resident here, but late of Sunbury, Penn. Mr. Naylor appeared at Police Headquarters today and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Coppenhaven on a charge of violating the Mann White Slave act.

According to the parents, their daughter met Coppenhaven last Summer when he lived here and she became infatuated with him. Despite their protests, she corresponded with him after he went to Sunbury to work for the Pennsylvania Railroad. Coppenhaven returned last Saturday and that night had supper at the Naylor home. He remained in the city until yesterday, the parents say, when, by appointment, he met the girl and left for New York.

Coppenhaven is known to have a brother at Elmira, N. Y., and it is thought that the couple may have gone there. Mrs. Naylor is prostrated over the affair. She says that Coppenhaven had a strange influence over her daughter.

BOY CAUSED MOTOR DEATH.

Started Brewery Truck That Ran Over Little Edward Ezenach.

The police of Bedford Avenue Station, Williamsburg, learned yesterday that a boy about 16 years old was responsible for the death of Edward Ezenach, 6 years old, of 181 Wythe Avenue, who was killed Thursday night by a motor truck of the S. Liebman Sons' Brewing Company in front of 74 North Fifth Street.

It was believed that the motor vehicle had started accidentally. Bernard Lang, the chauffeur, was arrested on a charge of homicide. Yesterday the police learned that a boy was seen climbing upon the outside of the vehicle. After starting the engine going he had quickly jumped off. The little boy was directly in front of the truck. Detectives were last night searching for the boy.

Vanderbilt University Board Wins.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 3.—The petition of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for a re-hearing of the Vanderbilt University case was denied by the Tennessee Supreme Court yesterday. The court upheld the decision rendered recently in which it was held that the Vanderbilt Board of Trust was self-perpetuating. Andrew Carnegie's gift of $1,000,000 to the university, rejected by the Bishops, will go to the institution under the decision.

Jerusalem School Exhibition.

The Bezalel School of Handicrafts of Jerusalem, which recently held an exhibition in London, opened one yesterday at Clinton Hall, 151 Clinton Street, which will continue to April 10. Prof. Boris Schatz, who is in charge, said the school was established eight years ago in Jerusalem to revive ancient Jewish arts and handicrafts and in making arrangements for exhibitions in leading Western cities with the object of establishing an international market for its products.

ASSESSOR A SUICIDE WHILE UNDER FIRE

WORRIED OVER LOANS, TOO

Had Borrowed Money in Arlington, N. J.—Chose Kearny Meadows as Place to Die.

Adolph Amann, President of the Arlington (N. J.) Board of Trade and a member of the Kearny Board of Assessors, committed suicide early yesterday morning by shooting himself in the right temple on the lonely stretches of the Belleville Turnpike where it crosses the Kearny Meadows. The place is almost three miles away from his home, at 123 Stuyvesant Avenue, Arlington, and his friends and the police are speculating on his reasons for going to this lonely spot to end his life. By his side was found a new revolver.

The body was discovered by Abraham D. Marx, a real estate agent of 238 Washington Street, Newark, who was on his way home in his auto with a party of friends. Marx notified the police. Deputy County Physician Henry Allers, after an examination, decided than Amann had committed suicide. It was learned later that Amann before ending his life had penned a note to his wife. Mrs. Amann last night refused to make public its contents. She would only say it was a communication between husband and wife. Both the police and the Deputy County Physician said they had not heard of any note.

Amann's friends attributed his suicide chiefly to financial troubles. It was said that he had borrowed money from his friends in large and small sums and that he had been greatly worried because he was not able to pay back these loans. Frank Koch of Arlington, his lawyer, said yesterday that Amann when he was able never failed to make loans to embarrassed friends, and that after he had borrowed from them in turn it had worried him greatly because he was unable to pay them.

"One of Amann's biggest creditors," Mr. Koch said, "told me he would not have cared greatly if Adolph had never paid him back, and others from whom he borrowed said the same thing."

His friends said that Amann's real troubles began last Fall in the political campaign. At that time the Kearny Board of Assessors, of which he was a member, was bitterly assailed. W. W. McCarroll, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, was one of those who severely criticised the board. It was asserted then that property worth almost half a million dollars had been overlooked on the assessment rolls. Amann, who was in the real estate and insurance business, had often asserted that these criticisms of the board had hurt his business standing in the community.

More recently Amann had been worrying over charges that the local Board of Assessors had made unfair assessments on property in Arlington. The Board of Assessors of Hudson County, following these charges, ordered a reassessment of all the property in the town to ascertain its real value. This work was being done, and the new findings of the assessors were to have been made public in a few days. His friends asserted that Amann felt that the charges reflected on him, and this had worried him.

Amann was 55 years old. He leaves a widow and two small children. He had an office at 155 Midland Avenue, Arlington. He had lived in Arlington for the last seventeen years. He was a Justice of the Peace and had been a member of the Kearny Board of Assessors for the last six years, and had served as Secretary and as Clerk of the board. He was considered to have a well-paying business. He acted as agent for many large realty holders in Kearny and Arlington. He lived modestly, was temperate in his habits, and his friends are at a loss to understand what he did with his money.

EARL DIVORCE APPEALED.

Attorney for Mrs. Earl Denounces Her Former Husband.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, April 3.—Denouncing Binney Woodward Earl, member of a wealthy family of Burlington, as "a villainous, semi-imbecile and maniac husband," Theodore Backes of this city, counsel for Mrs. Irma Leigh Earl, filed to-day a brief in the Court of Errors against the brief of the young man's counsel, Gaskill & Gaskill of Camden, seeking to have set aside the decree of divorce granted the wife.

The young couple eloped in 1909. For several months they lived in Burlington with the bride's mother, and then removed to Edgewater Park, where Earl's mother built them a handsome home. They separated in October, 1911, and Mrs. Earl sued for divorce, charging her husband with having broken his marriage vows.

Earl filed a cross petition, charging his wife with infidelity, and naming Mark Whitfield, their cook, as co-respondent. The Court of Chancery found Mrs. Earl guiltless, and decided that she had proved her case. She got the divorce and Earl appealed. It was decided to present the case to the higher court on briefs, and these were filed to-day.
